Now that the man who conceived the idea of a wartime coalition of political parties is about to leave the political arena, what is likely to be the fate of the present administration? The situation is without a parallel. Is the Union party to pass away with the leader who created it? Is Sir Robert Borden's successor to be chosen at a caucus of Unionists or at a general convention of the party? If the latter course is adopted, in that convention are old line Conservatives alone to be admitted as delegates?

It is clear that at the next general Federal election the tariff is again to be the main issue. How can a coalition party made up of men holding opposite views on this question be expected to work in harmony? How can a free trader from the West co-operate with a protectionist from Ontario? The opportunity to reorganize the Conservative party on the old basis is at hand, and to choose a leader who will represent the principles of that party. There can be no further compromise.

Sir Thomas White announces most emphatically that he will not be a candidate for the Premiership. That is the country's misfortune, as Sir Thomas is the one man who could most effectively re-establish the Conservative party. His ability as a financier is of the highest order, and during the trying days of the war he made a reputation that was world wide. Ever since he took office in 1911 until he retired a short time ago, Sir Thomas was one of the strongest men in the Cabinet.

THE VACCINATION PROBLEM.

TORONTO FINDS ITSELF in the throes of a smallpox epidemic which shows no signs of abatement, and the city is torn up by the problem of compulsory vaccination, with a strong element bitterly opposed to anything of the kind. The matter really rests with the City Council, but the members of that body, with the election in sight, apparently hesitate from no other motive than a fear of antagonising a section of the voters by doing what the health officers urge them to undertake.

There is a foreign population in Toronto that is largely responsible for the present situation. These aliens, who escape from the serfdom of Europe, are not satisfied with the freedom that they find in Canada, but demand the limit of license. It is these strangers within the city's gates who object to a measure designed as much for their own safety as that of the native born, rather more so, in fact, because it is in the cramped quarters inhabited by these malecontents that an epidemic exacts its heaviest toll.

The members of the medical profession are agreed as to the efficacy of vaccination in preventing the spread of smallpox. Even if that disease of late years does not show a heavy percentage of fatalities, it is a loathsome affliction that separates the victim from his family from the time of its discovery until a cure is effected. It is a menace to the public, and every unvaccinated person is a link in the chain of danger. There should be sufficient public spirit among the people to assure co-operation in stamping out the disease.

Peterborough cannot hope to escape a heavier visitation from this scourge than that which it already has endured, and the City Council cannot claim that it has not had ample warning. The Health Officer has explained the law and clearly outlined the duties of the aldermen. A proclamation calling for general vaccination should be warranted under the statute by the discovery of a single case of smallpox, and the warrant for such action has already been given. Health Officer McPherson has taken another long step in the interests of public safety by providing for the free vaccination of those who care to avail themselves of the opportunity. The question of expense cannot furnish anyone with an excuse for not taking precaution against the scourge. No one can truthfully say that vaccination is a medical fad or that it is enforced with any idea of making work and remuneration for the profession.

To be vaccinated and endure the workings of the virus upon the system is not a pleasant experience. Still, it is at the most a slight inconvenience when compared with the one it is intended to avert. If a man were assured that he could save himself from a fatal disease by simply swallowing a nauseous drug few would hesitate to render themselves immune. Why, then, balk at a comparatively simple preventative of one of the most dread diseases that has ever afflicted humanity?

NAVAL HOLIDAY SUGGESTED.

THE IDEA of a navel holiday for the world is again revived in England, the proposition being that for the space of five years the nations of the earth take no further steps in the construction of war vessels. At the end of that time the agreement could be renewed or terminated as the contracting parties decided.

The suggestion is by no means new. It was the late unfortunate, weak but well-intentioned Czar of Russia who first proposed that the powers scrap their navies, disband their large standing armies, and devote themselves to the promotion of peaceful industries. Nothing came of this plan but The Hague Convention, that drew up a new international code for the conduct of future conflicts, a code every article of which was violated in the late war. The word of rulers and kings has lost the respect that belonged to it by tradition. The world has lost all faith in the value of treaties between nations.

In 1913, when the rivalry in naval construction between England and Germany was at its height, Winston Churchill, then First Lord of the Admiralty, proposed a cessation of this work, but Germany, with its heart set on war, refused to entertain the idea. The mad competition for supremacy on the seas was kept up, and, fortunately for the safety of civilization, England held the lead.

The supremacy of the British fleet is now established beyond all question. With Germany despoiled of her naval armament, the only possible rivals that England has to fear are Japan and the United States. The Germans will be prevented from restoring the might of their navy, if the League of Nations has not been organized in vain. The Americans are a nation of peace. Agitation for an increase of the strength of the navy is revived at intervals in the United States as part, apparently, of a political progam, but the people of that country are yet far removed from military madness. They would easily be induced to become a party to the same agreement that is now proposed in England, and Japan, as a member of the League of Nations, would be left with no alternative but to enter such a compact. England's position as mistress of the seas, a power that the British have never abused, would in no sense be compromised.

After all these horrible four years of war, with the fruits of victory ripe for the gathering, those fruits being the hope and promise that this was to be the last of international strife, why should the peoples of the civilized world be taxed to death for the upkeep of naval and land forces? And why, in Canada, should there be even a suggestion by those in authority of a compulsory system of military training? The entire energies of the world should be devoted with all diligence for years to come to repairing the waste of war and producing that which will make this earth a better place in which to live, rather than to be exhausted by preparations for future conflict. Make unpreparedness general by mutual agreement and the danger of war will be averted.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

THEY DON'T.

(Buffalo Express.)

The head of the hog-buying department of one of the five big packers says that his company expects to be able to get hogs at $12 a hundred-weight in the Middle West this winter. A promise for a proportionate reduction in the retail cost is in order from the head of that department. Or perhaps they don't know each oher.

PRECEPT AND PRACTICE.

(Toronto Star.)

If we desire to Christianize those of the foreign element who are not already of that faith we should show our own Christianity by our own conduct. There is not much use in teaching Christian doctrine to people who are treated with unkindness or suspicion by nominal Christians. They will naturally contrast the preaching with the practice, greatly to the prejudice of the preaching.

A COMPLIMENT IN ITS USE.

(Guelph Mercury.)

Dewart claims that the Farmers' party borrowed the Liberal platform and rode to victory. Then it's a good thing it's going to be put to some use. The only thing a policy is good for is to use it; otherwise it will get too rusty to be used at all. Since Drury prefers that to the Tory platform, why, let him use it. There's a compliment in adopting it.

THE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT OF TODAY

In the Christmas period a score of philanthropic institutions appeal for support. Their plea is that they are seeking to serve the poor, the unfortunate or the helpless. Confidently, the advertisements and the circulars set forth the needs of each cause, and ask for a practical demonstration of the Christmas spirit. The call is never in vain. The mail is full of cheques, and the institution is surrounded by an atmosphere of sympathy and good wishes.

The Canadian people are great! Any man, however high his aspirations, however brilliant his endowments, may well be proud of this British brotherhood north of the Great Lakes. The folk may be hard headed and thrifty, but they are responsive to the call of duty. The grace of sentiment is common, but rarely does it run into maudlin sentimentality. Canadians laugh at the American millionaire who was approached for a subscription to the Hospital for Sick Children. The solicitor painted the suffering of the little ones so vividly, that the rich man's tears dripped upon his swelling waistcoat. Finally, he rang a bell, and his secretary entered. The millionaire spoke: "Mr. Jones take this gentleman out of the office. He is breaking my heart?"

Canadians have no use for the kind of sentimentality displayed by the Kaiser when he said that his heart bled for Louvain. They prefer to see words and actions more nearly in accord.

For that reason, the will to help others which is fairly common at Christmas time translates itself into money contributions. The hospitals, orphanages, and Santa Claus funds prosper.

No one objects to the Christmas spirit. It is recognised as a considerable improvement upon the competitive spirit which rules men at other times. It prevents the crust of business from getting too hard. What a different world we would see if that Christmas spirit ruled the hearts of men for the whole year! Five great churches in Canada declare that such an ideal is by no means visionary. The Christmas spirit is merely another name for active practical Christianity, the subordination of selfish interests to the general interest of the community, the cultivation of the art of giving as a happy substitute for the art of getting. Such a spirit diffused through the body of the Canadian people would end class quarrels, reconcile Capital and Labor, and give Canada a new start on the road to economic and intellectual greatness. We had it manifesting itself constantly during four years of war. Why not cultivate it in peace time?

Mainly About People

A remarkably interesting personality recently passed away in the United States in Capt. Seth Bullock. He was a life long and very intimate friend of the late Ex-President Roosevelt and there are many tales extant illustrating the happy intimacy between those two strong characters.

Capt. Seth Bullock was from the West their manhood by their grit, strength, quickness and character. In 1876 Seth Bullock accompanied the first gold prospectors from Montana into the Black Hills. His record in Montana was such that he was made the first federal peace officer of the Black Hills and afterwards became Marshal and Sheriff of the Deadwood district. In 1905 he was appointed Marshal of South Dakota by Colonel Roosevelt, who was then President of the United States. This appointment was all the more remarkable, in that he was a Canadian, born and bred in Windsor, Ont.

During the Republican and Progressive Conventions held in 1912, Colonel Roosevelt was a very busy man, and his official suite was always packed with enthusiastic followers. In the midst of a very busy day, Seth Bullock called, and in these words addressed one of the Colonel's staff. "Tell Colonel Roosevelt, Seth Bullock's here." This man was familiar enough with Captain Bullock's name as to feel warranted in disturbing Colonel Roosevelt, who was in conference with his campaign manager, and to deliver the message. With a shout the Colonel jumped to his feet and with the enthusism of a boy cried out, "Seth Bullock's here!" For the moment the cares of the campaign fell from Mr. Roosevelt's shoulders as he and Seth Bullock renewed their youth in reminiscences of cow-punching days along the little Missouri River.

In speaking of the trip which he made with ex-President Roosevelt and John Burroughs to the Yellowstone National Park, Mr. Bullock laughingl remarked that either would chase a snowbird clear from the Yellowstone to the Arctic Circle if the interests of science could be served.

"When Colonel Roosevelt came out at Egypt, from his African hunting trip," said Seth Bullock, "he wired me to join him in London; the Colonel said he wanted some fellow over there that could help him laugh, and I was elected. Upon my arrival, seeing the Colonel was overworked by his engagements, I decided to give him some form of relaxation, so I walked him over the Thames River Bridge. The river at the time was at exteremely low tide, and knowing that the Thames is to an Englishman what the Mississippi or Hudson is to an American, I waited until a particularly haughty-looking Englishman with a carefully adjusted monocle approached, and without an inkling to the Colonel of what I intended to do, asked if he could tell me the name of the creek. 'That, my good fellow is our River Thames,' served its purpose and kept the Colonel chuckling for the remainder of the day."

Seth Bullock also told the following incident which happened at Windsor Palace immediately following the death of King Edward VII, at which Theodore Roosevelt was present, as "chief mourner for the United States"; "The German Kaiser was present, and as they were leaving the Kaiser called to him and said: 'Colonel Roosevelt, I wish to see you before I leave London. If you will come tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock, I can give you forty-five minutes.' And Mr. Roosevelt replied. 'That is very gracious of your Majesty. I will be there at two, but, unfortunately, I can spare only half an hour.'"

PRODUCTION OF MILK.

Editor Review: When famine ravaged throughout Egypt it was economy that saved the Egyptians from starvation. Times have changed since those days. Even in those days economy was a subject of study, and even since progressive minds have preached of economy in every field of service, proving that in no department of life can the science of conservation be ignored. The lesson of economy applies more closely to farming than any other department of life. The farmer to be successful must study the crops best adapted for his soil and grow them. He must observe the weather conditions and take advantage of them. He must study the foods which can be fed most profitable to his stock and feed them.

We must admit that the average farmer is not making any too much profit out of his milk at 9 cents a quart and that he is producing pork at a loss at $15.00 per cwt., but the question is, is he producing as cheap as it is within his reach and at the same time raise the quality of his product. Let Mr. Farmer stop and think for a moment that all feed contains three elements—protein, fat, carbo hydrates. Protein is the most valuable food, constituent supplying growth, muscle, bone and lean meat, and, by it, the value of all feeds are measured. The fat supplies heat and energy and builds up fat in the body, but makes no muscle or flesh. The carbo hydrates are the starches and sugars present in all feeds. In order that all food become digestible the protein value of the food must stand at a ratio of 1 lb. of protein to 5 lbs. of fat and carbo hydrates. For example, mixed grains in equal parts: Oats contain 9.2 protein, 4.2 fat, 47.3 carbo hydrates; wheat contain 10.3 protein, 1.7 fat, 69.3 carbo hydrates; barley contain 8.7 protein, 1.6 fat, 65.9 carbo hydrates. Average in lbs. per cwt., 9.4 protein, 2.5 fat, 60.7 carbo hydrates. This gives a ratio of 1 to 7, showing a shortage of at least 3.5 lbs. of protein, which is the most important constituent.

Now the question is how can this be remedied? The only answer is by balancing the ration by feed of high protein value. For the dairy cow we would suggest cottonseed meal in sufficient quantities to bring your feed to a 1 to 5 ratio if fed along with ensilage or mangels. Of course, no one feeds turnips to the dairy cow. Everybody is too anxious for gilt-edged dairy products for that. If feeding dry feed, a ratio of 1 lb. of oil cake meal to 2 lbs. cottonseed meal is better in balancing the ration. For hogs, oil cake meal or takage. Never feed cottonseed meal to hogs, for it is of too constipating a nature.

The agressive farmer, as well as any other aggressive man in any other calling, will be constantly looking for results and they will throw their energies on that only which gives the best. The first cost will be secondary. As one poultry man said to me some time ago to get results in the poultry business you must first have the strain and the condition, then the proper feed. The same thing applies to all lines of production.

You will pardon me just for making one personal reference in my 19 years' experiece as a cheese-maker. In order to get a gilt-edged product and to get the most out of the milk, I had to use the very best furnishings that I could obtain, no matter what the cost was. I also had to exercise the utmost care in keeping the surroundings in a sanitary condition and the handling of the product through the different stages to its finish. Also I had to see that Mr. Farmer put up the goods in the raw material. Some times this was the hardest task. Sometimes he wanted to be boss of the situation. In the other things I was master and my own boss, but after all, with the general co-operation of all concerned, I succeeded in establishing a record so far as the product and results are concerned that I am proud of.

I simply make this personal reference to show that we all must concentrate our energy to get the best out of any calling in life.

Thank you, I remain

Yours, etc.,
W. H. MERRILL.

WHAT HIT CLOTHING TRADE?

May Be Order of Board of Commerce Which Has Taken Effect

Have the unclothed poor been waiting for the sun to rise on this 15th day of December, so that they may enter the clothing parlors of the city and emerge wearing a suit of raiment made possible by the beneficent order of the Commerce Board? Evening alone will tell.

It is now that the order of the Board of Commerce comes into effect fixing the profit to be allowed on every suit of clothes. The order was agreed to by the Clothiers Association, so that they may be counted upon to carry it into effect. Under the order there will be a saving to the public, or that part of it which buys suits valued at less than $25, of about fifteen per cent. On a $20 suit there would be a saving of $3 from Saturday's prices. On suits above $25 the profit is also fixed, though there the customer may feel it in a lessened or in an increased price.

No Average of Prices.

The new order prevents an averaging of prices. As the invoice is, so the clothier must calculate his sale price. If he has some old goods that he got in at a good price, and some new goods that are worth their weight in American bills, he must calculate the price of each lot separately, and must not lump them together.

Clothiers don't know whether the customers have been holding off or not, but they know that ever since the order of the board business has been desperately dull. All but three of the big retail dealers have been driven into holding "sales" in order to keep business moving.

A New Experience.

Whether this is the effect of the order of the board, or whether it is to be attributed to the Victory Loan, which came along with its thrift campaign at the same time, they don't know. Business is generally poor in the tailoring line a week before Christmas, but for it to be poor three weeks before Christmas is a new phenomenon. By the end of the week the tailors will be able to determine whether it is the order of the board which has slowed things up, or whether there is really a thrift spirit at work that would rather hear phonographs than wear clothes.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

No man ever flatters the woman he loves.

MATTERS THAT INTEREST WOMEN

(Camelia in Toronto Telegram)

About three weeks ago a "Bachelor" asked on this page what Toronto women were going to do about the high price of food. He immediately reminded them that a few years ago, when they rose in protest and held a sale of turkeys, etc., the price was brought down.

It looks as if too many women were too busy still celebrating peace to do anything drastic about high prices this fall.

They are still swarming St. Lawrence Market, and paying anything they are asked. We have reminded them over and over again that each time a woman carelessly pays anything she is asked, the press quotes this price all over the country, and a new high standard is established.

One Toronto woman who had always got her turkeys at a reduced price is buying directly from a farmer's wife, is the latest one to bewail this habit.

"I asked my farmer's wife what turkey prices were likely to be," said she, "and she wrote back and said they were quoted at 60 cents a pound in Toronto papers, and she wouldn't take a cent less!"

"There's nothing for it but a turkey strike," says another woman. "I'm going to have a good sirloin of old England with my Christmas pudding."

Are You Doing Your Share?

This is the first Christmas which practically all the men from overseas will be at home. Toronto now has several thousand of those men who returned here to enter military hospitals. It is to be hoped that Toronto's preparations for the gayest Christmas in history will not mean that less is to be done for these men than when they were in overseas hospitals. Mrs. Van Koughnet, head of the Soldiers' Comforts Department who has so nobly carried on for the past five Yuletide celebrations, at 71 King west for men in the D. S. R. hospitals. The Red Cross are also making elaborate preparations. They are giving the Dominion Orthopaedic, the Base, St. Andrew's and Pearson Hall a Christmas dinner on Dec. 23, of turkey, plum pudding, mincemeat, candy, raisins, nuts and other seasonable dainties. This work is undertaken by the Toronto branch of the Canadian Red Cross Society which will also provide Yuletide decorations, music, Christmas stockings and personal gifts for the men and personnel.

On Christmas day most of the boys will be fortunate enough to have a holiday at home or with friends. For those unable to leave the hospital a shower will be given. Mrs. Dunstan telephone Hill, 862, is in charge of this special treat, which, it is hoped, will be as successful as that held for Thanksgiving Day.

Extravagant Modes

"What is going to be the result of all our growing extravagance?" I can tell you one thing it is doing said a well-known Toronto woman at a tea the other day, "it is making of our young men come to the conclusion that they cannot marry. At least the kind who have too much respect for themselves to solve the high cost of living by marrying a girl for her money are in a bad way.

"Things are particularly bad for our boys who have been at the front from the first. They have five of the best years out of their lives and feel that it will take at least five more to put them on their feet.

"No wonder they feel like a youth I know, whose mother found him the day after a dance looking unusually thoughtful.

"'What's the matter?' she asked. Oh, said he, 'I've just made up my mind that I never can get married. I was sitting with a partner last night and she pointed out girl after girl and said: 'Do you see the material in that dress? It was just $30 a yard?"

Fancy Dress Balls For Charity

Bazaars still seem to be feminine Toronto's favorite method of extracting money for their favorite charities. But down in New York the fancy dress ball is once more flourishing. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, who has planned the latest one for suffering Europe is organizing a Blue Bird Ball. Maeterlinck, who is to be in New York for the premiere of the opera, which has been made from his fancy play, will be the guest of honor. Costumes representing the various characters in his drama are to be worn by the guests and special dances are being arranged.

Many Toronto folk still remember with delight the Victorian Ball in the Armories and last night's private fancy dress ball at Jenkin's Galleries showed what zest artistic Toronto can enter into such festivities. From the "Chu Chin Chow" costume of the hostess and the superb mandarin of her husband to the Titian-haired "doll" of a well-known matron, who appeared in a short pink frock, socks and slippers the costumes were most effective.

Housemaids' Wages

Loudly applauded was the president of the Women's Canadian Club when on Monday Mrs. Garvin read the letter upholding more salary for teachers' which the club's executive had sent to the new Minister of Education.

Figures just compiled in the United States will do much to awaken the public there. For it has been shown that housemaids of ordinary ability receive more than twice as much as the avearge salary of teachers throughout the country!

MARINE SUPERSTITIONS

SOME STRANGE BELIEFS HELD BY SAILORS.

All Through the Ages, Sea-faring Men Have Had Many Signs of Good and Bad Luck — Nothing Will Alter Their Dread of Ill Omens, Which Exert a Strong Influence Upon All Their Actions.

MARINERS of all nationalities cherish very much the same superstitions. Their joys and fears are the same in all waters and have found similar expression from Nova Scotia to China. It has been pointed out that since the days of the Phoenicians, the greatest of sailors in ancient times, seamen have ever been a "temperamental lot," whose belief in omens and signs has been more or less incomprehensible to the landsman.

The ancient mariners held the wildest superstitions, but their belief in the existence of enchanted spots, such as the siren island of Calypso or of those islands that Sinbad likened to the Gardens of Paradise, was much more picturesque and romantic than the superstitions of the modern seaman.

The latter is filled with foreboding by the sight of a hatch cover upside down or by the falling overboard of a swabbucket. He stands aghast at the accidental tearing of a flag, and he is certain that if sails be sewed or mended on the quarterdeck ill luck will ensue. Events are always viewed by him in the light of what has gone before. Everything that is inconvenient or vexatious he ascribes to some malign influence.

The sailor is a firm believer in the efficacy of odd numbers, as naval salutes testify—minute-guns excepted. Women at sea, to say nothing of preachers, he regards with disfavor, and certain officers will bear a bad reputation for the weather they bring. Certain days, the seaman is convinced, are unlucky. One old chronicler puts the number of days upon which it is undesirable to put to sea at fifty-three, but the number has been considerably reduced since his time. Among these days were the anniversaries of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah and the suicide of Judas.

The fact that Columbus began his first voyage on a Friday and that he discovered land on the fifth day of the week have no weight with the sailor—the day remains unlucky.

Everybody is familiar with the old superstitions of sailors that, to bring a favorable breeze, they must whistle during the calm.

From the remotest times there seems to have prevailed a belief that libation or sacrifice would placate the storm spirits and induce them to permit the vessel to proceed unmolested on its course. Russian sailors have been known to pour oatmeal and water over a rocky promontory in order to obtain a wind favorable to their designs.

French sailors believe that certain of their shipmates are able to control the winds by virtue of a ring worn on the fourth finger of the right hand. This power, however, carries with it distinct disadvantages, since if the possessor remains ashore for more than three days, or if any single voyage of his extends beyond a period of three months, his life is forfeit.

A broom is thought to exert considerable influence upon the wind. There is a Dutch tradition that, if wind-bound, a vessel is passed by another craft and a broom is thrown in the latter's course the luck of the first vessel will change. It has been pointed out that in this relation the broom which Van Tromp lashed to his mast as a symbol of his power to sweep the seas of the British possessed a very different significance in the eyes of his men. They probably regarded it as capable of bringing winds favorable to their admiral's design to get at Charles II's ships.

A star-dogged moon was thought to portend a storm; while if the moon rose in a storm she would soon "eat up the clouds." Many an anxious mariner found comfort in this belief.

The ghostly lights at St. Elmo, which appear at the masthead or in the rigging immediately preceding a storm, date back to the voyage of the Argonauts. If these marine will-o'-the-wisps remain stationary or ascend, Dana tells us, they are good omens, but if they descend then foul weather will surely follow. How they came by the name of "St. Elmo's Lights" is not known, although conjecture has it that St. Elmo was St. Erasmus, who in early art is always shown as carrying a candle.

Among the very curious superstitions of modern sailors may be mentioned the following:

Captain, cook or cabin boy considers it unlucky to ship with a man who has neglected pay his laundry bill. A sailor, nearing port after a lengthy voyage, will gather up old clothes and shoes unfit for further use and ceremoniously commit them to the sea, in order to insure himself luck on his next voyage.

Sailors like to ship on a craft that displays a shark's tail firmly nailed to the bowsprint or jibboom.

Jack Tar places great faith in the merits of a pig as a weather prophet.

During very rough weather it is difficult to convince any old-timer that there is not a Jonah on board. Many captains of the old school, who ought to know better, are so superstitious in this regard that it is not uncommon for them to evince an intense dislike for officers who have happened apparently to be the harbingers of bad weather, especially fog. It is quite usual on board ship to find members of the crew nicknamed "Foggy Jones," "Heavy Weather Bill" or "Squally Jack."

Cats on board ship are held to be lucky, and many a stray feline finds a comfortable home and careful attention with Jack for its friend, although, on the other hand, our domestic friend has at times been held responsible for the continuance of very bad weather and forced to accept the role of Jonah to the fullest extent.

One of the most curious of the superstitions of the sea is that pertaining to the capture of a shark. The natural dread and antipathy with which these monsters of the deep are viewed cause a capture to be hailed with much rejoicing. All hands, from the captain down to the cabin boy, take a keen interest in the proceedings, and, having successfully landed the shark on deck—an operation involving no little excitement — it is killed and its tail cut off. This trophy is then nailed either on the end of the bowsprit or the jibboom and is considered an infallible charm, capable of bringing the craft the fairest of winds and weather. It is not uncommon to observe sailing ships lying in port with this peculiar emblem of the sailor's superstition, but the custom is fast dying out, since, in the case of steamers, a shark capture at sea is a very rare occurrence.

Another remarkable and weird superstition is that pertaining to the albatross. These huge birds, measuring from fourteen to eighteen feet tip to tip of their wings, are to be seen only in the stormy regions of the capes of Good Hope and Horn and the surrounding latitudes. The peculiar belief of old sailors credits these birds with possessing the souls of ancient mariners, who, for their sins, must have been doomed to roam these stormy seas for all eternity.

During calm weather these birds are easily captured by a contrivance of the sailors' own invention. This being baited, attaches itself to the hook bill of the albatross when the bird attempts to swallow the bait; and the creature is then hauled on board. Few captains will permit crews to kill these birds, since they hold out the killing is certain to entail disaster to the ship.

The killing of a pig at sea is always an occasion of great moment, not only for the reason that fresh meat is to be enjoyed—a great luxury on a sailing vessel after perhaps months of salt provisions—but also because what is termed a "pig breeze," or favorable wind, may be regarded as a certainty. Pigs when kept on sailing ships are allowed very frequently to leave their pens, and their movements on such occasions, which are held to foretell the wind to be expected, are watched with the keenest interest. Should a pig evince any signs of laziness, lying down or wandering aimlessly about the decks, then this is a sign that calm weather will come, with little or no wind in prospect. Should, however, the pig show a frisky mood, with much squealing, then it is a sure sign of "big winds," a very necessary factor in the navigation of a sailing ship.

Of the many superstitions and legends having to do with phantom ships, none is more widely told than that of the "Flying Dutchman," or phantom ship of Vanderdecken. How the legend orginated no one knows, but it has been ascertained that there was a seaman of repute who many years ago sailed from Holland to the east via the Cape of Good Hope, but was never heard of again.

Of the women concerned in 37 divorce cases in St. Louis, only three were blondes.

A ray of hope is capable of penetrating the darkest despair.

The Works of Peace

There remains to us a great duty of defense and preservation; and there is open to us also a noble pursuit, to which the spirit of the times strongly invites us. Let us advance the arts of peace and the works of peace. Let us develop the resources of our land, call forth its powers, build up its institutions, promote all its great interests, and see whether we, also, in our day and generation, may not perform something worthy to be remembered. —Daniel Webster.

Foolish to Trust to Luck.

It's no use tackling big propositions blindly. Dumb luck may bring you out on the right side. It may also bring you out on the short side. And if it does you are bound for defeat. Blind good fortune has brought men through trials, but they are not stronger for it. It's the man who sees the trials and marshals his forces so as to bring every ounce of energy into control that wins honors on the up-grades.—Exchange.

Still Searching for Atlantis.

Phoenician tradition ascribed to the people of Atlantis a high civilization. During the last few years scientific expeditions, in pursuit of natural history "specimens," have made explorations of the sea bottom in that region. How interesting it would be if their dragnets brought up from the depths some ancient relics from drowned towns of the lost continent.

Eleven boys, 16 to 18 years old, were indicted at Chicago for robbery with revolvers.

Slang Among the Ancients.

An ancient use of a modern slang idiom was mentioned recently by T. E. Peet, the lecturer in Egyptology at Manchester university. He said that the Egyptians always used the verb "to do" in referring to a visit to a country, just as an American today speaks of "doing" Paris or London. After this it will not surprise us to learn that Hannibal considered his expeditions as nothing more than "stunts" or that the Roman populace was rather annoyed when Julius Caesar was "done in."—Manchester Guardian.

"Amen Corner."

The phrase "amen corner," is said to have originated in London, where, at the end of Paternoster row, the monks at one time finished their recitation of the "Pater Noster" as they went in procession on Corpus Christi day to St. Paul's cathedral. They began in Paternoster room with the Lord's prayer in Latin, continuing it to the end of the street, and then said "amen" at the corner of the row. As used in this country the phrase describes the corner of a church where the elderly members sit and pronounce the word "amen" at intervals.

Mankind's Debt to Reading.

"Have you ever rightly considered what the mere ability to read means?" once asked James Russell Lowell, and elaborated his own question: "That it is the key which admits us to the whole world of thought and fancy and imagination? to the company of saint and sage, of the wisest and the wittiest at their wisest and wittiest moment? That it enables us to see with the keenest eyes, hear with the finest ears, and listen to the sweetest voices of all time? More than that it annihilates time and space for us."

The Six Senses.

In a primary school examination, a question about the senses was answered by a bright pupil in this fashion: "The five senses are sneezing, sobbing, crying, yawning and coughing. By a sixth sense is meant an extra one which some folks have. This is snoring."—Boston Transcript.

Hadn't Thought of That.

A man, unable to choose a wife from three girls whom he admired, sent duplicate letters of proposal to all, intending to marry the one who assented first. The trouble that he did not foresee was that the two too-late ones would sue for breach of promise.

Needs Brains First of All.

"In our complex civilization one scarcely knows what ethical principles to follow," says a writer. One might set forth reasonably confident in the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Her Other Boarder.

Tillie Clinger says that in asking for accommodations at a strange place yesterday she inquired if there were any other boarders. "No," replied the landlady, "unless it's my husband, and he can quit any time he wants to."—Seattle Post-Intelligencer.

GERALD DUNSFORD IS DEMANDING HIS MONEY

THREATEN ACTION IF $175 OF HIS FINE IS NOT RETURNED

A letter was read from Peck, Kerr & McElderry, at the Council meeting last night in which they threaten to take further proceedings if the $175 of Gerald Dunford's fine be not returned to him within one week.

Some time ago Dunford was fined $200 by the City Magistrate for drinking liquor in an unlawful place. The matter was taken before the provincial authorities and all but $25 of the fine was ordered to be returned. This the city has failed to do and now the solicitors of the connected party are urging that the $175 be returned without further delay.

The Mayor stated that he felt sorry to see this money returned to Dunsford, but he saw no way out of it. The matter was left with City Solicitor Widdifield to take up with Peck, Kerr & McElderry.

PLANS WILL BE READY BY FRIDAY

CITY WILL COMPLY WITH ORDER IN REGARD TO DISPOSAL PLANT

It was announced at the meeting of the Board of Works last night that the plans for the City Sewage Disposal Plant will be prepared and ready for inspection on the required date. The townships require the plans complete on the nineteenth of this month, the day on which they must be presented to the Railway and Municipal Board. The plans will be completed on Wednesday and the City Engineer and Chairman of the Board of Works will go to Toronto on Friday to have them sanctioned by the Board.

Ald. Edgar suggested that the plans be submitted to the Provincial Board of Health on Thursday and make the one trip do. The City Engineer pointed out that it would be impossible to have the specifications ready by that time as their preparation is one that will occupy a considerable time.

The matter of the finish of the bridge was brought up but on a motion of Ald. Turner and Morrison it was left over for the decision of next year's committee. It was thought that that would not cause any undue delay and the aldermen of next year might be agreed on the matter.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH MAY BE LOST AT SEA

YACHT OF FAMOUS MOTION PICTURE PRODUCER, REPORTED MISSING

Miami, Fla., Dec. 16.—No information was received today from David Wark Griffith, motion picture producer, and a party of thirty-six persons who left here early Wednesday on board the Yacht Grey Duck, also known as the Rosandra, for Nassau, Bahama Islands and have not since been heard from.

The search started yesterday for the Grey Duck was continued today, but with one exception no reports were received concerning the yacht, which should have reached Nassau late Wednesday. The single report came from S. G. Poppas, master of the Maysie A., a gasolene boat plying between Miami and Nassau, and was that members of the Maysie A's crew had seen the Grey Duck at a distance of two and a half miles aground off Berry Islands.

BANKER'S WIFE IS MURDERED AT HOME

MYSTERY SURROUNDS TRAGEDY AT MEDICINE HAT— NO MONEY TAKEN

Calgary, Dec. 16.—Mystery surrounds the death at Medicine Hat of Mrs. W. D. Hawke, wife of the accountant of the Bank of Commerce, who died from the effects of revolver shot fired by some unknown person Friday afternoon.

Burglary was at first attributed, but from hints dropped by the Medicine Hat police there is something more mysterious. Mrs. Hawke was in the house alone Friday afternoon. She had been sick for some time. The postman found her lying shot through the leg and breast. She died in the hospital that evening. The Coroner's jury returned an open verdict of murder by the hands of unknown persons. No arrests have been made.

The woman was a well-known Medicine Hat lady, and had been married but six months. There was no money to speak of in the house. The police will not state their suspicions in the case, but sensations may develop within the next few days.

COBALT BUSINESS MEN WANT T.&N.O. KEPT

Cobalt, Dec. 16.—The Council of the local Board of Trade has forwarded a protest to Premier E. C. Drury regarding the proposal advanced at New Liskeard last week that the Dominion Government be asked to take over the T. & N. O. Railway.

In the letter to the Premier it is stated that the Board of Trade regards the railway as one of the greatest assets of the Province, and it is suggested that Hon. Mr. Drury might issue a public statement covering the question. The board feels it necessary to do something to offset the press campaign which is now going on in down-country newspapers, and thinks that if the road should lose its present identity it would no longer serve the purpose for which it was conducted.

The idea was sponsored at New Liskeard by H. W. Cruickshanks, on behalf of the U.F.O. of that district.

ST. THOMAS TRAINS ARE RE-ESTABLISHED

St. Thomas, Dec 16.—With coal shipments rapidly getting back to normal conditions and the holiday passenger traffic already in full swing, the different railway divisions in this city are re-establishing the trains that were cancelled during the strike. On the local divisions of both the Pere Marquette and the Michigan Central all the trains are now in operation, and several on the M.C.R. are running in two sections to accommodate the great rush of travellers. The exodus to the southern resorts is exceptionally heavy this week. No word has been received by the local officials of the G. T. R. regarding the resumption of the trains cut off two weeks ago.

HAMILTON COUNCIL HAS SUBSTANTIAL SURPLUS

Hamilton, Dec. 16.—It has been announced that the city council this year will close with a surplus of $109,261. One reason is that the collection of taxes has been nearly $70,000 more than the estimates. It is feared, however, that in spite of the surplus and the fact that the assessment will be raised next year there will not be a reduction in the tax rate, since previous councils had left an overdraft of some $300,000. The surplus will be used to clear up part of that debt.

BEST INVESTMENT GILBERT EVER MADE

TANLAC RESTORED DARTMOUTH MAN TO HEALTH TWO YEARS AGO—STILL FEELS FINE.

"Yes, sir, I can recommend Tanlac for it set me right two years ago, while I was living in Hamilton, Ontario, and I have been in good shape ever since," said Jeffrey Gilbert while in Kinley's Drug Store in Halifax, recently. Mr. Gilbert resides at 35 Ochterloney Street, Dartmouth, and is employed as boiler maker at the Halifax shipyards.

"Never in all my life," he continued, "have I had a medicine to do me so much good as Tanlac. My stomach had been giving me trouble for sometime. It just seemed like I could not eat anything but what would give me indigestion the worst kind. I would bloat all up with sour gas and feel miserable for hours after every meal. There was a feeling like a lump of lead in the pit of my stomach. I would almost double up with cramping pains and could hardly draw a deep breath. My appetite was so poor that I never relished anything to eat and I just suffered constantly with that indigestion. I was continually losing weight, felt weak and sluggish all the time and had no energy.

"I had tried all kinds of medicines, but kept getting worse, and after Tanlac came to Hamilton and so many people there got to praising it I bought a bottle and I declare that was the best investment I ever made in my life. Before I had finished the first bottle I felt a considerable improvement. Then I bought another, and another, and when I had finished my fourth bottle my stomach was in fine condition and I have not been troubled with indigestion since that time. The gas and pain all disappeared and I am still eating just anything I want without the least trouble from it. It was not only my own experience with Tanlac that convinced me it is a wonderful medicine, but I personally know many others who took it with just as fine results as I did. You can't beat it and if I should get to where I need medicine again I wouldn't think of anything else.

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

Wheat Always Preferred Food.

While more people are living in the world today dependent upon rice than upon wheat for subsistence and a greater number of the human family live upon millet than any other cereal food, wheat is the preferred food among the higher civilized peoples. The more progressive peoples of the earth have ever been wheat eaters. Grains of wheat have been discovered in Egyptian tombs of the first dynasty, dating back 4,000 B. C., while bread of wheat has been excavated from the ruins of the prehistoric lake dwellers of Wagner and Robenhausen in Switzerland.

His Mind in the Clouds.

Rev. George Harvest was to have been married to the daughter of Bishop Compton of London, but on the morning fixed for the ceremony forgot all about it and went off fishing. Much indignation was felt by the bride and her friends, and the engagement was broken off. But the reverend gentleman's second engagement was equally unsuccessful. Once more he forgot to come up to the church and lost his expectant bride in consequence.

Another "Origin of Dixie."

Before the Civil war the old Citizens' bank of New Orleans, having the power to issue paper money, provided quantities of bills, most of ten-dollar denomination, having the French word "Dix" on their backs. This money became popular, according to this theory, Louisiana was referred to as the land of the "Dixies." Eventually the term was broadened to include all of the southern states.

High Price Paid for Beefsteak.

The highest price ever paid for beefsteak was probably at Circle City, Alaska, a town that sprang up over night during the Klondike gold excitement. The first beefsteak to reach there sold for $48 a pound. Every one wanted some of it, and so they raffled it off for the benefit of a hospital. Tickets were sold from 50 cents to $2.50 for the privilege of drawing a slice.

A Hit With the Senoritas.

During the second occupation of Cuba, in 1906-1907, I was stationed as a marine at Palmyra. One day, being sent to Cienfuegos, I obtained permission to wear the blue uniform, as I intended to make a hit with the senoritas. On my way to the station I stepped into some ashes, getting my trousers full of them. After I got into the train I went out on the back platform of the car I was in, took them off, and began to shake them out. The train was going with great speed and the draft promptly snatched the trousers out of my hands, and I landed at Cienfuegos with the fireman's overalls on.—Chicago Journal.

Inquiring Turn of Mind.

Robert who is of a scientific turn of mind had never seen the ocean. Recently he visited Atlantic City with his mother. The day of his arrival was a breezy one and the waves were high. Robert stood on the board walk regarding the sea with interest. Presently he turned to his mother and said: "Don't they ever turn the power off?"

MORE POLICE PRESENT THAN AUDIENCE

KITCHENR COUNCIL REQUEST THE RESIGNATION OF CHIEF OF POLICE

Kitchener, Dec. 16.—After passing a resolution requesting the police commissioner to discharge Police Chief O'Neil owing to the inability of the police to ward off the disturbances two weeks ago, last night, the city council adjourned its last meeting of 1919 in a merry mood and accepted an invitation from the retiring mayor to a banquet at a local restaurant.

The council evidently expected lively eventualities, but when the meeting opened the special officers on duty outnumbered the spectators. Observing that there was no danger of hostilities, the mayor requested the police to retire.

The council passed a resolution requesting the Ontario Legislature to enact special legislation to permit the city to settle the damage claim for the wrecking of the newspaper office.

PRESIDENT WILSON TO TAKE EXCERCISE

PHYSICIANS SAY HE IS GAINING STRENGTH RAPIDLY

Washington, Dec. 16.—Continued periods of walking each day are to be a part of the treatment prescribed for President Wilson, Dr. Carey T. Grayson, his personal physician, said yesterday.

Accordingly the President rose at 10 o'clock this morning, and, after breakfasting, put on his clothes and was ready for his day's exercise. After sitting up for several minutes at intervals during the morning, the President was said to have walked several times about the sick chamber and into the corridors of the White House.

Later the patient spent an hour in the open air, warmly clothed, in his wheel chair.

The President signed papers during the day and gave attention to other matters of a routine nature.

WORLD DOES NOT COME TO AN END TOMORROW

"IT'S BOSH" SAID SIR OLIVER LODGE WHEN ASKED HIS OPINION

London, Dec. 16.— "The idea that the world is coming to an end this week is ridiculous rubbage," so declared Sir Frank Dyson, Astronomer Royal, to a Daily Mail reporter who interviewed him on the prediction of Prof. Albert Porter that this planet's debacle will occur on December 17. Lodge on the same question.

"It's bosh," remarked Sir Oliver

WILL SHARE PROFITS WITH HIS EMPLOYES

PRESIDENT OF INTERNATIONAL METAL WORKS MAKES THIS ANNOUNCEMENT

Brockville, Dec. 16.—Believing the cause of industrial unrest throughout the world is largely due to unfair profits being made by the capitalists, T. J. Shorey, president of the International Metal Workers, Limited, of Brockville, has decided to share the profits of that concern with the employers, so he announced at a banquet given by him to his staff last night in the basement of St. John's Presbyterian Church. On last year's profits, Mr. Storey said, the amount to each man would be about three hundred dollars.

A NEW MOVEMENT IN JAIL REFORM

PARTIAL FREEDOM FOR REPENTANT PRISONERS IS ADVOCATED

Toronto, Dec. 16.—The very latest movement toward prison reform is now in effect in Toronto, and has been since Nov. 12, in connection with the prisoners at the Jail Farm, and the persons responsible for this effort to encourage and assist offenders against the law to regain their liberty with a fair amount of self-respect remaining are Major Morrison, the Jail Farm superintendent; Brigadier Fraser of the Salvation Army, and W. W. Dunlop, the inspector of prisons and public charities for the Province.

The prisoners given first consideration in this new scheme are men having families or near relatives dependent on them, who have proved by their behavior at the Jail Farm that they are trustworthy and desirous of fulfilling their duty as citizens, and the method employed in restoring them to a position in which they can further prove their good intentions, is to provide them with employment in their particular lines of work, granting them at the same time a measure of liberty, hitherto not thought of in connection with men still carrying out a jail sentence.

At present nine prisoners, or, more exactly, men under sentence for various offences are housed nightly at Salvation Army Metropole in this city, and are daily employed at their several trades or business by firms in the city; the only requirement made in this connection by the authorities being that they return to the Metropole nightly at 7 o'clock and remain there until it is time to go to work the next morning. The only things that keeps these men from leaving their rooming house is the fact that they have given their word not to and that they appreciate their special treatment is evident from their remarks of satisfaction with the premises and the kind of work provided for them. "We are all family men here," said one of the guests of Brigadier Fraser, when asked how he liked the new form of imprisonment, "and we know what it means to our families to receive the wages that we earn while working out our sentence under this new arrangement."

TEACHERS IN WESTERN PROVINCES ALSO COMPLAINING OF LOW SALARIES

Pay in Calgary was Reduced Ten Per Cent When War Broke Out and Has Not Yet Been Restored

Calgary, Dec. 16.—Since the outbreak of the great war we read quite often that Canada has prospered beyond measure. We read of increased revenues, increased commerce, increased bank deposits and staggering profits accumulated by capitalistic corporations. This condition naturally applies to special classes of the community engaged in the exchange of commodities to banking corporations who speculate with the savings of the community obtained at 3 per cent. or to manufacturers whose profits range to unknown quantities.

It is the wage-earner in every instance who has borne the financial brunt of the great struggle that has upset dynasties and shaken the civilised world to its foundations. As members of the laboring and wage-earning class, the school teachers of the province have felt with steadily increasing severity the pinch of high prices engineered by trade combines and capitalistic profiteers.

Immediately on the outbreak of the war in 1914, the salaries of all teachers in Calgary were reduced 10 per cent., notwithstanding the fact that increased prices dated from the very beginning of the struggle. During the whole period of the war the teachers never received a single increase while the actual cost of living had more than doubled and in many instances had trebled. It may be truthfully stated and without exaggeration, that the Calgary teachers received worse treatment than any other laboring class in the community during this great world upheaval.

Orators, educational, political, capitalistic, patriotic and philosophic, upon state occasions, at public banquets, at educational conventions, in season and out of season, talk glibly and with apparent sincerity about the dignity of the teaching profession, the nobility of the calling, and the incalculable value of the teacher's work to the community and the world at large. The teacher is the mainstay of the nation, the creator of national citizenship, the inculcator of morals, and upon him hinges the stability of the state, the science of good government and the welfare and happiness of civilization generally.

As a reward for his noble self-sacrifice, and with the desire probably of enticing capable men and women to enter the profession, the teachers have been consistently starved down through the centuries.

To this penurious policy on the part of school boards throughout our Dominion, is due the scarcity of teachers at the present time and the fact that 10,000 children of school age in this province are without instructors to train them in the rudiments of an education. The teaching profession has suffered national martyrdom for no cause other than penuriousnees and gross lack of appreciation on the part of Canada's adult population.

The Calgary teachers are asking for a very moderate increase in their salaries, not as suppliants for an unearned increment but as a right due them from Calgary's citizens. In these days of ever increasing expenditures, rhetorical boquets about the nobility and necessity of the teacher's work is not sufficient compensation for an empty pocket at the end of each month. Teachers have to strike the "clothes" line as well as the "bread" line, and are now looking forward to some more tangible recognition of their services, than after-dinner pleasantries about the value of education to the well-being of the country.

$35,000 RENT FOR APARTMENT

Toronto, Dec. 16.—A comparison with New York shows that rental values for apartment houses in Toronto have a long way to go yet before reaching the high prices demanded in Gotham.

What is regarded as the highest rental ever paid for an apartment suite is reported in the New York papers. It contains 17 rooms and seven baths, and is part of a new building to be constructed at Fifth avenue and 32nd street, and completed by August, 1920. The lease was made from the plans at $35,000 a year.

The highest rental paid for an apartment in Toronto is said to be for some eight-roomed suites in the Alexander on University ave. These are said to be realizing about $2,000 a year, or about $170 a month.

In New York these same suites, if located in the Fifth avenue section would bring five to six thousand dollars a year.

One feature about the very high-class apartment in New York is that domestic service, in the way of cooks, maids and butlers is included, which form an important factor in the estimating of rental values.

G.W.V.A. FAVORITE OUTSIDE

Organized J. McGregor Back After Five Weeks' Tour of Branches.

Toronto, Dec. 16.—"Out in the province the G.W.V.A. can get all it wants from the people and the authorities," declared Organized J. McGregor, who has just returned from a five weeks' tour in far-off cities and villages.

"The association is flourishing everywhere, and practically every branch has its own clubhouse, luxuriously equipped.

"The consensus of opinion on the gratuity question seems to oppose the agitation of a flat rate, as the $2,000 demand, but every returned man favors an increased gratuity." Mr. McGregor explained.

The official has visited North Bay, Keewatin, Parry Sound, and all intervening branches of the G.W.V.A., and says he has been treated to all kinds of weather, including a day when the mercury registered 26 below zero at Hearst.

FIVE CANDIDATES FOR PRESIDENCY

UNITED STATES EX-SENATOR SAYS THERE WILL BE NUMBER IN RACE

CONGRESS MAY HAVE TO DECIDE

BELIEVES ASPIRANTS NOW BEFORE PUBLIC WILL DROP OUT BY JUNE

New York, Dec. 16. — That the country will have five national parties, with five candidates for President, and that the result of the next Presidential election is likely to be so uncertain as to throw the Presidency into the House of Representatives for decision, was the opinion expressed by James Hamilton Lewis, formerly Senator from Illinois, who is at the Hotel Biltmore. Mr. Lewis also declared that the men already mentioned as "candidates" would sink into oblivion long before the conventions next June, and others brought forth.

Mr. Lewis regretted to admit that the next election for President, Vice President and Representatives in Congress was "to be decided by votes on issues that have to do only with every other country than the United States."

"The country will have five national parties, with five candidates for President, Republican, Democrat, Socialist, Labor and Liberal," said Mr. Lewis. "The latter two will contain many farmers' local political organizations of the West and South. The result of the next election is likely to be so uncertain as to throw the Presidency into the House of Representatives for decision—another Hayes and Tilden 1876 contest, without its political crimes.

Will Wither Before June.

"The sprouts of political candidates now up and out will be withered from winter cold long before next June. The open house of all conventions means that in the swaying and swashing between many candidates new men will be brought forth as nominees, some of them not now named.

"The Republicans will be dominated by the expressions of the primaries to be held from now to May in the eleven big States. The Republicans will meet with delegates all different from those now calculated on and bound by new directions. Then, to prevent the Democrats from winning the West on the league and peace treaty issues, the Republicans will nominate a 'middle man' conciliator, like Senator Frank Kellogg, of Minnesota, or Senator Kenyon, of Iowa.

"The American people will see the first Southerner on both tickets since the civil war. The Democrats tried Davis in 1901, and now the Republicans will make an effort to catch those Southern States which are now going Republican on local issues, such as Kentucky and Maryland, by having a Vice President from one of them.

"One Solemn Fact."

"The one solemn fact, regrettable to have to be admitted, is that the next election for President, Vice President and Congressmen for the United States is to be decided by votes on issues that have to do only with every other country than the United States. A large portion of our Irish votes will be cast as the interests of Ireland over England suggest. The Italians will vote to vidicatne the claim of Fiume, the Greeks to get Trace, the German-American voter to resent the peace treaty terms against Germany, while the Russian and Scandinavian sympathizers in America will vote their sentiments on the Russian Polish situation.

"The United States, for the first time in its life, will be controlled in its elections and its next national officials selected by voters of foreign birth or foreign blood, who will be indifferent to the needs or the welfare of this land in their zeal to vendicate or resent the treatment they imagine or feel has been the fate of foreign father and mother lands under our influence on the world peace treaty. It is this that makes the future strange and dangerous."

SIR ADAM HAS GONE AWAY

Hon. I. B. Lucas Will be Acting Chairman in His Place.

Sir Adam Beck, chairman of the Provincial Hydro Commission, is on his way to England, where Lady Beck is in ill-health. He left Saturday, and will not likely be back to Canada before the end of January. In the meantime his position, as chairman of the Hydro Board will be occupied by Hon. I. B. Lucas, formerly Attorney-General in the Hearst Government.

WILL PRESIDENT ASK FOR A THIRD TER

MR WILSON IS EXPECTED T MAKE ANNOUNCEMENT AT EARLY DATE

Washington, Dec. 16.— Presid Wilson is expected by many of th leaders of the Democratic Party t announce at the Jackson Day dinn here, on January 8, whether or n he wants to be a third term candida The dinner will be held on the even ing of the first day of the Democratic National Committee meeting.

Most of the President's politi friends believe he will eliminate himself definitely from the race at th time, or soon thereafter, and leave the field open for the numerous other contenders. But there is no assurance of this.

It is not expected that the President will be present at the dinner, but that he will send a letter to be read at the big party pow-wow. It was reported in Democratic circles this afternoon that Mr. Wilson is recovering his health so rapidly there is a slight chance of his being able to attend the dinner in person, but it is generally considered improbable that his physician, Dr. Cary T. Grayson, will give his consent because of the danger that the excitement and enthusiasm of the gathering might affect the President's nerves and retard his physical improvement

WHY SADNESS IN OLD AGE?

Too True That the Two Things Are Frequently Associated, but Should Not Be.

It is a common belief that as a person advances in years he becomes not only a wiser but a sadder man. That one should gain knowledge as he grows older is thoroughly in order, but that he should become increasingly burdened with the cares of life and saddened because of hopes that have not been fulfilled is not a necessary condition.

It is true that the clouds that gather about the setting sun do take a sober coloring from an eye that has kept watch in man's mortality, to paraphrase Wordsworth a bit, and that the thought of constantly lessening activity and prospects which age entails is enough to make one pause and consider. But consideration that goes far enough will reveal that all time, whether of this world or another, is an unending opportunity for progression.

After all, the whole matter of age is something that has to do with the mind rather than the body. And when the body begins to fail, when gray hairs appear, the step becomes less springy, sleep more difficult and joy in things that used to please an impossibility, sadness should not be the result.

The mind is a great crucible which receives and transfuses in some fashion impressions from all the objects and facts of life. The will is the master which determines what the transfusion shall be. A man can let his will relax or he can keep it active, regardless of age. He can make of his existence a heaven or a hell, whether he be old or young, rich or poor, in a favored spot of the earth, on desert soil or fallen on evil days.

Exercise of the will cannot at last stave off death, and it may not induce prolonged health or material welfare. But it can aid in all these things, and entirely regardless of its material accomplishments, the will that is kept properly on the alert can lead him in hope.

"Oh, well for him whose will is strong."

For him whose will is weak, or rather allowed to become weak, there is joy neither in a sunset nor a sunrise. And even the bright light of noonday will only dazzle and bewilder, rather than encourage and inspire.

The strong will sees endlessly, "beyond the sunset and the paths of all the western stars." It strengthens a man in hope and leads him to see unlimited possibilities as the years pass. Sadness is the last thing that ought to characterize age.—Kansas City Star.

Torpedo Digs Own Tunnel.

Added to the list of interesting but tardy war inventions is a so-called "earth torpedo" of Canadian origin described by Popular Mechanics Magazine. It bores its subterranean way undetected toward the enemy lines and then explodes with great force. The burrowing operation is hydraulic. The nose of the torpedo is equipped with an ingenious boring nozzle, and takes with it a length of hose, which a pump in the trench supplies with water at 300 pounds pressure. This part of the performance is silent. In a test the device burrowed for 200 feet and then blasted out an excavation 30 feet across.

HIS FAME SECURE

Emmett Immortalized Himself by Single Song.

Writer of "Dixie" Ranks With Rouget de l'Isle, Composer of "La Marseillaise," Most Famous of Martial Hymns.

A man died in Ashtabula, Ohio, recently who has done much to perpetuate the memory of Daniel Decatur Emmett, the man who wrote "Dixie." James Lewis Smith was his name. He was a wealthy bachelor whose fad was building monuments. After his death blueprints of a memorial to American sailors and soldiers who fought in the late war were found on his desk. The monument, however, that will give him lasting fame is the one erected in honor of Emmett, at Mount Vernon, Ohio, where Emmett was born, and where he now lies buried.

Smith's interest in Emmett has brought to light many interesting things about the origin of "Dixie" and about Emmett himself. It is interesting from the viewpoint of how a man may spring into fame almost overnight without knowing just why, and also from the viewpoint of what constitutes a popular song. In after years Emmett said to an old Mount Vernon friend: "If I had known that 'Dixie' was destined to become so popular I would have written it better." But then maybe he might have polished it so much that it would have lost its appeal. Who knows?

In his youth Emmett was a printer. He was a fifer in the army for a while, and then ran away with a circus. Later he helped to organize the first negro minstrel show ever put on in America. This show made a hit in the United States and later had a successful run in England. After his return to the United States Emmett joined a company headed by Dan Bryant. While playing at Mechanics' hall in New York Bryant told Emmett one Saturday that he must have a new "walk around" song for the following Monday's performance. On Sunday Emmett wrote the music and words for "Dixie," which was given for the first time in Mechanics' hall, New York, in 1850, under the title "Dixie's Land." The song was a hit from the word go, and was soon adopted by other traveling companies. In 1860 Miss Susan Denin sang "Dixie" to a great throng in New Orleans, and eventually it spread through the South and became the war song of the Confederate armies.

In 1895 Al G. Field sought him out and the two had a happy time reviewing the past. Field was astonished to find Emmett still playing the fiddle and planning to go on the road again, although he was quite old. Finally Emmett induced Field to take him out for a season. He appeared in Newark, Ohio, on August 23, 1895. He was then eighty, but very vigorous and spry. Ovation after ovation followed him as he traveled through the South.

During his closing days he was helped by a weekly allowance from the Actors' fund of New York. Little or nothing was done to mark his grave, although an organization had been formed for that purpose. Mr Smith, however, put up a monument at Emmett's grave in Mound View cemetery that is a credit to the man and to the donor.

A curious story brought out in connection with his song is that the original "Dixie's Land" referred to was not the South but an estate on Manhattan island, New York city, owned by a man by the name of Dixie, who employed a large number of colored slaves. These slaves were sent south because of the rising abolition sentiment, and while there they improvised the refrain "I wish I was in Dixie's land," which was once heard by Emmett and became the inspiration of his song. However that may be, "Dixie" is always associated with the South, and had a part in the war in France as a typical American production.

The Flowing Tide.

No one, however great his genius or high his position, is all-important to the world; its work will go on without him. There may be ripples and disturbances in the current for a time where he sinks out of sight, but the tide will soon be flowing on as before. This truth may be painful to personal vanity, but it is comforting to every generous soul that cares more for others than for self.

"French Leave."

This expression arose in the early part of the eighteenth century, through certain guests in the salons of France, not aware of the higher acts of courtesy, leaving without saying good-by to the host or hostess. The practice spread to society in this country. Therefore, if a man left without saying good-by to his host, it was said he took "French leave."

Will Ancient Egg Hatch

The egg which Prof. F. B. Loomis, of Amherst College, recently found among fossils in a sand-pocket in Colorado, and which he estimates to have been laid a million years ago, will not be valuable perhaps as a factor in the high-cost-of-living problem, but may become important in connection with some of the world-old riddles of life itself.

Mummies of 3,000 years ago, and even the wonderful paintings of the primitive men in the caves of Altamira, Spain, said to be 40,000 years old, are but of yesterday compared with this venerable egg of the Colorado sand-pocket.

The only things of an organic nature which appear to have been found that surpassed this egg in perhaps both antiquity and marvelousness were some frogs which were found embedded in clay and were said to have recovered their suspended life after a hibernation of heaven only knows how many millions of years.

The London Times of September 21, 1840, contained an account of a lecture by Mr. Pettigrew, at the Institute of Literature and Science, in the course of which he showed some wheat grains which he said were raised from grains found in a tomb near Thebes, Egypt, where they had lain 3,000 years. The ancient grains were found by Sir George Wilkinson in a hermetically sealed vase. Sir George sowed twelve of these grains and they took root and sprouted; and the grains which Mr. Pettigrew exhibited were the product of this plant.

Another remarkable instance of suspended vitality is spoken of in the Journal of the Royal Institution of Great Britain, October, 1830, page 196. It is that of a gnarled root found in the hand of a 2,000-year-old mummy. It had probably been placed there for religious reasons. This root, according to the Journal, was planted by a Mr. Haulton in a flower pot and forthwith resumed the growth which had been interrupted for so many centuries and soon began to flower.

Still another case of this kind is narrated in the London Times of August 16, 1844, to the following effect: "In the garden of Mr. Grimstone, of the Herbarium, at Highgate, London, there is now a pease plant in full bloom, raised from a pea which Mr. Pettigrew and the officials of the British Museum took from a vase found in an Egyptian sarcophagus and which must have lain there 2,844 years."

If the conditions under which the million-year-old egg held itself aloof so long were as favorable as those which held the life of the frogs suspended in chalk, why should it not be hatchable now and afford us an opportunity to see just what a chicken or whatever bird it may be (the newspaper account does not tell anything about the species the egg belonged to) looked like in those remote ages?

In the meanwhile, it cannot be without interest to speculate on the nature of that force which is powerful enough to remain dormant for thousands and even millions of years without losing any part of its energy.

Physiologists trace all terrestrial life to a microscopically small substance which they call protoplasm. They have even succeeded in analyzing the component elements of the protoplasm into proteins, which are compounds of carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, nitrogen, sulphur, water and some mineral matters, and, recently, a scientist has been able to put together these elements in such a way as to constitute protoplasm "true to form" in all respects except one—it lacked life!

In the million-year-old egg, if the protoplasm put into the shell by nature has been held in suspended animation by means which began to be operative while the egg was still in a hatchable condition, and if it has not been allowed to deteriorate since Prof. Loomis discovered it, the mere lapse of time would not now prevent the process of generation from continuing from the point where it was interrupted a million years ago. Which reminds one of the fairy tale of the Sleeping Beauty, wherein, after a hundred years of sleep, everybody in and about the enchanted castle awakes together with the princess when Prince Charming has bestowed the liberating kiss; and everybody resumes his interrupted activities exactly as if no century had intervened and nothing at all had happened—the courtier continuing his interrupted compliment, the cook bringing down his upraised palm upon the face of the scullion, etc., etc.

The Mining of Coal.

The popular conception of coal mining as being confined to the ends of narrow tunnels is corrected by an artist's recent study of a large English mine. It is shown that the actual mining is done on a broad front of coal and rock, the tunnels being merely communication highways. The terrific pressure of the heavy limestone stratum above is utilized to open up the coal seams and aid the work of flaking off the coal. To keep this pressure within bounds, "packs" of stone are built, 12 feet wide and 24 feet apart. When the roof props are taken away, the huge mass of rock slowly comes to rest on the packs, and the miners hurry to load the coal before it is crushed by the tremendous weight upon it.—Popular Mechanics.

Population of Tibet.

Tibet is at present one of the least known parts of the world, and there is uncertainty even to its exact boundaries and extent. Its area is about 650,000 square miles and its population is roughly estimated at about 6,000,000.

WORLD TOO MUCH WITH US

Writer Questions Whether Mankind as a Whole Does Not Neglect the Best Investments.

A thoughtful American who lost his life when the Lusitania was sunk remarked as he awaited his fate with calmness that "Death is the most beautiful adventure in life." It was a singularly impressive utterance which was wired around the world, and it is still remembered and treasured in hosts of hearts.

A tombstone in Flanders bears the words of another reflective American, Dinsmore Ely, a soldier from Chicago. With what seemed a premonition that the supreme sacrifice was at hand, he gave the world a thought comparable in interest and significance with that of Charles Frohman, when he wrote in his last letter to his mother that "It is an investment, not a loss, when a man dies for his country."

Both of these notable utterances sound a high note too rarely heard in our hurrying world of today. But if life is the greatest individual asset of any one of us, surely its wise investment should be our matter of greatest concern. What sort of an investment of life do we make in living selfishly for self? Can it yield an adequate return? Does the very best that it has to offer—wealth, position, power—make it worth while? Nothing is more certainly established than that these invariably disappoint the hearts set on them; and altogether impermanent is such satisfaction as they do confer. As a matter of theory we admit, or most of us do, with Cicero, that Nature has lent us life at interest; and with Seneca, that the body is not a home but an inn. We also give nominal assent to the teaching of the faith into which we were born that life intrusts us with talents—one or more—of which we must make wise investment. We are left in no doubt as to what that investment is, yet how few of us make it, and how little thought the world as a whole gives to investments of the higher kind?

Is it not that the world is too much with us, that its investments are too alluring? Yet the soul which denies love asked of it, withholds kindness expected from it, or refuses the opportunity for sacrifice offered to it, may have world banks filled and yet be bankrupt any moment. For the only investments that cannot fail are those of sacrifice and duty done and love.—Rochester Post-Express.

To Help Roumanian Children.

Queen Marie of Roumania has drafted every housewife, owner of a moving picture theater, storekeeper, hotel owner and landlord in her kingdom into a national army to contribute to the support of the Roumanian Children's Relief association, which has been organized to continue permanently the work of child feeding begun by the American relief administration.

In an appeal just issued to her people, described in a cable received from Mr. Hoover in Paris at the offices of the administration, 42 Broadway, Queen Marie has requested that all Roumanian families refrain from eating dinner one day each month and contribute the amount thus saved to the funds of child relief.

The queen has requested the various classes among her subjects to contribute to the child bureau in the following manner: All stores and hotels, one-tenth of their net proceeds one day each month; all landlords owning business buildings, one-fourth of their net proceeds one day each month; all banks on an equivalent basis and churches of all denominations a share of their collections one Sunday each month.

Medicine by Inhalation.

That medicines for all diseases may be applied by inhalation is the conclusion of Dr. P. D. Schulz, of New York, after many years of experiment. Hitherto this method has been chiefly confined to anaesthetics and remedies for respiratory affections, but marked success is claimed for it in both digestive and nervous troubles. The medicine in liquid form is used to saturate a sponge, which is contained in a tube through which nitrous oxide gas as a "conveyor" is inhaled. Risk of chemical or other change from contact with food materials is avoided, and the medicine is absorbed into the circulation from the lungs even more readily than from the stomach, smaller doses sufficing.

Thrift Proverbs of Japan.

Seventy thousand thrift slogans were submitted in a contest conducted by the saving bank bureau of the Japanese post office department. The first five prizes ranging from $50 to $5, were won with the following phrases:

"Saving is a duty everyone can perform."

"One who laughs at a sen (half-cent) will cry for a yen."

"Savings win over spending."

"Think of saving rather than dream of making money."

"Daily saving, daily happiness."—Japan Trade Bulletin.

More in It.

Governor Stephens in a recent after-dinner speech in which he touched on the peace conference remarked that a great many people thought a lot of money was being wasted over there. "Like the two shop girls I overheard one day:

"Said the first:

"'Gee, them peace conference guys take a long time to do anything. I wonder if they get paid by the hour?'

"'Naw,' retorted the other, scornfully, 'they don't get paid by the hour, it's peace work, ain't it.'"

BUILT ON HISTORIC GROUND

New York City's Big Structures Stand on Land That Is of Sacred Memory.

The land on which the Equitable building stands, and the territory around and about it, is of sacred memory so far as early American history is concerned. Just across the way on Broadway was Burns' coffee house, where the Revolution really started. Here was erected at a later date the City hotel, the scene of many memorable functions during the early days of the republic.

On the northeast corner of Nassau and Cedar streets is a bronze tablet which reads as follows:

Here Stood
The Middle Dutch Church
Dedicated A. D. 1729
Made a British Military Prison in 1776
Restored 1790
Occupied as the U. S. Post Office
1845-1875
Taken down 1882

At which time the post office moved to the present federal building in City Hall park.

On the site of the present subtreasury, at Pine, Nassau and Wall streets, a new city hall was erected in 1699. In front of the building was a cage for criminals, with whipping post and stocks—but not the kind of stocks they sell there now. When independence was declared the building became the capitol and was called Federal hall. Here the Declaration of Independence was read from the steps in 1776, and here also Washington was inaugurated first president of the United States, in 1779.

The wide strip of pavement on the west side of Nassau street in front of the Bankers Trust building bears evidence of the former existence of Federal hall. The latter extended across Nassau street to the building line of the street and so closed the thoroughfare that a passageway was established around the building in order that pedestrians might more readily get to Nassau street. When the subtreasury was built in 1836 on the site of Federal hall, Nassau street was opened to Wall street, and the little passageway was left, and forms the wide sidewalk of today.

Pardon Recalls Famous Crime.

A famous crime is recalled by the granting of a decree of pardon to a large number of convicts in Italy. Among those thus pardoned are Doctor Naldi and Tullio Murri, who were sentenced in connection with the murder of Count Bonmartini, Murri's brother-in-law. Count Bonmartini, a Bologna spendthrift, who frequently quarreled with his wife, was found in his flat with his throat cut, in August, 1902. The trial, lasting six months, of the countess and four accomplices in the murder, in 1905, aroused enormous interest throughout Italy. All the prisoners were confined in a steel cage in front of the judge's tribune. Tullio Murri, the countess' brother, declared that he remonstrated with the count for ill-treating his wife, and killed him in a quarrel that followed. He was sentenced to 30 years' solitary confinement. Doctor Naldi, a friend of Murri's, received the same sentence. He declared that his part in the crime was to cut the corpse in pieces, but that this was not done owing to the date arranged for the murder being altered. The countess, who was sentenced to ten years' solitary confinement, was released in 1909.

England to Honor Pilgrims.

Behind the efforts of those who are seeking to link Great Britain and America in a lasting union of friendship two historic episodes stand out in bold relief.

It is almost precisely 300 years since the Pilgrim Fathers set sail from Plymouth in the Mayflower to make, on an undeveloped continent, a brave experiment of self government. The actual tercentenary falls next year, and already preparations are in progress to celebrate the occasion in this country in a fitting manner.

By way of contrast to that great adventure one thinks of that other pilgrimage last year, when 2,000,000 heroic soldiers left their homes in America to speed across the Atlantic to the rescue of the old country. They came actuated by that love of liberty which had been handed down to them from the ancient Pilgrims, and with their British brothers they testified on the battle field to the essential unity of the Anglo-Saxon stock. It is now for Great Britain and America to determine that the friendship which their gallant soldiers cemented with their blood shall be a permanent inspiration in their international relations.—London Daily Telegraph.

Beavers Copy Tepees of Indians.

In the pond were a number of beaver houses which looked like small Indian tepees, writes Samuel Scoville, Jr., in Boys' Life. Most of them were built in water several feet deep and were from three to four feet above the surface and about five feet in diameter. One, however, was a huge one, built in deep water, and fully twice as large as any other. It was made mostly of peeled cottonwood poles and stood on a firm foundation of mud and sticks built up from the bottom. The poles leaned together from the top and had been woven in and out with thick brush and plastered with mud and turf until the walls were three feet thick.

BEDSTEAD AS RAFT

Primitive Ferry Boat Made Use of by Traveler.

With Earthen Pots as Floats, and Towed by Swimmers, This Simple Contrivance Got American Safely Across Flooded River.

In a country where rivers are subject to sudden and heavy floods, bridges are in many cases so insecure that ferries must always be maintained in addition. Such is the case in India, and the methods of crossing streams today are what they have been from the earliest times. An American consular officer tells how he was taken across an Indian river at the time of a freshet. The contrivance was simple, and has been used in the Orient as long as history shows any record.

A cord having been fastened to a large, elongated gourd, and a smaller gourd being also tied to it, the native gets astride, and laying his breast upon the larger gourd paddles himself across with his hands and feet.

Women, too, avail themselves of this singular contrivance, under the escort of a ferryman, who, similarly mounted, takes his charge in tow, carries her basket, with perhaps a child in it, on his head, and conveys them safely across.

Herds of cattle swim these flooded rivers like water rats, and the herd boy, as a matter of course, takes the tail of the hindermost bullock in his hand and thus gains a very comfortable lift across.

These methods of crossing rivers, however, are hardly in accordance with our ideas of comfort. So the American thought one day as he stood, after a long ride, on the bank of a wide and rapid stream which separated him from his halting place. He did not relish the idea of buffeting the muddy current on a horse of gourds, but as there was no boat within 20 miles it seemed as if he must either do this or bivouac on the bank without his dinner.

While he was in this dilemma a native signified that he would soon set the foreigner right. From a neighboring hut he brought a native bedstead—not a four-poster such as westerners use, but a small light frame of wood having four little legs and held together by the interlacing of a piece of cord, which thus forms a sort of netted bottom to this simple piece of furniture. The native next brought out four round earthen pots, and after protecting the bottom of each with a few inches of sand he put the legs of the cot into the pots and signified that the vessel was ready to be launched.

As the American sat doubled up on the extemporized raft in company with his saddle he found himself raised an inch or so above the level of the water, the earthen pots forming admirable floats. A couple of lusty swimmers then took him in tow and soon landed him on the opposite bank.

INTERMEDIATE HOCKEY TEAM SHAPE UP AS A FAST AGGREGATION OF PLAYERS

Great Things are Expected From Them on Their Showing at the Initial Practice Last Night—Speedy Forward Line.

Every hockey fan went home last night in a delighted frame of mind over the showing of the Intermediate O.H.A. team at their initial practice. A beautiful sheet of ice welcomed the team and the players tore up and down the rink in mid-season form, speaking well for their open-air training on the canal.

The Intermediates may not have any Bobby Armstrongs or Jack Adams, but they have a crack all-round outfit of local boys that only the best will be able to stop. There were two teams out last night—that is a good indication of the enthusiasm the players feel over the 1920 hockey season.

A couple of star forwards have been uncovered in the Rose brothers, Lorney Rose showing a burst of speed that was a treat to watch. Walter Jackson is the same speedy, fast breaking, accurate shooting wing player and nothing more is required from one man. LeGrow or Murray in goal with a selection from Grover Halpin, Frost, Lowes and P. Thornton in front of him will be difficult to score on. But the real surprise is in the forward line, where with the players before mentioned, is Cherrett, with his great speed and cleverness, A. Thornton, Williams and Barrie to draw from. If any team in the district can present a faster forward line than the locals unloosed last night the Peterborough fans would like to see them in action.

It may be customary to praise a hockey squad on its first appearance, but seldom has the task been easier than in the case of the present Intermediate team. They are all local boys and can be assured of the whole hearted support of the public if they continue to show the speed with which they started out last night.

Jerry Coughlin will manage the team this season. Father Gorman was an interested spectator at the practice.

CANADIAN STAR IS NOW AN AMATEUR

GRANTING OF CERTIFICATES TO PROFESSIONALS CONTINUES IN THE WEST

"Skinner" Poulin, former star of Canadiens, of Montreal, and Victorias in the Pacific Coast League, is the latest professional to be coated with white-wash in the West, and will now play as and amateur.

According to word received from Poulin, he will lead the Saskatoon team in the Western League this coming Winter, along with such other good amateurs as Mickey McKay, Barney Stanley and Art Gervais, among others. Poulin is farming a short distance out of Saskatoon, and took charge of the team last week. Poulin, Brady, Smith, Boupre, McAskill and others will divide the work on the line.

Art Gervais, another well known pro. hockey player, formerly of Portage la Prairie, Galt and Kitchener, will manage the Moose Jaw Maple Leafs this season in the Western Amateur League.

Senior hockey in Alberta will commence January 5, 1920, according to the schedule that was drawn up by the Big Four League at a meeting recently. The teams will play seven-man hockey, and at the termination of the league schedule the first and second teams will play home-and-home game, total goals to count, and the winners will be declared champions. This system is in vogue in the Pacific Coast League and was found to be a big success.

AN AL-LSTAR WORLD FOOTBALL TEAM IS SELECTED TO DEFEAT ANYTHING

Being as it is the shank of autumn and the experts are selecting their All-American, All-Western, All-Eastern, All-Southern, All-Conference, All-County, All-City, All-Ward, All-Precinct, All-High, All-Wool and All-Everything football teams, it behooves this column to select an All-World team.

A sis usual with all All-Teams, we haven't seen most of the athletes whom we have selected, but what has that got to do with it? All an expert needs is an imagination and a typewriter.

Thus this column submits to the approval of its readers the following symposium of athletes whom it believes worthy of recognition.

HALFBACKS.

One of our selections for halfback is Jess Willard. We base our calculations on the work he did in his last game, which took place in Toledo, O., on the Fourth of July, 1919 A.D. He was on his back half the time. Dempsey hadn't half the back Willard had, and Jess hadn't half the backbone Jack had, and the promoters didn't get half back what they expected. For the other halfback you may consult Vogue or any other undress magazine. All the gowns are half back and half suspenders.

GUARDS.

Streeter (Capt.) of Streeterville and D'Annunzio of Fiume—Streeter is elected captain of the team because he admits it. He guarded Lake Michigan so long that it got up and moved. He shines in a silk hat, but his chief strength is his language. D'Annunzio is strong in two ways—language and garlic. He once wrote poetry, but is now in the publicity business. He is now guarding Fiume, but expects to fall before a bombardment of photoplay contracts.

TACKLES.

Hy cost and strike are the unanimous choice for the tackle positions. They tackle you going and coming. Hy Cost lands on you from above while Strickle is kicking you in the shins. Just as you think you have double-crossed Hy Cost and are hiking toward for a touchdown Strike tackles you from behind and you find yourself downed one day from the rent line and ten bucks to go. Other tackles of great strength are grocer, butcher, chauffeur, landlord, laundry, etc.

ENDS.

Salary and Expense are two ends that never meet. Salary, no matter how big he is or how fast you make him, never catches up with Expense. Salary is placed at left end because you never can find him on the right end of the ledger. The forward pass is their specialty. Salary does the passing and Expense is always right there on the receiving and hollering for more. Expense is much heavier than Salary and covers much more territory.

QUARTERBACK.

Bill Carlisle is the unanimous choice for quarterback. He is the slickest and most spectacular athlete of modern times. He covers miles of ground without the slightest effort. He has been known to play in Wyoming, Kansas, Ohio, Florida, Illinois, Oregon, New Hampshire and Texas on the same day. He is good for half a column any time he feels like bucking the first page. As for cleverness, Bill has a thousand press agents working for nothing, and it takes a darn clever guy to do that.

CENTRE.

Hohenzollern of Potsdam—A successful centre must be proficient in two ways, offensively and defensively. Offensively, Hohenzollern is without an equal. He is the centre of the most offensive movement known to the history of the universe. Polecat and Mustard-Gas are close rivals for the second team, but offensively speaking, Hohenzollern is in a class by himself. Defensively, Bill is a wizard. His retreat into a previously prepared position in Holland was one of the masterpieces of the late campaign.

FULLBACK.

Stanislaus Zybszko has the fullest back that ever flopped on a wrestling mat. We don't know whether Stanislaus is in the game or not, but what difference does it make? It is nothing unusual for an expert to pick a dead one. Anyhow, Zbyszko's back covered a multitude of canvas. His back was so full that he didn't have any neck. Were it not for his ears you could not tell where his head began. Second choice for full back is a toss up between Kitty Gordon and Mary Garden.

AMERICAN LEAGUE WILL CONTINUE GAME

ATTORNEY TO PRESIDENT JOHNSON GIVES HIS OPINIONS

Chicago, Dec. 16.—No danger to the structure of organized baseball or to the championship season of 1920 exists in the factional fight of the American League, according to George W. Miller, attorney for President Johnson, to whom the American League executive referred all questioners on his return from New York today.

The only demand the belligerent three-club owners can do in the next baseball campaign, Attorney Miller said, is to refuse to open their parks and enter teams in the race. This action, he said, is not anticipated.

"The American League will continue to function in the interests of clean sport," Attorney Miller said. "In spite of all eforts to hamper President Johnson in the performance o this executive duties.

"After the three dissenting club owners have had time to cool off, another meeting will be held in legal form, and whatever business is necessary to conduct the coming baseball season, will be transacted. That meeting will be called by the president and the time and place will be designated by him."

QUAKER OATS LOST 3 TO HIGH ROLLERS

Last night in the Ten Pin League at the Water street alleys the High Rollers took three straights from the Quaker Oats. Some good bowling was done by both teams. The High Rollers rolled over the twenty-six hundred mark. Some hard spares were pulled off by A. Miller and Thompson. For the Quaker Oats, Kirn was high with 522; V. Miller next with 519. For the High Rollers, Solomon was high man with 597; Thompson next with 546, Miller and Byers also passing the 500 mark.

CARPENTIER ANXIOUS. TO MEET JACK DEMPSEY

SAYS THAT IF DEFEATED WILL CROWN CHAMPION BEST FIGHTER OF WORLD

Paris, Dec. 16.—M. Decoin has not yet received a reply from Jack Kearns on his offer for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in the Pershing Stadium. Sporting circles in Paris are expectant, in view of the official challenge issued by Deschamps, Carpentier's manager, to Dempsey through the International Boxing Corporation, yesterday.

Carpentier told the Associated Press today that he was not concerned about the arrangements, and was leaving for England Monday. The general opinion in Paris is that Dempsey could not be willing to come to France, while Carpentier's expressed willingness to go to America or Australia has caused renewed enthusiasm.

"I wish that this matter could be arranged as soon as possible," said Carpentier today, "so that I might go to work. I desire to depart from the old-time publicity stunts. I believe that the records of both Dempsey and myself speak for ourselves and I wish to get down to business and settle the matter once for all. If I am defeated I will proclaim Mr. Dempsey the greatest living fighter."

ROACH AND M'CARTHY ARE PROFFESSIONALS

RULING O.H.A. EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE STANDS

Some misunderstanding appears to have arisen in certain quarters regarding the decision of the O. H. A. Executive Committee, in the cases of M. J. Roach and T. E. McCarthy, of Hamilton, whose amateur standing was in question, so that there can be no doubt it is officially announced that the committee found that the two players were guilty of professionalism and decided to debar them from the O. H. A. competition for all time. In addition it was decided to notify the Amateur Athletic Union of the decision of the O. H. A. Executive, so that Roach and McCarthy will be debarred fom all other branches of amateur sport in which they may wish to competee.

O. H. A. playing certificates will be posted to the clubs on Wednesday night, and should be in the hands of the clubs on Thursday morning. They should be sigend and fitted out properly and returned as soon as possible to the O. H. A. secretary for registration. No player will be allowed to compete in a championship match unless a certificate has been issued to him.

Belated entries received since the grouping was made have come from the Collingwood (last year's champions) and Chesley intermediate clubs. Collingwood has been added to Group No. 14, with Barrie, Orillia, Midland and Meaford, while Chesley has been added to group No. 16, with Wiarton, Owen Sound, Markdale and Dundalk. Depot Harbor objects to Group No. 15 intermediate being divided into two sections, but all the other clubs in the group want it that way.

Sheriff for Best Man.

My father was at one time a sheriff in Colorado, writes a correspondent. He arrested a young man on a charge of assault with intent to kill, growing out of a quarrel over some water rights. The man had no one to go his bond and had to stay in jail.

He said he didn't mind the arrest so much because he was sure he would be cleared when his case was tried, but it was just three days before his wedding. The next day the prospective bride put in an appearance and pleaded with my father to let him off for the wedding, as everything had been arranged for it.

Father knew it would cause trouble with the other faction in the quarrel if he released the man. He agreed to let them go ahead if they would let him act as best man with the bridegroom handcuffed to him. This was agreed to. The wedding came off at the scheduled time. Father drove out from the jail with the bridegroom, stood up with him during the ceremony, and brought him back immediately afterwards. A month later the man was acquitted.

Strange Indian Names.

A recent issue of the Ogala Light the monthly magazine of the Pine Ridge Indian reservation school near Rapid City, S. D., gives some peculiar names among those listed as students. Lizzie Shot to Pieces is at the end of the list. Other names include Victoria Holy Rock, Julia Afraid of Hawk, Mary Brown Ears, Julia Crazy Ghost, Mercy Yellow Shirt, Emma No Fat, Ella Red Eyes, Martin Chase Alone, Noah Horse, John Left Hand and Julia Stand Up. Out of 93 students attending the school only four have French names and seven names of English origin.

Cure for Ivy Poisoning.

A perfectly simple, harmless and efficacious remedy for ivy poisoning will be found in Epsom salts. The worst attack of poisoning can be quickly cured by bathing frequently in a strong solution of Epsom salts, and as there is no danger in using anything so harmless it is worth trying if you are inclined to be doubtful or incredulous.

How a Scarecrow Works.

"I see you have a scarecrow in your field," said the vacationist to the old farmer. "Do you find it effective?"

"Sartingly!" replied the farmer. "So many blamed tramps cross over to see if the clothes on it are worth stealin' it keeps the birds away."—Boston Transcript.

Protests Seizure of Book.

A deed book of New York city more than 200 years old, in possession of J. B. Spannuth, a second-hand dealer of Pottsville, Pa., has been seized by authority of New York city officials. The book covers the period from 1687 to 1694, and contains the titles to most of the property in the financial district, worth hundreds of millions. Spannuth says he bought the book from an antiquarian and will contest the right of the city to seize it.

PROPOSE APPOINTED POLICE COMMISSION

SAULT STE. MARIE COUNCIL ADVOCATE BODY CHOSEN BY CITY COUNCIL

A new system has been advocated in connection with the City Council's resolution for an elected Police Commission to control the police force in the municipalities, by the council of Sault Ste. Marie. They forwarded a resolution, passed by them, which was received by the council last night in which they advocate a police commission, appointed by the municipal council. The letter stated that a copy of the resolution had been forwarded to Premier Drury.

WM. DAVIS CO. NOT CONTROLLED IN U. S.

GENERAL MANAGER FOX IN A STATEMENT DENIES THIS RUMOR

Mr. E. C. Fox, grandson of William Davies, and General Manager of the William Davies Company, yesterday issued the following statement in reply to the reports that have been current recently that the interests of the William Davies Company had passed into control of United States capitalists:

"A few days ago I made a statement regarding the reorganization of this company. I now repeat again that Sir Joseph Flavelle and some other shareholders sold their share capital stock of this company to myself and associates. Neither Sir Joseph Flavelle nor the other shareholders who disposed of their share capital in the company have taken any part in the plans for reorganization, which was necessary in order to secure money for the purchase of their stock. Canadian financial houses could not see their way clear to make a flotation in Canada, and it was necessary to secure the money in the United States. Because of that the American company was created, the parent company holding the share capital stock of the William Davies Company of Canada. Seventy-five per cent., however, of the American company is owned and controlled by Canadians living in Toronto, and I understand almost 50 per cent. of the A class stock has been sent to Canada for disposal to the Canadian public. There is thus no foundation to the statements made that our company is controlled by large American interests."

Lots of women do foolish things, so they can snub those who don't.

MRS. MORRIS CANDIDATE FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Mrs. Morris authorized the statement that she will be a candidate for the Board of Education again this year.

The mothers and women teachers of the city should have one or two members of their own serve on a Board interested with the moral, mental and physical care of the children and young people.

The large vote polled by Mrs. Morris last year proved that many electors are alive to the face that the woman's point of view, as well as the man's, is desirable on the School Board.

This opinion has steadily grown during the past year, and the friends of the movement to place a woman on the School Board, will welcome the news that Mrs. Morris is again a candidate.

SIGNS MAY BE REMOVED FROM CROSSINGS

CITY COUNCIL CLAIMS PROPERTY ON WHICH QUAKER OATS HAVE PLACED SIGNS

The Quaker Oats Company have paced signs between the eastern end of Simcoe street and the temporary bridge that any person crossing their tracks was doing so at their own risk.

This matter was brought before the Board of Works of the city last night and the opinion was expressed that the signs placed there were on city property and consequently the Quaker Oats Company had no right to take such action.

The matter will be taken up with the company and if this supposition is verified the notices will be immediately removed on the order of the chairman of the Board of Works.

No societies were present so no one responded to the alderman's generous offer.

SEVEN PROVINCES OF CANADA ARE TODAY IN GRIP OF ARCTIC WEATHER

Coldest Point Reported in Quebec With 24 Below Zero

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 17.—All Canada, with the exception of the Provinces of British Columbia and Alberta, was today shivering in the close embrace of an almost Arctic temperature. The coldest points at 8 a.m., according to the official observatory list, were Quebec, with 24 below zero, and Sault Ste. Marie with 22 below White River, Ont., did not report its 8 a.m. temperature nor the lowest of yesterday, and the suggestion is that the official thermometer in Canada's coldest white town is frozen up. Halifax showed two above zero at 8 a.m., though the thermometer touched zero during the night.

The probabilities give promise of warmer weather tonight and tomorrow in most western provinces, with a continuation of the cold spell everywhere else except in the Maritime Provinces, where gales are prophesied.

NEW FUND FOR UNEMPLOYED VETS. WILL BE JUDICIOUSLY DISTRIBUTED

Matter is Receiving Careful Consideration of Authorities and a System of Allotment Will be Adopted in Near Future.

The distribution of the $40,000,000 allotted to the Dominion Government for the civil reestablishment of the war veterans is a real problem that is confronting the Patriotic Fund authorities, who have the matter under their control.

The system to be adopted for the allotment of this money has not yet been decided, and the authorities are giving it their most careful consideration. The indications are that two classes of people will receive the benefit of the fund. In the first place those returned men who are not receiving pensions and who are out of employment will have to be cared for. Then there are families of veterans who are working but who are unable to earn enough to provide for their wives and children. These people probably require and deserve as much assistance as any.

The opinion has been expressed that any young discharged soldier who is not working either for want of work or for the lack of desire to work, may receive substantial sums of money on request. There is this danger, no doubt, but a local well-informed party stated this morning that efforts will be made to prevent any of the money falling into the hands of undeserving persons.

A man on making application for aid from this fund will, in all probability, if present intentions are put into effect, be called upon to state why he is out of employment. If it is because of pride or indifference, or some other similar reason, the question confronting those responsible for the distribution is whether or not such a person is entitled to public benefits. If the desires of the Patriotic Association are carried out a thorough investigation of such cases will be made both with the ex-soldier and also with his former employer. They are particularly anxious no public money will be wasted and they are equally determined to give fair play and all possible benefits to the needy.

And the question of using the money to aid families who are suffering as a result of the war is to be considered before definite instructions are issued regarding the distribution. There are some returned men, examples are found in our own city, who are faithfully endeavoring to supply the necessities of life to their home, but who, on account of adverse conditions of various kinds are unable to buy fuel and food, as requested. These, of all people, require the financial assistance from this branch of the public treasury.

The Patriotic Fund officials realize fully the responsibility of their new duties. They realize that there will be difficulty in treating all in fairness and putting the money to the best advantage. Within a short time a definite system or programme will be adopted and announced, and undoubtedly this new fund will do a great deal toward alleviating the hardships and suffering through which many in this community are passing.

SIR ROBERT URGED TO RETAIN OFFICE

Cabinet Colleagues Suggest That He Take Prolonged Rest, No Official Information Given Out.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—Urgent representations have been made to Sir Robert Borden by his Cabinet colleagues that he should retain the Premiership at a Cabinet Council meeting, and it is understood the Premiers' retirement was discussed and the suggestion has been made that he should take an extended holiday. It is possible an official statement will be issued after the Council meeting, scheduled for this afternoon.

Although Sir Robert himself declines to make a statement, doubt is expressed by his friends whether the condition of his health will permit him to accept proposal made by his colleagues. While Sir Robert is in attendance at his office every day and is able to attend to the lighter duties, it is questionable if even a further holiday would enable him to re-assume a prolonged strain.

NO OFFICIAL INFORMATION.

An entire absence of any official intimation relative to the retirement of Sir Robert was still the outstanding feature at the Capital. That there is much activity behind the scenes it is generally known, but it is impossible to ascertain what moves are being made. Sir Robert had a number of callers again today at his office and was in conference for some time with N. W. Rowell. Around the East Block the names of Hon. J. A. Calder and Hon. Arthur Meighen are still most prominently mentioned as the likely successor to the Premier should he insist on retiring.

ST. THOMAS TEACHERS GET A $200 INCREASE

MINNIMUM SALARY FOR LADY TEACHERS NOW $850 AND MAXIMUM $1,200.

St. Thomas, Dec. 17.—The Board of Education at its final meeting yesterday dealt with the petition from the public school teachers of the city for a $300 increase in salary, and compromised by giving them a $200 boost all round. This makes the minimum salary for lady teachers $850 and the maximum $1,200, except in the cases of teachers who have been on the local staff twenty years or more, who receive honorariums of $100 a year extra. The Assistant Principals and male Principals also shared in the increase. The petition from the Collegiate Institute staff to have their salaries put on a par with those of the London Collegiate wasn't considered last night, and will undoubtedly be left over until the 1920 board is organized.

Ottawa, Dec. 17.—The following statement on the coal situation was issued to-day by the Canadian Trade Commission:

"The Canadian Trade Commission was notified yesterday that all restrictions on the movement of coal and coke from the United States to Canada have been removed by the United States Railroad Administration."

This means that all coal and coke billed to consignees in Canada, which has not been confiscated or otherwise diverted, will soon begin to move towards the Canadian frontier. Such coal and coke, however, will still be subject to confiscation by United States and Canadian authorities should such action be necessary in order to keep the public utilities and essential industries going.

HAMILTON CITY SOLICITOR DECLARES IT WOULD BE BREECH OF AGREEMENT

Hamilton, Dec. 17.—The Board of Control yesterday took the first step in its campaign to fight the proposal for a flat rate for all Hydro users. City Solicitor Waddell stated that if the Hydro Commission established one rate for all municipalities it would violate the agreements it had made with the municipalities, and he recommended that representations to this effect be made to the Government.

CHARGE POLICE WITH BRIBERY

DEFENSE IN WINNIPEG TRIAL MAKES SERIOUS CHARGES AGAINST CROWN

WITNESS PAID TO PERJURE

WILL BE BROUGHT TO WINNIPEG TO TESTIFY ON JUDGE'S ORDER

Winnipeg, Dec. 17.—Following a day of sensations at the trial of Robert Russell, charged with seditious conspiracy, the defense opened its case last night. At yesterday afternoon's session J. E. Bird, second counsel for Russell, made the deliberate charge that the Crown had bribed a witness to testify against the man on trial and the other strike leaders who are to be tried, and produced a number of letters in support of the allegation.

The Charge of the Defense

In brief, the charge was made that the Crown had offered to pay $500 to a Ukrainian named Harry Dashaluk, formerly a secret service agent of the R. N. W. M. P., for certain testimony. Dashaluk is now at Vancouver, where he had been sent, it was alleged after he had given evidence at Winnipeg against a Russian named Alamazoff who was up for deportation last spring.

According to letters which passed between the Social Relief Department of the City of Vancouver and the same organization at Winnipeg Dashaluk was said to have been paid $100 for the evidence he had given, and was to get the remainder of the $500 for testifying at the present trial. He had refused to come to Winnipeg, however. One of the letters from Winnipeg to Vancouver, which was produced in court, credited Col. Stearns of the R. N. W. M. P. with having admitted that Dashaluk was to get $500 for his evidence

False, Says the Crown

A. J. Andrews, for the Crown, referred to the charges in the letters as absolutely false. The defense asked Mr. Justice Metcalfe to have Dashaluk brought to Winnipeg to give evidence, and the Judge ordered his arrest on a Bench warrant, so that he be brought to Winnipeg as a witness.

The letters also alleged that Dashaluk had been prosecuted in Vancouver Jail in order to force him to carry out the alleged bargain with the Crown.

WOMEN'S COUNCIL URGES INCREASE

SUPPORT TORONTO LADY TEACHERS IN THEIR DEMANDS FOR MORE PAY

MANY UNQUALIFIED TEACHERS

BETTER REMUNERATION WOULD INCREASE STANDARD OF PROFESSION

Toronto, Dec 17.—The speedy and substantial increasing of the salaries of women teachers in the city of Toronto was the first question of vital interest discussed by the local Council of Women at their meeting held yesterday afternoon at Sherbourne House Club. The subject was introduced by the reading of a letter from the teachers of Toronto, asking for the support of the local Council in their attempt to procure more adequate pay for their services.

In an animated discussion in which many participated, it was pointed out that the profession of teaching in the country as a whole is falling into disrepute. Whereas some years ago many girls in colleges and high schools looked forward to teaching, now practically a very small percentage consider it at all as a possible calling. It has been estimated that one teacher in seven throughout the Province is not fully qualified, and the difficulty of procuring well-educated and capable instructors is increasing.

The necessity for making the profession more alluring and of giving salaries sufficient to attract and retain the proper persons in it was emphasized.

Mrs. L. A. Hamilton suggested that propaganda work is needed in small centres and in rural districts in order to educate trustees to the necessity of paying larger salaries to efficient workers. She felt, too, that all eyes were on Toronto, and that the stand taken by this city in its own local school situation was of great importance.

Mrs. Groves, a member of the Toronto Board of School Trustees, assured the meeting that in Toronto there is not one teacher on the public school staff who is not fully qualified. The minimum salary, she stated, was raised last year to $800 and the maximum to $1,500.

The raising of the minimum wage was felt by some not to be so desirable as the rapid increasing of salaries wherever teachers proved themselves painstaking and efficient.

In the end a resolution was brought forward, in which the local Council of Women pledged its sympathy and support to the women teachers of Toronto in their effort to secure better remuneration.

COLDEST TODAY AT NOON

Thermometer Dropped to Nearly 15 Degrees Below at Eleven O'clock.

This has been without exception the coldest day this season by several degrees. The temperature of the day has been unusual in more ways than one. At 8 o'clock this morning it was about 11 degrees below zero. It gradually grew colder during the morning, until at 11 a.m it reached 15 below zero, where it remained durin gthe noon hour. Later on in the afternoon it rose again to the 11 below mark, where it rested at the time of going to press. As the probabilities read "fair and cold on Thursday," what remains in store for the people in the nature of extreme temperature remains to be seen.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 17. — According to records at the City Hall to-day there is a slight improvement in the smallpox situation. Thirty-nine new cases were reported and forty-three discharged as cured. There are now here under treatment 751 cases and 1 801 persons are quarantined.

THOUSANDS ARE SURPRISED THAT THE WORLD DID NOT COME TO AN END

Superstitious Were Influenced by the Prediction of Universal Catostrophe Made for Today by College Professors and Astrologers.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec 17.—Astonishment was expressed by the superstitious when the earth did not come to an end today. The ominous position of the planets had been well press-agented, and some astrologists and persons versed in witchcraft had maintained that at the precise moment when the solar system formed itself into a straight line with Neptune, Saturn, Jupiter, Mars, Venus and Mercury on one side and Uranus on the other, something awful would happen to the earth. Interest in the prediction of Prof. Albert F. Porta, a meteorologist, made some weeks ago, has been widespread, and reports from many towns today tell of increased attendance at churches this morning and of other happenings indicating the impression made upon the minds of a great many people.

Harold Jacoby, professor of astronomy at Columbia University, along with many other scientists, maintained that the effect upon the earth of the planetary alignment would be nil.

GERMAN DELEGATES STILL HOLD OUT FOR EASIER TERMS OF PEACE

Compensation for Loss of Ships Sunk at Scapa Flow Still Subject of Contention--Austria to be Saved From Starvation by Allied Loan of Seventy Million.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 17.—Germany's claim in connection with the settlement of peace terms was again before the Supreme Council today. The Council reached a unanimous decision to permit the Germans to collect customs duties in gold.

In further discussion of the question of compensation for the sinking of the German ships at Scapa Flow a discrepancy developed between the estimates of the reparations committee and those of the German experts regarding the mercantile tonnage and floating docks available for reparation purposes at German ports. It amounted to about 100,000 tons.

Meet Again Today.

The Allied and German naval experts will meet again this afternoon to discuss the Scapa Flow question. The Germans are semi-officially reported as having first asked a reduction in the quantity of dock material demanded by the Allies, and to have made a second proposition to the effect that they should deliver to the Allies units of shipping construction now under way instead of the material referred to in the protocol.

Millions for Austria.

After further consideration today of Austria's requirements for the relief of her distressing food condition, the Supreme Council decided that it would be necessary to furnish relief to the amount of $70,000,000 at least, the relief to go forward at the rate of $9,500,000 monthly. Belief was expressed by the Austrian delegation that the total sum necessary would reach one hundred millions, which is the amount Chancellor Renner yesterday asked the Council to [illegible] to Austria.

GALT MAIL SERVICE IS DISORGANIZED

BUSINESS MEN COMMUNICATE WITH POST OFFICE AUTHORITIES

Galt, Dec. 17.—At the board of trade meeting last night there was considerable discussion over poor mail service now being given Galt as a result of the cancellation of Grand Trunk trains. Manufacturers complained that letters mailed at Toronto were not received until three days later. Because of the seriousness of the situation it was decided to take immediate action, and the post office authorities will be communicated with at once.

PREMIER BORDEN TO ISSUE STATEMENT

RECEIVED VISITORS YESTERDAY AND ATTENDED MEETING

Ottawa, Dec. 17. — Sir Robert Borden will answer a number of questions which are being asked at the present moment it is understood, by issuing a statement today dealing with the unofficial announcements that he has determined to retire from public life. The Prime Minister was at his office yesterday attending to correspondence and saw a number of callers. During the morning he had a brief conference with the Governor-General in the latter's office in the East Block. The conversation, he smilingly asserted afterward was "without significance." During the afternoon the Prime Minister attended the meeting for a time, but left before the session ended.

WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 17, 1919

WAR ON WOMEN CANDIDATES.

MRS. W. R. MORRIS announces her candidacy for a position on the Board of Education, and no one for a moment who knows her is likely to question her qualifications for the place. She has been identified with every public movement during her residence in the city and is a lady of recognized administrative ability. Besides this, she is an ex-teacher, having taught for some years, previous to her marriage, in the Windsor schools, than which there are no better in Ontario. Mrs. Morris, in a strong field, appeared among the candidates one year ago, and without an organization of any kind and with no preparation to speak of, missed success only by a narrow margin.

If Mrs. Morris had received bare justice, if she had been the recipient of the official courtesy that is extended to men on such occasions, she would not now be under the necessity of undertaking another campaign, but would have been holding office for the year 1920 as the successor of Mr. G. N. Gordon, who resigned his position last midsummer. By long-established precedent the Board should have appointed to the vacancy then created the defeated candidate who headed the list of losers. This would have given the place to Mrs. Morris, but at least a majority of the male members are opposed to having a woman among them, because, in their estimation, forsooth, that would lower the stately dignity of their proceedings.

The members of the Board gave it out that they wanted an associate of experience. The argument was not without force, but its strength was weakened when the vacancy was peddled on the streets and offered, only to be refused, to men who had never held a public office of any kind. Finally, an ex-member of the Board was prevailed upon to accept the place, but he has resigned giving the heroic reason that the people themselves should be given the right to elect a member at the coming election.

Under the law this, it appears, cannot be done. There is no provision in the Act for electing a member to fill a vacancy on the School Board, no matter when such vacancy occurs. Appointment by the Board is mandatory. The place made vacant by the resignation of Mr Gordon and later by the voluntary retirement of Mr. Eastwood, cannot be filled other than by appointment of the Board.

It has been openly charged that this program was adopted by members of the Board to make it difficult for a woman candidate to secure a membership, and if that was the real object it has been attained. Mrs Morris is constrained to enter the race again. No matter what the result, the new Board in 1920 will have a vacancy to fill by appointment. If Mrs. Morris fails of election again, no matter how close she may come to success, her chances are negligible if the members whose terms expire this year are re-elected.

Is Peterborough, as a city, so far behind the age that it is necessary to discuss the desirability of electing women to the School Board. That is a proposition that has long since emerged from the experimental stage. It has been given practical effect in other cities and its success is no longer a matter of doubt. Only a few years ago Toronto began with one lady member and now has three, the original candidate, Dr. Caroline Brown having been re-elected at every subsequent appeal to the people. For two years Dr. Brown held the chairmanship of the property committee, an important post in a city the size of Toronto, and discharged her duties in a manner so satisfactory as to excite the admiration not only of her associates but of the electorate at large.

The majority of the teachers in the city are women. They complain that their services are not adequately recognized and that their compensation is out of all proportion to that allowed the men on the staff. The women teachers cannot hope to secure justice until they have one of their own members at court to take up their cause. And if such a representative has an actual teaching record to her credit, so much the better.

MR. G. N. GORDON AGAIN.

MR. G. N. GORDON to the contrary notwithstanding, it is impossible to govern a city by writing letters to a newspaper. There is always existent in the minds of a public prone to be skeptical that one of the real, if not the chief object in view is mere personal aggrandisement by securing free advertising. Mr. Gordon may be given to lofty speech from the housetop addressed to the masses struggling below, but the citizens would have more faith in his professions if he would only condescend to take off his coat, roll up his sleeves and get into the thick of the fray himself. There are others in the same class, although Mr. Gordon may be regarded as Grand Master in the art of counsel addressed to his fellow mortals. For years he has assumed the role of critic-in-oratory and chief censor of public affairs in this city. What has he in any of the public offices that he has held ever really accomplished in the matter, for instance, of keeping down the tax rate? With him a ready excuse always has been that he has never been able to devote the necessary time to public office on account of the driving nature of his private business. That being the case, men of large affairs who are willing to make personal sacrifice on behalf of the city should be spared the verbal shafts of those who are satisfied to merely talk.

Nothing can be gained by a policy which in effect means the traducing of the city. Municipal conditions are largely a question of comparison, and in the matter of debenture debt, tax rate, rents and the like, Peterborough is likely to hold its own fairly well when these features as they exist in other cities are considered.

Others have loaded the heavy artillery that Mr. Gordon now proceeds to explode. There is nothing in his past somewhat varied official record to show, so far as we can recall, any valiant attempt to make war on the system of bonusing industries, granting them fixed assessments, tax exemption and the like. Recent events, however, have shown that attacking this system has attained a certain degree of popularity, and with an eye to the future, Mr. Gordon, as usual, proceeds to elbow himself into a place on the bandwagon that has already moved sufficiently to indicate the general direction.

But what any city requires is public-spirited men, willing to act rather than to merely advise or criticise.

ALD. EDGAR'S VISION.

IT WAS NO FANCY picture that Ald. Edgar at the Council meeting the other night painted of the future Riverside Park, of what can be made of that resort if the electors authorise its purchase. What he portrayed is in every detail easily possible of attainment. The place can be made an ideal pleasure resort for the adults and children of Peterborough. Its location leaves nothing to be desired. The park, as Ald. Edgar says, can be intersected with canals large enough to accommodate row-boats, these canals to be crossed by rustic bridges. Other cities have done as much with less natural advantages as a basis of operation; then why not Peterborough? The adjacent islands in the river will make invaluable adjuncts to the proposed playground. There will always be room, too, for the baseball diamond that has afforded so much healthy recreation for the citizens and has helped to make this community famous in the world of legitimate athletics.

There is little doubt as to the success of the park purchase bylaw if the ratepayers can only be impressed with the opportunity which knocks at their door. The members of the Council have provided for this by deciding to have pictures made of the park as it exists now and to give some idea of future improvements, these pictures to be shown in the moving picture houses. No better method could possibly be devised for reaching the general public and of creating the necessary measure of popular enthusiasm for the proposition. Peterborough seems to be on the threshold of a larger and better civic life, the credit for the development belonging to the initiative of the Board of Trade backed up by the hearty co-operation of the City Council. The organization of a Civic Improvement Commission marks a long step in advance, and the personnel of this commission as selected by Mayor Duncan assures results from the beginning.

With Riverside Park a civic possession, the city of Peterborough will not lack for playgrounds either in numbers or as to variety. Every section of the city will be represented. It is understood that the Exhibition Board are to make substantial improvements to their spacious grounds, so that the people of the south end will have a resort at all seasons of the year second to none in the community. The Nicholls Oval is in a class by itself, and Jackson Park is without an equal of its kind in Central Ontario. Its chief charm is in the fact that it exists in a state of nature. To attempt to add artificial attraction would simply spoil the general effect. As it is it is surpassingly unique.

Perhaps the citizens as a class do not avail themselves of the local parks as they should. There is a reason. The very people who on Sundays would enjoy an outing in these places are unable to reach them except on foot, and the distance for the majority is too great. But the day is coming when blue laws will be relaxed, when Sunday street car service in small cities will not be regarded as a mortal sin, when the poor man's carriage will be permitted the same degree of liberty of opertaion as that allowed the automobile or horse-propelled vehicle of the rich.

Why Not Pay Salaries To Aldermen?

(Calgary Albertan)

The Calgary Herald opposes the payment of aldermen because it says that the city can get good men to serve the city without pay. That is true.

If we removed the salaries for members of parliament or for cabinet ministers in Province and Dominion, without doubt we could find men who would serve the country without pay.

But that is not democratic. The Herald would limit the City Council to men who can afford to serve without pay. The men and women who can give up half of their time to the city without considerable sacrifice are very limited. Why have proportional representation, and make effort to have a representative council, if we straightway make conditions so undemocratic that only a very few of our people can afford to be in the council, and a representative board practically impossible.

If we go back over the last ten years, we find that the average term of service for a Calgary alderman has been less than three years. The reason is that few aldermen can afford to serve for any long term. No alderman gets into his stride, and is doing really good service for the city with less than two years experience. If non-payment of aldermen means an inexperienced board, which is certain, then it is false economy for the citizens not to pay the aldermen for the service which they give to the city. We are paying dearly for our mistaken economy.

70,000 MOONSHINE STILLS IN U. S.

Illicit distillation of liquors has increased to an alarming degree since the prohibition law went into effect, 70,000 such stills being in use in the United States today, according to a statement sent out yesterday by the Association Opposed to National Prohibition.

Crime, according to the same statement, has increased in practically every State of the Union, and all the courts are crowded. The dry laws have been violated to an extent never known before and liquor is still being sold openly in stores in various large cities.

"Figures recently issued by the federal government in Washington," says the statement, "reveal official knowledge of the great increase in the breaking of the national dry laws, so great an increase that if it is followed by what appears to be the natural complement, the breaking of all other laws in proportion, the United States would seem on the verge of a national carnival of crime.

Many Illicit Stills Seized.

"The number of illicit stills seized by the Federal Government during the fiscal year ended June 30, with prohibition only over half of the country, was 6,989, which is three times the average in prior years. The Government has refused to state the number of stills seized during the six months since June 30, but it is conservatively estimated by Washington observers that these figures will show 100 per cent. inirease over the first six months of the year.

"Figures for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1918, which were not issued by the Government last year, have just been made public. They show that during that year the number of stills seized by Federal agents was 3,487, an increase of 50 per cent. over the previous year.

"In property values the seizures made by the Federal officials during the last fiscal year were $2,022,203, an increase of more than one hundred per cent. over the $854,274 of the year before that. During the fiscal year 1917-1918 the Government figures show that 155,640 gallons of distilled liquors were seized with a value of $600,000. The seized plants were worth $195,359. Wine to the amount of 35,000 gallons were confiscated. The figures for 1918-1919 show a decided increase. The value of the plants seized was $617,647 and the whiskey and wine confiscated amounted to $1,200,000 worth.

Georgia Greatest Law Breaker.

"Georgia heads the list of States with 2,006 seizures of the last fiscal year and 798 for the previous year. Georgia was carried for prohibition in 1908 and became 'bone dry' in 1916. Her number of seizures, 2,006, is about equal to that for the entire country prior to the advent of 'bone dry' conditions. Second on the list is North Carolina with 1,524 seizures for the last fiscal year, and Alabama is next with 752. These two States were the first to become 'bone dry.'

"Every State in the Union shows a number of seizures, New York being represented by 62 seizures, while Washington, where enforcement has been lax, had 64 seizures. The Government officials state that the experience of the last few years shows that for every illicit plant seized ten others exist, which would mean that there are in operation in the United States at the present time 70,000 plants, with a total value for plants and stocks and materials on hand of approximately $20,000,000.

Mainly About People

The oldest man in Ohio, "Uncle Billy" Peyton, celebrated his 127th. birthday this autumn, by cutting corn that was still standing near his home at Little Hocking, where he lives with his granddaughter in a house that he built with his own hands.

He hasn't any use for automobiles or trains and spurns all invitations to ride to Parkersburg, eight miles away where he goes several times each year, always negotiating the eight miles each way on foot. He is an inveterate smoker, his clay pipe being his constant companion.

When six years old he was sold as a slave, and for thirty-nine years worked for his master in the Virginia coal mines. As is usual with very old people, he remembers dates and incidents of a 100 years ago better than does he those of twenty-five years ago, and personally knows the history of slavery from the time of its inception until the Civil War.

He also can recall vividly the days of Indian massacres, when the first pioneer settlers of Ohio crossed the Ohio River from West Virginia prior to 1800 and built their stockades along the Ohio and Muskingum rivers.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

A DRUG STORE THAT SELLS $1000 PHONOGRAPHS

When it comes to selling a $1000 talking a machine, Thomas Young, proprietor of the Economy Drug Store, in Pendleton, Oregon, "eats his cake and has it, too." He not only gets the tempting profit that comes from the sale of such a machine, but also an extra benefit that can be measured in dollars and cents.

For two years the Economy has handled two nationally known phonographs. Without even making an outside solicitation, Young has built up a business that has increased considerably the average sales amount of his store—even if one includes the postage stamp and "thank you" sales. At the rear of his store, separated from the main portion by neat French windows, is his demonstration room for machines and records. This is furnished tastefully and finished in white with reed furniture for the comfort of patrons. The room bears the label" "Your Rest Room," and it is very easy indeed to walk back to look at a machine or try a record—and Young and Mrs. Young, who assists him in this particular line, make it a rule to invite every patron who promises to be a prospect for a machine.

About the middle of October Mr. Young was courageous enough to put into the upper display room, located on a balcony above the restroom, a period-design machine that cost $1000. He realized that while his list of logical prospects for that particular machine was limited to a very, very few of the wealthier Pendleton residents, there were hundreds who would at least like to take a look. Therefore he placed an advertisement in a Pendleton newspaper calling attention to the machine—and mentioning the price. The next day many called and asked if they might take a look at the machine.

To others who happened in Young extended an invitation to "step up and see the finest talking machine that ever came to town." It was a compliment. Sure they'd go! They looked and told others, and that afternoon Mr. Young sold three machines and had another halfway on the way to a consummated sale. Not thousand-dollar machines, but partly the fruit of the thousand-dollar machine.

That evening, when he mentioned the machine to a man, the latter went for his wife. They saw the machine and it was not long before the woman got to the point where she had figured out satisfactorily the location of the machine in her home.

MAKING QUICK TIME ON SMALL ITEMS

No trouble to locate the little items in the store of the Bennett Hardware Co., Long Beach, Calif. Each side of four counters is fitted with drawers, the front of which are painted white. On each, in alphabetical order, is stamped the name of the item contained. Took a bit of time to fix, but saved a lot of time later when the time was needed.

Another practical system is that of a neighbor, the Live Hardware Co., South Pasadena, Calif. This firm uses a number of drawers against the wall. At the left, reading from top to bottom, a series of numbers is lettered opposite the rows of drawers. Then across the top, one letter to a tier of drawers, is a row of letters. It works just like a map. An index book is kept hanging near, in which under the proper initial is listed each item in the drawers. If a man asks for a fuller ball the salesman turns to "F." There he finds the item listed, say, under "G—6." He finds the horizontal row "G"; then locates the perpendicular row "6," and there is the proper drawer. Very simple.

"YARD OF CHOCOLATES" SOLVED CONFECTIONER'S PROBLEM

Visitors to St. Paul and Minneapolis are often amazed to see scores of men on their way home on Saturday night with a very long and narrow box tucked under their arms.

"What on earth could such a box contain?" they wonder. "It's too short for a cane or umbrella. Looks more like an elongated edition of those packages used for chocolate peppermints."

The last guess isn't far out of the way, for the boxes in question contain a "yard of chocolates," made by J. George Smith, "confectioner of the Twin Cities, U. S. A.," as he styles himself.

This unusual idea in packing goods occurred to Smith on day when he was considering ways and means for advertising his store to the general public, advertising it by the way in which his confections were boxed as well as through the use of newspaper space.

"There's nothing as standardized as the usual candy box," Smith concluded, "and unless on use a distinctive wrapping paper it's virtually impossible to hammer home the name of our store to the people who merely see your package. Even then, when the paper is removed, the recipient of the gift is much more interested in the contents of the box than in the name that appears thereon. If we could devise some unusual form of box—something which by its shape, would be immediately identified with Smith's—that would the difficulty."

The "yard of chocolates" was the answer, and also the reason why hundreds of men carry home these long boxes every Saturday night, and scores of them are sold every day in the week. The instant that a resident of either of the Twin Cities sees one of these packages, even though it's wrapped and no name appears, he knows that it came from Smith's, and the thought of candy springs into his mind.

USING A "VILLAGE" TO SELL ELECTRIC BULBS

Fred Walk, decorator for Jere Woodring & Co., in Hazleton, Pa., during a big drive to interest buyers in electrical goods carried by the hardware firm, bought business in faster than it could be handled because he screened the glare of the globes.

The Woodring window was fixed up to represent a suburban village, with church, bell, bungalows and mansions properly tinted and painted to give the effect of buildings in actual use. Walks were laid on the floor of the window, creating the suggestion of paved roads.

Inside each "building" was placed a big lamp and the concealed wiring was used to keep this burning at night. Every window in the church, hall and dwellings was a beacon light for a block, thanks to the tremendous candlepower of the bulbs, and gave the passersby occular proof of the illuminating possibilities of the globes.

The rest of the window was kept dark, so that at night, the little village presented the appearance of a town a long distance off.

"SPECIAL DELIVERY"

When it put on a sale of shirts of better grades, The Leader, of Mount Vernon, Ill., decided to weed out prospects who would not be interested and go after the logical prospects in a way to get their attention. Accordingly, almost a hundred letters were printed and delivered to business and professional men and others of the town who would be interested. The messages were delivered by Western Union messengers and addressed to the men. The shirts were sold.

EMISSARY OF SATAN SPEAKS

Sworn Foe of Industrial Content, the Rumor Monger, Glories in Fomenting Social Unrest.

I am the Rumor Monger.

Borne on the winds of Hades from the halls of his Satanic Majesty, I wander among you credulous mortals and spread dissension.

Suspicion and envy are my bodyguards, and I am the sworn enemy of Industrial Content.

From North to South, and from East to West, I carry my whisperings to the ears of the workers, and I revel in hellish delight in the social unrest that I bring about.

I am the devoted follower of Ananias, and oh, how I hate the Truth!

I delight in fanning the red flames of Anarchy with the seeds of Malcontent.

My propaganda is conceived in restless minds and given shape and life by fertile imaginations. Veracity and facts are strangers to me, and I seek only the ears of the impressionable sons of Adam. Sometimes I almost blush at the ease with which I arouse their suspicions through my airy vaporings, and I am forced to admit that a thrill of pride runs through me from the tips of my pointed ears to the end of my tail.

Whenever I begin operations production immediately slackens, for my imps are indefatigable in their efforts to obstruct.

After the first injection of my serum willing muscles lose their pep, and a frown replaces the smile of contentment.

My campaign thus far in the world has been fairly successful, and if the workers who are possessed with common sense and wisdom do not expose my methods I expect to be decorated upon my return with the Medal of Dissension and Legion of Untruth by His Satanic Majesty, the King of Hades, the last ruling survivor of the House of Beelzebub.—Speed Up, the magazine of the Submarine Boat corporation, Newark shipyard.

THE ALEUTS.

A Peculiar Tribe Lives in the Far North.

Peculiar in their way were thirteen mummies found a while ago in a cave on Ragamil Island, which is one of the Aleutian chain. They were wrapped in skins and nets; but the remarkable point about them was that the cavern which served them as a burial vault was steam-heated. In coldest winter weather it was kept warm by volcanic fires.

Eleven of these thirteen mummies are now in the National Museum at Washington. They are completely desiccated.

It is supposed that the ancestors of the present-day Aleuts mummified their dead, not for any religious reason, as did the Egyptians of old, but because they did not want to part with them. Their method was to wrap their defunct relatives in the skins and intestinal membranes of sea mamals, place them in a squatting attitude on wooden trays, and hang them up in dry caves.

Many of these mummies that have been found are undoubtedly very ancient; but of the origin and early history of the Aleuts nothing whatever is known. Some authorities are of opinion that they came from Japan. At the present time they are much mixed, racially speaking.

They spoke the Russian language at the time when, in 1867, the Aleutian Islands passed with Alaska, into the possession of the United States. Then, until 1884, they were left to themselves and governed themselves. They have now forgotten the Russian tongue, and are becoming Americanized. Most of them live in clean wooden houses and wear continental clothes. The women weave wonderful fabrics of grass, so finely plaited as to resemble silk.

Hints on Painting.

For the purpose of keeping flies and other insects away from freshly painted surfaces, mix a little bay oil with the oil paint or else place a small amount in an open dish nearby. The pungent odor will drive all insects away.

A very simple way to prevent or remove spots from a ceiling colored by an accidental water overflow is to take unslaked white lime, diluted with alcohol, and paint the spots with it. The alcohol will evaporate quickly and the lime will form an insulating layer that will take the size color and the spots will not show through.

To prevent the peeling of new coatings on old paintings proceed as follows: Rub the painting with rough pumice stone, wet by means of felt, then add to the paint of the first coat one part alcohol and nine parts paint. This paint will dry well and give very good results, even in the most difficult cases. The remaining coatings are put on with the regular paint.

To prevent the crawling of the paint, carefully rub a flannel rag over the work previous to varnishing, stripping or painting. This simple operation will prevent the crawling. In some cases crawling may be traced to defective varnish. The only remedy in this case is to obtain good varnish.

To prevent liquid paint, kept in flat receptacles in small quantities, from evaporating and drying place the dishes of paint one on top of the other with the underside lined with felt or very porous clay. The felt or clay should be moistened. In this manner a moist atmosphere will be produced that will prevent the paint from becoming dry and keep it from evaporating.—Illustrated World.

"H. C. of L." in Nelson's Day.

The returned soldier, who is disgusted to find how horribly dear everything is, will enjoy this story of Horatio Nelson.

The admiral was dining with Beckford, the author of "Vathek," and a very rich man. Owing to the great scarcity of wheat, even such folk often denied themselves bread at dinner. Lord Nelson asked for bread, and when told by a servant that bread was not served at Mr. Beckford's table, he look ed angry, drew from his pocket a shilling, and sent his own servant to buy a loaf, observing that, having fought for his bread, he was not going to be denied it by his fellow countrymen.

Dearth of Queen Bees in England

Beekeeping in England was badly hit by the war, for the scarcity of sugar made it impossible to supply the hives with syrup for winter feeding. It is estimated that owing to this and other war causes, the bee population of England has been reduced by 75 per cent. Last year, in spite of the war, England paid nearly fourteen million dollars for imported honey, so now the food production department of the government has decided to import queen bees from Italy and in other ways help to restore the industry.

CANADIAN RUNS N. Y. HOTELS

The Story of John M. Bowman Reads Like a Romance.

John M. Bowman, the Toronto man who went to New York without any money, and just looking for a job, and who now operates six great New York hotels and two resort hotels elsewhere, has had a career like a movie hero. Mr. Bowman is frequently in Toronto, though known by comparatively few people in that city. The November American Magazine tells his story:

"Only a comparatively few years ago he was driving a truck in New York! Later, he broke saddle horses. But always he had the idea that he was cut out for the hotel business. Any other kind of work he regarded as temporary—as a means to an end. But no matter how humble the job, Bowman contrived to use it in some way for permanent gain.

"Even his first little job, doing errands for his grandmother, taught him something of definite value.

"In his native town, Toronto, was a factory that had wood shavings to give away, and Bowman's grandmother liked these for starting a fire in the kitchen stove. So she would often ask him to go to the factory and fetch her a large burlap sack full of shavings. Young Bowman did not like this at all. He did not mind the physical effort so much, but he imagined that he looked ridiculously undignified bearing a bulky sack of shavings through the streets.

"However, he willingly did as his grandmother desired because of the twenty-five-cent piece he knew she would give him. Gradually it dawned on him that there was nothing undignified about the task, that no honest labor, to gain money one needs, is undignified. In fact, he came to feel that boys who loafed about the street corners and occasionally laughed at him, while doing nothing themselves, were really less dignified than he.

"This wholesome view about useful work has clung to him ever since. When the Biltmore was under construction and there was some question about its being ready to be opened on schedule, Bowman, who was to be its manager, used to put on old clothes and climb about over the building to see what was going on.

On the day that it was thrown open to the public, there was a lot of confusion about the turning on of water into certain pipes. And the only man who knew exactly where each valve was located and where each pipe led was Bowman himself. He was obliged to put on a pair of overalls and personally take charge of the plumbing emergency.

"Bowman's first hotel job was at a little resort in the Adirondacks, when he was only nineteen years old. Because of the short season there, he desired a permanent place at some good hotel in New York City. A wealthy man gave him a letter of introduction to the manager of what was then one of the best hotels in New York, a place that Bowman had thought a suitable field for his talents.

"He mailed the letter of introduction to the hotel manager, and requested permission to call. But he got no response. He wrote again and asked for the return of his letter of introduction. Even then he got no reply, and he formed a strong opinion about the character of the man who had exhibited what seemed to him such gross and needless discourtesy.

Years later Bowman became president and directing manager of the company that took over that same hotel, and his first official act was to discharge the manager who had failed to answer his letter. He did not discharge him to vent personal spleen, but because he thought the man lacked that sense of courtesy and consideration which should be among the qualifications of a successful manager.

"Having failed to get the hotel job he sought in New York, Bowman had to do whatever work he could find. Frequently he was obliged to be so economical that each meal was a genuine problem.

"Later he secured work at the Holland House under one Gustav Baumann. Baumann headed a company that put up the Hotel Biltmore and Bowman was to be its manager. A few months after the hotel was ready for occupancy, Baumann died. In a short time Bowman had so thoroughly convinced the board of directors of his ability that he not only was permanently retained as manger, but was made president of the company.

Then he branched out and now operates six great New York hotels—the Biltmore, the Commodore, the Belmont, the Manhattan, the Murray Hill, and the Ansonia. He also controls two great resort hotels — the Belleview at Belleair, Florida, and the Griswold at New London, Connecticut. Mr. Bowman is 43 years old."

Birthdays Forbid Marriage.

A curious idea among the Burmese is that people born on the same day of the week must not marry, and that if they defy the fates their union will be marked by much ill luck. To prevent these disastrous marriages, every girl carries a record of her birthday in her name, each day of the week having a letter belonging to it, and all children are called by a name that begins with that letter.

GOLD CUFF LINKS FOR VETERANS AT KEENE

TWENTY-THREE RETURNED SOLDIERS ENTERTAINED BY RESIDENTS

(Special Correspondence)

Keene, Dec. 17.—At the town hall on Wednesday evening of last week the Keene Ladies Patriotic Society, gave a banquet to twenty-three of the retunred soldiers of this school section, their wives and parents, numbering about forty-five in all. Following the supper Dr. Harrison presiding, as each soldier's name was called, every man was presented with solid gold cuff links with initials engraved. Each responded to the presentation with a few appropriate remarks.

The following choruses were sung by the soldiers and guests: "It's a Long Way to Tipperary," "Keep the Home Fires Burning," "We'll Never Let the Old Flag Fall" and the "Maple Leaf," after which the following toasts were in order being on the programme:

Toast—To King and Country, Dr. Harrison.

Toast—Women Workers, Rev. Mr. McEwchern, John Moore.

TO EAT OR NOT TO EAT

Dyspeptics Often Face This Problem Three Times Daily — Not So If They Once Get Acquainted With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Indigestion, with gas, sour risings, belching of wind, feeling as of a lump of lead in the stomach and such distresses make one ponder as to the advisability of starving. But that is a wrong method. A better and safer plan is to be regular at meals, eat what is served for what is tastiest and follow the meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet. It is a bad practice for most people to go against nature by depriving the system of what it must have—food, to keep going. Once you learn how you may eat without stint or fear by using Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets there is little likelihood of our ever joining either that mournful band of starvationists or any other disjointed and out-of-tune company. Get a box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store in the United States and Canada and thus eat and be merry.

DOG SAVES LIVES OF 92 PASSENGERS

TAKES LINE IN MOUTH AND SWIMS THROUGH STORM TOSSED WATERS

Curling, Nfld., Dec. 17.—The passengers and crew of the coastal steamer Ethie, number 92 persons, were brought ashore on a life-line which was run out from the ship by a Newfoundland dog after the vessel hit upon Martin's Point.

Boats could not make the hazardous passage from the stranded steamer. All efforts to shoot the line ashore failed when the line became caught. Men did not dare attempt the trip through the waters, and so the dog was put overboard. The dog bravely took the line in its teeth and battled against the rough sea, the line being released.

With block and tackle the Ethie's crew, aided by fishermen on the shore, rigged a lifesaving device, using a boatswain's chair for a carriage. One by one in this chair 91 of the 92 persons aboard were hauled to safety. A baby sixteen months old was pulled ashore in a mail bag.

The Ethie, which had been engaged in the coastal service between Curling and Labrador ports, went ashore last Wednesday during a gale while bound south. The wreck was not reported here until the shipwrecked passengers and crew arrived from Bonne Bay, all wires having gone down in the storm.

CONDEMNED MEN AWAIT DECISION

FIVE FOREIGNERS AWAIT THE GOVERNMENT'S ACTION WITH CALMNESS

With less than a month between now and the date of execution, the five foreigners in the county jail are awaiting the decision of the Minister of Justice regarding their plea for mercy. It was learned today that as yet no signs of excitement are being displayed by the condemned men and yet their attitude is not one of total despondency.

Their quiet demeanor is difficult to explain, unless they are being buoyed up with hopes of a commutation of their sentence. It is believed, however, that the man who actually did the shooting has practically lost hope of any mercy being shown to him and is waiting for the 14th of January with the calmness of despair.

The chances of the other men may be affected by the fact that there are six others capital cases being now considered by the government. Most of these are also foreigners.

25,000 DELEGATES AT CONVENTION OF U. F. O.

NOTICE IS GIVEN THAT GATHERING IS NOT FOR POLITICAL PURPOSES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 17.—"U.F.O. delegates! This is an annual meeting, not a political convention. Govern your remarks accordingly."

Such is the intimation displayed prominently today at Massey Hall where the United Farmers of Ontario met this morning for the first session of their sixth annual convention, but it is conceded that notwithstanding this slogan the convention will make unto itself a fairly ambitious responsibility with respect to the politics of the Province of Ontario, if not for the whole Dominion of Canada. About 2,500 delegates, representing membership of forty-five thousand, were present.

OVERJOYED MOTHER RECOVERS HER BABY

KIDNAPPER FINDS HIGH COST OF LIVING TOO MUCH FOR BOARDER

New York, Dec. 17.—A search of almost five months for the baby boy of Mr. and Mrs. August Wents, who was two months old when kidnapped on July 30 from in front of a department store in this city, ended last night with his discovery in Bellevue Hospital, where he had been taken on December 8 after being abandoned in the Grand Central Terminal by an unidentified man, presumably the kidnapper. The man left a note pinned to the baby's clothing which read:

"For the love of Mike, somebody take this kid. He is too much for the family. Can't afford him on the price of milk they are charging today. There are others I am trying to support."

Since the infant disappeared its distracted mother had made daily visits to the city's institutions, inspecting every new foundling that was brought in in the hope that it might prove to be her lost baby. Last night she went to Bellevue and found him. The overjoyed woman got to her home as fast as she could to give the news to her husband, who was ignorant even of her daily pilgrimage to the city hospitals. She found the father busily engaged decorating a Christmas tree he had just bought for the other children, and placed the baby at the foot of the tree as an added Christmas gift.

With that [illegible] of pleasant [illegible] that [illegible] charm of a [illegible] photoplay, "[illegible] Enlists," a beautifully [illegible] production, [illegible] an interested audience at the Allen last night. This is a play that can keep an audience guessing as the sequence cannot possibly be detected until it arrives, and the sequence in this case is specially surprising. Mary Pickford, as "Johanna," proves herself well worthy of the title, "Sweet-heart of the world." "Johanna," a rather pretty little girl, with an inquisitive mind and a longing for the things life has denied her, is forced to spend her girlhood days under peculiar and trying conditions. Her lot in life is one of hard labor, grinding monotony and little recreation. Arising at an early hour in the morning, she begins her day's tasks with many half-suppressed yawns, and expressions of displeasure.

Thanks to a peculiar faculty for "getting into things," eight o'clock that hour when most young girls are lifting drowsy heads from scented pillows, finds her well advanced in the day's schedule, having extinguished the fire by accident, shaken salt into the preserves, scalded her hand with boiling water and cut her finger with the bread knife. But the unexpected happens and Johanna is transported into the scenes of happiness, which her fun-loving nature craves and she gradually gets very much in love with life.

This, with a delightful climax, makes "Johanna Enlists" a highly finished production of dramatic art.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN ONTARIO.

Proper Buildings and Equipment Lacking In Rural Communities.

Some years before the war I was visiting in the home of a Scottish dominie, writes Farmerette, in Toronto Globe. He had several energetic sons casting about for congenial employment. One lad was looking to Canada for an opening, with the idea of following his father's profession. But when he heard Canadian prices, Canadian rentals, and the fact that Canada was so crude as to leave schoolmasters unprovided with dwellings, he decided to stay where he was.

Consider the contrast! This lad grew up in a country village where his father had been headmaster for many years. They were provided with a large, comfortable stone house, standing in the middle of a half-acre garden, in addition to £300 salary. That is to say, the dominie's net income would equal $3,200 in Ontario to-day. Is there a single small town paying such a sum?

One must take into account, of course, that Scotland has but one headmaster over one large, well-equipped village school, containing everything from kindergarten to matriculation; where we in Ontario have two headmasters over two more or less indifferently equipped buildings, known as public and high schools.

Whatever the merits of our present system in its infancy, the condition to-day is alarming. No men are entering the profession, and most of the girls are frankly teaching for pin-money, or as a step to some more lucrative profession.

A questionnaire was sent out recently by an enterprising journal to members of the teaching profession all over Canada. It aimed at gathering material for proposed reforms. No answers were forthcoming. A second appeal brought the tact reply from a westerner, that the men already in the profession were too busy worrying over "how to pay their bills" to be bothered about reforms.

Looking at the matter from another angle, one finds two diametrically opposite movements going on. At the same time that the Government schools in the small towns are merely marking time in matters of equipment, attendance, etc., and are confronted with truancy and illiteracy, the private schools in the cities are growing by leaps and bounds. They are filled in the majority of cases by the children of those very people who should be doing most to improve the conditions of the small town school.

Why is this? Mere business. The directors of the private schools have grasped the situation before the small town Trustee Boards. That is all. They saw that the age demands that a modern school shall contain a well-equipped kindergarten, gymnasium, domestic science class, manual training class, and shall provide sanitary surroundings and medical and dental inspection. No small town schools furnish these things. Hence the boom of the private schools.

It does not require very much deep thinking to see that this movement is going to result in class education, to the very great detriment of the poorer sections of the people.

What is the remedy? More money. So long as small towns can get away with a school rate of from three to four dollars per capita, the situation will remain hopeless. But if the Government has the power to force children to attend school up to the age of 14, it has also the power to force parents to provide proper schools.

Once the public schools are brought up to standard in the small towns, the high schools will follow naturally. The children themselves will cease from truancy. But they will demand advanced technical classes, local experimental farm stations, commercial schools and the dozen and one vocational opportunities now utterly out of their reach.

Men of Probity.

Good literature proceeds from men of natural probity, and since one ought rather to praise the inception than the result, you should give greater praise to a man of probity unskilled in letters than one skilled in letters but devoid of probity.—Leonardo da Vinci (translated by Edward McCurdy).

Spirit Meant for All.

That spirit which suffices quiet hearts, which seems to come forth to such from every dry knoll of sere grass, from every pine stump, and half-imbedded stone on which the dull March sun shines, comes forth to the poor and hungry, and to such as are of simple taste.—Emerson.

Consider Probable End.

Better it is, toward the right conduct of life, to consider what will be the end of a thing, than what is the beginning of it; for what promises fair at first may prove ill, and what seems at first a disadvantage may prove very advantageous.—Wells.

PLANT TREES ON PRAIRIES.

Attain Sufficient Growth In Five Years to Hide Buildings.

To trace what one might call the evolution of Western agriculture—that indefinable change characterised by some of the old-timers as devolution with a big "D" and a couple of robust adjectives — would require space far beyond that permitted in a letter of this nature. Indeed, a volume might easily be written describing the wax and wane of "free ranging on a great scale, the slow but inevitable introduction of pasture systems and the inauguration of irrigation in definite "dry" areas. However, taking it by and large, certain very distinct symptoms betray this slow-acting metamorphosis, and of these one of the most striking, if not most general, is the appearance here and there on the bald landscape of groves and windbreaks formed from hand-plantings of trees indigenous to this fertile prairie soil.

Perhaps this feature is most apparent in the Province of Alberta, where a certain roll in the land may in itself suggest to homesteaders the desirability of a small amount of arboriculture. It is not surprising that tree-planting has made great progress in irrigated areas, where artificial watering, possible during a greater part of the summer, conduces to rapid growth even under unfavorable climatic conditions. On irrigated farms all through southern Alberta may be seen homes whose setting is enhanced by long rows of poplars or heavy clumps of soft maple and willows.

One of the most striking illustrations of the beautification of the prairie by tree-planting is to be seen at Strathmore, the headquarters of the western irrigated block of the Canadian Pacific Railway. As the train swings in a wide curve from the great open space beyond, where trees are not and the very grass this year has been parched and sere, there comes into view at the skirts of the little town a vista of rare beauty — brown gables of painted buildings, with red-brick chimneys and white trimmings, evergreens that sweep the sides of curving driveways, clumps of willow and poplar that hide the utilitarian features of a farmyard and stray bits of soft green lawn that charm the eye tired with the endless roll of bare, boundless prairie. It might be, this little spot, a town in old Ontario with its abundance of shade trees and its profusion of flowers. Yet it was, six or seven years ago, a mere staked square in a wilderness of level monotony, a bit of bald prairie ungraced by a single tree or shrub.

"Money did that," I imagine I hear the reader remark. Not at all; probably the actual money cost of the whole ensemble would not run over a few dollars. It is something more than money that brings greenness and beauty and the blessing of shade and velvety lawn to treeless tracts of prairie. Ofttimes, indeed, in these Western lands one finds the most trees and the prettiest flowers and the most inviting homes on farms where money is least thought of, where a far more treasured possession is the memory of an elm-fringed field "down east," with a long lane marked by cedars and balsams, or a great cool maple grove where robins twittered in soft summer noons.

The ordinary man on the ordinary homestead out here is beginning to think in terms of trees and flowers. On the Robson farm near Strathmore, on the Vidal farm near Dalroy, at a score of farms on the Sutherland block and at a dozen other places I saw whole avenues and groves that have been created within a decade. Your Westerner does not set out a tree here and a tree there as does his contemporary who beautifies the surroundings of his Ontario home. Instead, he orders his slips or cuttings by the thousand and plants them by the acre, in windbreaks five or six rows in depth and a mile or two long, or in groves that measure rods on either side, with trees set two feet by two feet all the way across. For, mark you, he need not plant a tree to grow a tree; it is necessary only that he make a hole in the ground with a poker and insert therein a willow slip or a cutting from a poplar. There is something in prairie soil that causes really phenomenal growth in these soft-wood trees. On the Canadian Pacific Demonstration Farm at Brooks I saw acres of trees, literally, that were planted less than five years ago, and that had attained sufficient growth to hide buildings such as ordinarily group themselves around a barn. At the same place I saw a row of Russian poplars over ten feet in height that had been planted as cuttings in 1916, three years ago. These Russian poplars do unusually well in all three prairie provinces, and, with Manitoba maples and willows, are most popular among tree-planting farmers, although the common spruces and balsams seem to make great headway and to endure the extreme winter weather quite as well as in the eastern provinces.

Hardwood Surface on Soft Woods.

A surface treatment for soft woods has been developed that not only imitates the appearance of hardwood but toughens it, and enables it to take a high polish, causing the treated surface to exhibit the actual properties of the denser substance. It is evident that the body of the treated board, being still soft, can be worked much more easily than a homogeneous piece of hard wood. To impart the hardwood finish, a great number of cuts, about a twelfth of an inch deep, are made in the direction of the fibre and in arrangement like the surface pores of the hardwood. Into this mutilated surface is then rubbed a paste composed of an oil, a mineral substance, and a coloring material. This paste hardens in the artificial pores, forming a "mosaic" which has the properties described.—Popular Mechanics.

The name of Archangel is, properly, Archangelsk. The city was founded in 1514 and for about 120 years it was the only port of Russia.

Technically speaking a hair's breadth is .00017 of an inch.

MICE HARM ORCHARDS

Thousands of Trees Are Girdled Annually by These Pests.

The Short-tailed Field Mouse Is the Depredator — Prevention and Poisoning Described as Measures of Control — Transplanting Early Crops from Hotbeds.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

ALMOST every year thousands of fruit trees are girdled and killed by mice. The species of mouse responsible is not the common house mouse, but the short-tailed field mouse, whose runways may be easily seen in spring in long grass, especially around fence corners. It is grassy fence corners, especially where snake fences are used, that afford the best hiding and breeding places for these mice, hence the sooner such fences can be replaced by wire fences or done away with entirely and the freer the orchard is kept from all sorts of rubbish the easier it will be to combat mice.

Control Measures.—There are several methods by which almost complete protection from injury may be secured. These are as follows:

1. In autumn remove the sod from around the trees for a distance of about two feet on every side and bank earth up against the trunks to a height of six to ten inches. In doing this do not leave a deep ditch around the tree in which the water may collect, as this would be injurious to the roots.

2. If the ground becomes frozen before the grass can be removed, mound the trees with coal ashes instead of earth, packing them down somewhat firmly so that there may be no runways leading through the grass beneath up to the tree.

3. After the snow has become a foot or so deep or after the first heavy snow storm in winter, tramp the snow firmly around the trunks of the trees. This will close the runways and prevent the mice from working their way to the tree. If a thaw follows and the snow again becomes deep it will be necessary to repeat this operation.

4. A popular plan and a good one is to wrap common building paper around the trunk to a height of about twenty inches, or it would do no harm if it went to twenty-four inches or more, as this will also protect the base of the tree from rabbits and from sunscald. The building paper should be put on while the ground is still unfrozen and a little earth should be thrown up around the base to prevent the mice getting in beneath. [illegible] can be kept in place by [illegible] it with a common [illegible] wire netting with a mesh of about a quarter of an inch is an excellent substitute for building paper and will last for several years, but the initial cost is much higher than for building paper. Tar-paper is often used, but is sometimes injurious to the trees and therefore cannot be recommended.

5. Occasionally, though very rarely in this province, resort is made to poison to destroy mice. The Washington Department of Agriculture recommends the following poison: "Mix thoroughly one ounce of powdered strychnine (alkaloid), one ounce powdered bicarbonate of soda, and one-eighth ounce (or less) of saccharine. Put the mixture in a tin pepper box (or any perforated tin) and sift it gradually over forty pounds of crushed oats in a metal tub or vessel, mixing the grain constantly so that the poison will be evenly distributed." Place not more than a teaspoonful of this at a place beside the trees, and, if possible, in the mouse runs. To avoid destroying birds the poison should always be covered by a small piece of board with a stone or chip underneath it to keep the board slightly raised from the ground; or it may be put into an old tin such as a tomato can and the edges bent nearly together to keep out birds but to let in mice. A small tile or a broken tile will serve the same purpose. Great caution must, of course, be taken in using such a deadly poison as strychnine.

Sometimes chopped alfalfa hay thoroughly moistened with a solution of the poison made by dissolving one ounce of strychnine (sulphate) in two gallons of hot water is used in place of the above poison. A little of this poisoned hay is placed close to the trunks of the trees late in the fall, and not more than a handful should go to each tree and should be placed down close to the crown so that the mice will be sure to find it. It is better to put a little piece of board on top of it, and under no circumstances should cattle be allowed into an orchard thus treated.

Transplanting Early Crops From the Hotbeds.

Two things are very necessary in this work; one, that the plants get as much air as possible and kept as cool as possible in this way getting them used to night temperature so that when set in the field they will be able to withstand a considerable degree of cold. The other is that of withholding water as much as possible; this has two direct effects on the plant. One that of enlarging the uner root system, the other that of stiffening the wall cells of the plant, making them more suited to withstand outside conditions. On many occasions it has been proved that a plant, which has only had the water required for its actual growth, the former came through a rather severe cold spell in good shape while the softer, more frequently watered specimen, froze.

The Jewish Sabbath starts at sunset on Friday, because the Jews, like the ancient Greeks, began their day at sunset and not at sunrise, or immediately after midnight, as we do, who follow the ancient Romans.

Don't Worry About Smallpox

THERE were half a dozen of them, and they met together for lunch. Of course, the discussion turned to the question of the smallpox epidemic, and vaccination.

"I should worry about the vaccination dispute," said one. "I've had smallpox, so the subject has no terrors for me."

Had smallpox! The rest of the party looked their surprise. What was it like? Where are the pock-marks? Did you have it bad? These and half a dozen other questions came thick and fast.

"I had it right here in Toronto, and spent a month over at the Swiss Cottage Hospital over the Don," said the first speaker. "And I had it as bad as any of the others who were there at the time, and there were about ten, including men, women, and children. As some of you fellows seem scared, I don't mind giving you a few pointers.

"In the first place, don't be scared even if the doctor does tell you you have the disease. I remember when the doctor and Mr. Shutt, from the City Hall, came to the house and told me I had 'it.' I had been ill about a week. For a couple of nights I was a little off my head, but nothing to speak of. I had a temperature, as the nurses call it, and had all the symptoms of a sharp fever. No one suspected smallpox until I was on my feet again. The doctor had not seen me for a couple of days, as he thought I was over the danger point, and it was only a case of getting strong again.

"But that day—it was Saturday—I telephone him that I had a sore spot in my mouth. That seemed to worry him, for he lost no time running up. An hour later Mr. Shutt and the city doctor were on the job, and half an hour after that I was in the ambulance on the way to the Swiss Cottage.

"Say—when they told me I had smallpox I felt as if my days were numbered. All I had ever read about the ravages of the scourge in olden times came to mind, and I as good as gave up the ghost. Honestly I had little hope of ever seeing home and mother again. I don't know when I was so scared in my life.

"I was almost too weak to walk upstairs. But hope began to revive when I saw the ward and the other inmates. Believe me, they didn't look like corpses. There wasn't anyone in bed, and they had just finished a substantial supper, as I could see from the trays the nurse was carrying away. A couple of the men were playing checkers, others were reading, while in a corner a lively debate was under way. In fact, it was like any hospital ward where the patients were convalescent. I had pictured patients tied down to prevent them scratching at the pocks, and so on, but was most agreeably disappointed.

"But you haven't any marks yourself. What do they do? Did you have it bad?"

"Yes, I had it as bad as anyone there—in fact, worse than some. As to marks, why, I didn't see one person leave that hospital disfigured in any way. As for treatment, there was practically none. That is, nothing for the smallpox itself. There was the usual medicine given to patients who are inactive, and plenty of nourishment, but no distinctively smallpox medicine.

"Every night we used to paint our 'spots' with vaseline. That was all the treatment they got, and it certainly did relieve the itching. Some of us were marked from head to heel, and it was a long job to paint all the spots, but it certainly did help a lot.

"Mind, I am not saying that smallpox is as pleasant as a picnic or church social. It isn't. But neither is it half, no, nor a quarter as bad as the average person thinks it is. I saw a little kiddie brought in, whose mother had been down with the disease a week. The little fellow was as bright as a cricket. The nurse had all she could do to keep him in bed one whole day, when he had a slight temperature. Then he sat up and played with his doll and other toys. That was the only day he spent in bed.

"It was a long wait until the little lumps under the skin disappeared. Long before that time we were as well as any dozen persons you could pick out on the streets. We used to count the spots every morning, and some of the fellows would quietly rub away with a little pumice-stone they secured from somewhere. That didn't do any good, however, nature took her own course, and slowly the spots disappeared. When the last was down level, it was a case of get your clothes together, ready for disinfecting. Every stitch is sent to the disinfecting chamber, where all the germs are killed. Then, next day, comes a good scrubbing in a bath of disinfectant, a shake hands with the doctor, and a good-bye to the hospital.

"While I don't want any of my friends to contract smallpox, I would sooner see them down with that than a serious case of the flu, or diphteria or typhoid fever. No doubt, in the good old days they had a worse form than we have at present, but if any of your fellows think that your death-warrant is signed if you are taken down with the smallpox, why, forget it. Arrange your affairs, if you can, for about five weeks, and then make up your mind that you are going to have a passable time. If the attack is a mild one, you may have to go back to work before five weeks. But above everything, there's absolutely no need to worry. I've had it—and I know."

GAME AND FISH LAWS.

Migratory Birds Convention Act Being Well Received.

The twelfth annual report of the Department of Game and Fisheries of Ontario calls attention to the fact that there is a better enforcement of the game and fish laws now than in earlier years and that sentiment in favor of the enforcement is growing steadily. The report also points out that the Migratory Birds Convention Act is becoming better understood by the public in general and, with the better acquaintance of its provisions by publicity, is being well received and will have beneficial results.

Plenty of moose and deer are reported in that part of the province lying north and west of the French and Mattawa rivers, and the supply is generally satisfactory in other parts of the province inhabited by these animals. The benefit of the close season for partridge has been shown to a marked degree in many sections of the northern part of the province. Quail and pheasants are scarce, especially the former.

Of the fur-bearing animals, beaver, otter, marten and muskrat show an inclination to increase, beaver being very plentiful, with large catches reported last season. Many reports of damage to game and fur-bearing animals by wolves have been received by the Department, and in this connection the superintendent recommends that a substantial increase in the bounty be made. He also recommends the establishment of a game sanctuary at some central point in the province.

Commercial fishing, taking the province as a whole, showed an increase over the catch the previous year. Returns, as presented by the license holders, showing a catch of 36,305,360 pounds in 1916, and of 12,834,551 in 1917. The report of the sales branch of the Fisheries Department for the year ending October 31, 1918, shows that over three million pounds of fish were handled by the sales branch during the first year of operation under the Government policy of securing fish from the waters of the province and placing the same, at a fixed price, on the tables of consumers. These fish were sold to nearly 600 fish dealers and were distributed in over 200 municipalities throughout the province, effecting a saving of at least five cents per pound on all fish distributed to the consumers, or a total saving of at least $150,000. The revenue received from the sale of Government fish during the year ending October 31, 1918, amounted to $235,028.15, and the total revenue received from game and fish licenses during the same period was $492,699.77.

During the season of 1918 waters of the Province of Ontario were stocked with several kinds of fish in the following numbers: Lake trout, 399,000; brown trout, 14,000; brook trout, 402,500; rainbow trout, 26,-100; black bass (parent), 131; pickerel, 3,400,000; whitefish, 15,500,-000; herring, 38,000,000.

Persian Cookery.

Cookery among the well-to-do classes in Persia is extravagant, partly because they are lavishly hospitable, partly because all house servants are fed from the leavings of the master's table. Tiny chickens, quails, pigeons, doves and young partridges are broiled hot, on the spit, to each guest.

Jewel Superstitions.

In olden time the sapphire was worn against the bites of venomous animals and to keep away apparitions, the emerald to prevent giddiness and strengthen the memory. The ruby was considered a powerful amulet to ward off plagues and had the power of making the wearer cheerful."

LAWN TENNIS RULES ARE CHANGED

NEW SERVING RULE AND SCORING SYSTEM ARE ADVOCATED.

New York, Dec. 17.—Lawn tennis in the coming year and in the years to follow will be somewhat different from what it has been in the past if the recommendations of the Executive Committee of the United States National Lawn Tennis Association are approved at the annual meeting next February.

For three months the Rules Committee has been deliberating, and wherever tennis is played there will be interest in the findings of the men who stand out as experts in the game. They are S. Wallis Merrihew, Edward C. Conlin, Beals C. Wright, Abraham Bassford, Jr.; Watson M. Washburn, Samuel Hardy and R. Norris Williams.

The committee has swept aside the old foot fault rule with its numerous interpretations and proposers the following:—"Before commencing to serve the server shall stand with both feet at rest behind, i. e., farther from the net than the base line, and within the limits of the centre mark and the side line. Both feet shall be kept behind the base line until the racquet strikes the ball."

This ruling simplifies matters a lot, because the hazy way in which the former rule was worded left a lot of loopholes for individual interpretation. There will now be no more argument as to what constitutes a hop, step or jump. The main purpose of the rule is to prevent the server from taking an unfair advantage in getting up to the net. If the server is kept back of the base line until his racquet strikes the ball it makes little difference what he does thereafter.

Another vital change in the code is that which applies to rule 20. It discards the old system of scoring entirely. It provides a 1-2-3 method that will make such a score as "15—love" only a memory. The new rule is as follows:—

New Scoring System.

"If the server win the first point, the score is called 1—in; if the received win the first point, the score is called 1—out. If each player win a point, the score is called 1—all. If the server win it, the score is called 1—2, and the scoring is continued in this manner until either player has won four points, when game is called for that player, unless the other player has scored three points; when the score is called 4—3 or 3—4, as the case may be, and the game is scored for the player who first thereafter gains a lead of two points."

This may seem strange to those who have been accustomed to the old system of scoring, but there was never any logical reason for such a queer method of counting. The new way will be readily understood, is easy to apply, and the committee believes that it will add greatly to the popular interest in the sport. In recent years tennis has become so popular with the general public that an understandable language became necessary. Many who enjoyed the sport did not know what "advantage in" or "advantage out," or "deuce" meant. The new system will be as simple as counting the runs and hits in a baseball game.

PHILADELPHIA IS CENTRE OF U. S. HOCKEY

MANY GAMES SCHEDULED FOR HUGE ARENA IN EASTERN CITY.

Philadelphia, Dec. 17.—Philadelphia is to be the centre of hockey for the East this winter. This has been made possible by the erection of the mammoth Ice Palace, now nearing completion at Forty-fifth and Market streets.

Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Pennsylvania and Dartmouth have already scheduled hockey matches here, beginning on January 1 and continuing until the end of March. In addition to the big college matches, a fast hockey team is being got together which will play matches against the best amateur teams of the East, and which will engage in a series of matches with crack Canadian teams near the end of the season.

COSTS SOMETHING TO OPERATE BALL CLUBS

SALARY LIMITS IN VARIOUS LEAGUES ARE HAVING ANOTHER BOOST.

New York, Dec. 17.—The high cost of baseball is going to give not only major leagues, but also the minors, a lot to think about before another season opens. In the Eastern League the salary lists of players have almost doubled in three years. In 1918 the salary limit was $1800, last year it was boosted to $2500, and next season it will be $3500. This general boosting of salary limits will be necessary throughout the minors, especialy in Class AA leagues.

The International League operated last season under a salary limit of $3300, while for next year this has been increased to $5000. The salary limit in the Pacific Coast League and the American Association will be at least that figure.

The situation in the minor leagues will soon come to the surface, for all the contracts will be sent out next month. Few of the players in the majors are signed to contracts for next season. Just before the war the majors did away with the practice of signing players to long-term contracts.

The holdouts will not find as much sympathy from club owners as they did last season, for last year operations with the minors had ceased and there was a limit to the baseball supply. Next season it is expected that the minors and the majors will be working under an agreement of some kind, and unless a major leaguer is a star he may find his place taken by a youngster if he is too stiff in his demands.

Tight Collars Muddle Brains.

Dr. Leonard Williams calls attention in the Practitioner to the penalties that men and women have to pay for the erect posture. Instead of the heavy organs in their abdomens having the support of the floating ribs and the bony pelvis, as they have in the lower animals, they hang, gravity pulls them down and all sorts of displacements are the result.

There is but one advantage derived from the erect posture, according to Dr. Williams, but it is a most important one. This is the gain in drainage from the brain and other organs situated in the head. In the horizontal posture this drainage is sluggish, whereas man "invokes the aid of gravity to assist him in ridding his upper storey of effete matters. It is not inconceivable that this difference may explain the distinction between the 'intelligence, which we concede to the dog and the 'intellect' which we regard as the monopoly of his master. The distinction would be greater still if the master did not so frequently nullify the difference by wearing tight, high collars to impede the all-important drainage. A constricted neck means a muddled head; not infrequently it connotes a bad one and a pimply face."

"LET' EM BATTLE" SAYS CARL MAYS

SPENDS HIS TIME QUIETLY WHILE OWNERS FIGHT IN COURT OVER HIM.

New York, Dec. 17.— Carl Mays, who is the bone of contention in the bitter fight in the American League, is taking life easy, while the New York Club and President Ban Johnson are battling in the courts about him. The submarine flinger is hunting and fishing out near his home in Manfield, Mo. Mays lives like a man of leisure.

He has built a hunting lodge out in the wild Missouri hills and lives close to nature, while the whole baseball world is upset over his affairs. Far away from the lawyers and the ball field, Mays spends his time hunting and fishing and keeping himself in condition for next season's campaign.

The Kilties expect Mays to win a lot of games for them next season. He will have to win a great many to prove that he is worth all the rumpus he has caused in baseball circles.

ST. PATS WILL HAVE A STRONG PRO. TEAM

MOOSE HEFFERNAN'S SQUAD WILL BE FORMIDABLE THIS SEASON.

Cecil "Babe" Dye, the noted local all-round athlete, has decided to turn professional, and turned out to practice with the St. Patrick's N. H. L. team yesterday. Dye is a sharpshooter of note, and in case he gets into proper condition should give Benedict and Vezina, the well-known goalkeepers, much to worry about. Dye's entry into the money ranks will be watched with interest, for there are many who consider he will make good in hockey as well as in baseball.

The St. Patrick's held their first practice Monday, when Heffernan, Randall, Dennenay, Mitchells and Lockhart turned out. Mitchell and Lockhart wil try out for the goal position. The former played for Portland previous to going overseas, while Lockhart was a member of the 228th Battalion team.

Gordon Keats, Harry Cameron and "Cully" Wilson are expected to arrive today. Rickey, the Western defense player, claimed that the town's first offers were not satisfactory. St. Patrick's raised the figures, but to date Rickey has not accepted or rejected them.

JOHNSON SUCCEEDS AS A BULL FIGHTER

FORMER WORLD CHAMPION KILLS ONE BULL AND IS CHASED BY THE SECOND.

Mexico, Cit, Mex., Dec. 17.— Jack Johnson, toreador premier. By such auspicious title is the former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, being hailed in Mexico.

Lil' Arthur made his debut in the bull ring this afternoon before a huge crowd. He scored a technical knockout over two large bulls after a real fight, during which he was foiled twice, almost for the count. He proved himself an able jumper on two occasions by clearing the high wall of the enclosure, with an enraged toro's horns close to his anatomy.

Jack was given a great ovation when he strode across the ring. He scorned the conventional outfit of the bull fighter, and appeared in a stiff collar, shirt sleeves, white flannel trousers, and duo-colored sport shoes. A flashy multi-colored toreador's cape was thrown about his shoulders. His head was bare and the sun beat down, illuminating the "million dollar smile" as of old. His white wife sat in a ringside box, and in accordance with the custom of bestowing the cape on the lady of the toreador's choice, Jack bowed elaborately and handed it up to her.

The bull then entered and Jack waved a red flag.

The bull rushed him and Jack feinted and jabbed with all his old-time cleverness. The bull, however, found an opening, and charged at the mid-section of his colored opponent. Jack clinched his horns and they went down, After several more rounds Johnson rammed the spear between the front haunches, and the bull was out for the count.

Some mistake was made by the "stage hands," and the second bull was released before Jack had completed responding to the applause. He was still bowig in low graceful sweeps when the new bull charged at his rear. He made a six-foot leap and landed in one of the boxes.

This exhibition took all the fight out of the bull, and he absolutely refused to be anything but congenial when John Arthur returned to the ring. An assistant speared the animal, but he refused to move, looking around as if to spot a sponge that he might toss in the ring.

Jack finally became exhausted trying to pick a fight out of the bull, and exited in a riot of applause.

To Prevent Beriberi.

Two thousand physicians assembled at the Imperial university in Kyoto recently to hear Dr. Shimasono lecture on beriberi, the cause of which is much disputed among medical authorities. The disease is not contagious, and its chief cause is eating pure rice, although the doctor disbelieves the theory that rice ever causes blood poisoning.

The speaker said that if rice is taken into the body along with other foods there is less danger of beriberi. He cited the cases of prisoners, factory hands, Buddhist monks and others, who ate much wheat mixed with rice. Buddhist monks eat ten or twenty times as much other food as rice, and rarely suffer from the disease. Among the factory hands of the Kejiho iron foundry of the Mitsubishi company 450 of the 2,000 Japanese suffered from beriberi because they ate pure rice, while only 9 of 3,000 Koreans suffered from the disease presumably because they ate millet and beans.

Doctor Shimasono advised the eating of wheat with rice, in the ratio of six parts of rice to four parts of wheat. This will create a market for the shipment to Japan of larger quantities of wheat from Oregon and Washington. —East and West.

Sufficient Unto Themselves.

United States marines who have hobnobbed with Filipino headhunters and have long been friendly with the Chamorros of Guam, met their Waterloo when they tried to establish the entente cordiale with the Cha-Chas of the Virgin islands.

According to the marines the Cha-Chas are "poor mixers." They live on the west side of the harbor of Charlotte-Amalie, decline to mingle or intermarry with the negroes, and resent any outside interference with their affairs. They are the hardest drinkers and best workers on the island, their industry bringing them a good living as fishermen and weavers of straw hats. The tribe is said to have come originally from the Dutch and French Leeward Islands.

So far the marines have taken only long distance observations of the Cha-Chas. For while the tribe is not hostile, its members indicate that they want to be left alone.

A Huge Stone Crusher.

What is reported to be the largest gyratory stone crusher ever built has just been completed at Allentown, Pa. The machine is to be used for crushing limestone for chemical purposes, flux, etc. It has two jaw openings, each 60 x 190 inches. The crusher, complete, weighs about 800,000 pounds, is seventeen feet eight inches high from foundation to top of hopper, and has a shaft twenty-one feet long and forty inches in diameter.

To Clean Hair Brushes.

Corn meal will clean hair brushes quite as well as ammonia, and there is no danger of injury to the back of the brush. Take a cup of corn meal and fill the brush, rubbing the bristles gently with the hand. As it becomes discolored from absorbing the grease, shake it out and replace with fresh meal until the brush is clean.

Ill and Nervous.

Nurses dislike the season of thunderstorms. "We are not afraid of lightning ourselves," a nurse in a woman's hospital told me, "but it has a harmful effect on the patients. Most sick people fear lightning. In cases of extreme weakness or nervousness a dozen flashes of blinding lightning reduce the patient to a state of utter prostration."

MUSIC IN THE HOME

At all times music is a delight in the home, but very much so during the long Winter evenings. There may be a pelting rain or a January blizzard without, but if you have a Victrola in the home you forget these things. Starting at almost any price and running up to instruments that are really luxurious, anyone considering buying one will find all that they want in a Victrola in the Victrola Parlors of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Limited, George and Hunter streets, Peterborough. Anything in records is always in stock with this house. Let us name just three out of the thousands:— Swedish Cradle Song, General Pershing (march), and It Is All That I Can Say.

SMOKER'S PALACE IN PETERBOROUGH

For the past three months alterations have been in progress at Louis Yeotes' cigar store, 337 George street, and in this establishment Peterborough can now boast of having the largest and best equipped cigar store and billard parlors between Toronto and Montreal.

For Christmas gifts Louis is offering a line of cigars, tobaccos, pipes, cigarette cases, and all smokes' accessaries, such as will touch the heart of their recepients. "First quality and fair prices" is the slogan of this smokers' palace.

Included in extensive alterations is the doubling of Yeotes' billiard parlors to 20-table capacity. The growth in patronage demanded this expansion.

Mr. Yeotes also announces the enlargement of his shoe shining department to allow of service to ladies. Here the gentle sex will find courtesy and efficiency at all times, together with a shoe shine par excellence.

Attention is directed to Louis Yeotes' advertisement on page 8.

The little girl was taken ill after dinner and passed away within a few hours. Death was due to ptomaine poisoning.

The remains were taken to Toronto for burial, and the funeral took place on Friday, the 5th inst. Mr. and Mrs. West have the deepest sympathy of the community in their bereavement.

GOOD CROWD OF SKATERS

: AT THE Y. W. C. A. :

The Young Women's Christian Association presented a gay appearance last night when the girls gathered to sing Christmas carols and have a general good time. The hall, library and green groom were all decorated with scarlet and evergreens. Christmas bells hung from the windoms and here and there the bright poinsettia was seen, while a true Christmas fire burned in the big fire place in the hall. After singing "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing" and "It Came Upon the Midnight Clear," Miss Laton gave a talk on Christmas superstitions and customs in the different lands, closing with the story of Babouscka, the old woman who, the Russians believe, missed her opportunity of going with the Three Wise Men and has been hunting ever since for the Christ-Child.

Miss H. Davidson, Miss I. Allen and Miss O. Kenyon sang the old carol, "We Three Kings of Orient are," and Raymond Alden's story of "Why the Chimes Rang" was told. After singing more carols, every one went out to the gymnasium for games and dancing, under the direction of Miss Pryce, and later refreshments were served in the green room.

VACCINATION PILLS ISSUED

Homeopathic Doctors Liable Persecution, Health Officers Say.

Toronto, Dec. 17.— A number of homeopathic doctors in the city are issuing what may be described as "vaccination pills," which it is claimed have the same effect as vacination in that they give immunity from smallpox. Accompanying the pills is a certificate of successful vaccination.

When this matter was brought to the attention of Dr. McCullough, chief of the Provincial Board of Health he was amused at the idea. "There is only one method of successful vaccination, and that is inocculation with the vaccine virus," he said.

Can't Take Action

"Can any action be taken against any doctors issuing such certificates?" the doctor was asked.

"No," was the reply. "A private practitioner can issue what he likes."

Dr. H. Becker declared that the pill treatment was recognized by many of the States, of the U. S. A., but both Dr. McCullough and Dr. Hastings said that they had never heard of any of them.

Misrepresentation.

Dr. Hastings was iclined to the belief that homeopathic doctors who issued certificates of successful vaccination with "vaccination pills," so that children could be admitted to school, could be prosecuted on the ground of misrepresentation, as there was only one recognized form of successful vaccination. Dr. McCullough says that prosecution in such cases rests with the local M. O. H.

COMES TO PETERBOROUGH HIGHLY RECOMMENDED

Evans' Tailoring Business Changes Hands—Chas. Schooley of Collingwood the new Proprietor

Mr. George Evans has sold out his tailoring business, 170 Hunter street to Mr. Charles Schooley, who is now in possession.

Mr. Schooley comes to Peterboro from Collingwood, carrying with him the best wishes of a host of friends. In announcing his departure the Collingwood papers refer to him as an exceedingly popular citizen, who took an active interest in sports, especially in horse racing, having been mainly instrumental in reviving the Collingwood Driving Club, which had several very successful meets last season. In this respect alone Mr. Schooley will be a welcome acquisition to Peterborough's citizenship, a portion of which are lovers of good clean sport of all kinds.

But, above all, Mr. Schooley comes to this city highly recommended as a capable and four-square business man. With twenty-five years' experience as a merchant tailor, he is master of his craft, accustomed to a high grade trade conducted on approved business principles. In assuming the tailoring business lately conducted by Mr. George Evans, Mr. Schooley carries a complete stock of quality tweeds, worsteds, serges, etc, and is prepared to execute orders for men's youths' and boys' made to measure clothing, with a guarantee of perfect fit, correct style, and workmanship unexcelled. The prices will be found commensurately reasonable for first quality material and stylish tailoring.

ON GRECIAN ARCHITECTURE

Paper Read by Miss Jean Hartstone to Art Association.

The Peterborough Art Club held their weekly meeting last night at the Conservatory of Music. Mrs. S. Sherwood, as president, occupied the chair. Miss Jean Harstone read a very interesting paper on architecture, giving a lucid word picture of the first architecture of the Greeks, interspersing her lecture with plans and drawings of the different Grecian styles of structure. Miss Harstone showed a very clear and comprehensive knowledge of what is perhaps one of the hardest subjects one could pick out, and deal with properly. Her audience were much impressed.

ORGANIZED LABOR MEN REFUSE TO SHOW THEIR POLITICAL HAND

Will Not Publish List of Candidates for Civic Office Until Just Before Nomination Day—Special Meeting Monday Night to Complete the Slate

The Trades Council will not publish their list of candidates for civic offices just yet, but a special meeting will be held next Monday evening when the slate will be completed. This action was decided on at last night's session after it was explained that the Citizens' Committee were holding back their plans in order to find out what the Labor men proposed doing.

The members of the Bakers' Union sent in a resolution, for which they asked the endorsation of the Council, providing for the abolition of night work in the bakeshops of Ontario. This endorsation was given, and the resolution will be sent to Premier Drury with a request for the necessary legislative action.

The question of publishing a Labor paper was deferred until the next regular meeting.

The United Women's Trade Union League sent in an appeal for the organization of women workers, and this was referred to the local committee having such matters in charge.

No Moral Aid to Ireland.

The following communication was received and read:

The Central Federated Union of Greater New York and vicinty desires to call your attention to the following: "A Bill, H. R. 3404, by Mr. Mason in the House of Representatives.

"To provide for the salaries of a minister and consuls to the Republic of Ireland.

"'Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, that an appropriation be made out of the treasury of the United States to provide salaries for a minister and consuls to the Republic of Ireland, the sum of $14,000.'"

We have endorsed this bill because eighty per cent. of the Irish people have self-determined to establish an Irish Republic in 1918, and because, quoting from President Wilson's Mt. Vernon speech, he said:

"The settlement of every question, whether of territory, of sovereignty, of economic arrangemnt, or of political relationship upon the basis of the free acceptance of that settlement by the people immediately concerned, and not upon the basis of the material interest or advantage of any other nation or people which may desire a different settlement for the sake of its own exterior influence or mastery."

On motion of H. M. Mathews, one of the delegates from the Typographical Union, the communication was summarily dealt with by being consigned to the waste basket.

RETURNED SOLDIER CLAIMS $800 ON GROUNDS OF MISREPRESENTATION

Timothy Bowler Alleges That He Was Defrauded of Bank Account, for Car and $15 a Month While Overseas Points Under Examination.

The county court reopened this morning with the case of Timothy Bowler vs. Edith Redman and Albert Vass. The plaintiff, a returned soldier with an empty sleeve, claims $850 from the defendants on the ground of misrepresentation and fraud.

G. N. Gordon appeared for the plaintiff, G. W. Hatton for Mrs. Redmar, and R. R. Hall for Mr. Vass.

The first witness called was Mr. G. A. Gillespie. He told of trading a new Maxwell car for an old Maxwell car, a Ford car and $300 balance with Albert Vass.

Mr. Gillespie estimtaed that a Ford car deterriorated to the extent of $100 to $150 a year. Of course, the extent of deterioration depended on the upkeep and the use of the car.

The witness swore that he considered $300 a fair price to put on the car at the time it was purchased.

Neither Read or Write

Then the plaintiff, Timothy Bowler, was called to the witness box. He stated that he could neither read or write, except his own name. He remembered meeting both the defendants at a dance in spring of 1918.

"What took place that night "

"I fetched Mr. Redman there and after the dance I went for my car and the axle was broke."

He told of going to Mr. Blodgett's house on the following Sunday, when Mr. Redman asked him to come out of the kitchen and join the rest of the company.

He went to Vass's one Sunday afternoon on the invitation of Mr. Redman. While there the witness and Mrs. Redman had a conversation but nothing important was said.

Bowled stated he had gone over to the house of Mr. Vass on several occasions.

"Before I went away Mrs. Redman promised to marry me," stated the witness.

"When were you to be married?"

"I wanted to wait till after I came back from overseas and she said alright."

"Was there anything said about your property?"

"Edith Redman offered to take care of my car and money while I was away in France."

Witness told of going to the firm of Gordon & O'Brien, and Mr. O'Brien drawing up a bill of sale for the car for $1. Three were present at the time the plaintiff, Mr. O'Brien Edith Redman and Mr. Vass.

"Who spoke to Mr. O'Brien about the sale?"

"Mr. Vass."

"Was there anything said about marriage at that time?

"I don't just remember what was said."

"Was any money paid you "

"I went to the bank and turned over $325 to Edith Redman."

"Why did you do that?"

"I thought it was a good deal."

"Did you turn anything else over to Edith Redman?"

"$15 of my assigned pay."

"Why did you do that?"

"She agreed to keep it in the bank until my return,"

" Did you know Edith Redman was married?"

"Not till I came back from overseas." "They always called her Edith not Mrs."

"How did she address you in her letters "

"Dear sweetheart."

"Did you answer the letters?"

"Yes, I addressed them the same way. My chums wrote for me."

"Why were you sent home."

"I got wounded and my arm was taken off."

"Did she ever refuse to marry you?"

"Yes, she ased me how I could support a woman with only one arm."

"When did you speak to her about your money?"

"She said my money was ready any time I wanted it."

Bowler told of planning to meet Mrs. Redman at the Bank of Commerce to get matters straighened out. Mrs. Redman was not there but wrote an apology that was produced and read in court.

"Did you get your car?"

"No, Mr. Vass promised to sell it for me."

"Did you ever get the money for the car "

"No, he traded it."

"Did your lawyer ever ask for the money?"

I think he demanded it."

"Who told you about Mrs. Redman being married before?"

RANK OUTSIDERS ARE APPOINTED TO OFFICE

ALLEGED CIVIL SERVICE REFORM WORKS UNJUSTLY TO MEN OF EXPERIENCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—The appointments of Col. Carty to the Vancouver collectorship and Lieut. Alphonse Fayette to the Hull postmastership have drawn excited protests from two departments in the Dominion Government and pointed comment from The Civilian, the organ of the Canadian Civil Service Association. "Both appointees are outsiders without any experience in the work they have been hired to supervise," says the Civilian. It then refers to the fact that the Customs service has some three thousand members with from one to forty years' official experience, waiting for promotion.

LABOR MEN ENDORSE WOMEN'S RIGHT TO REPRESENTATION ON SCHOOL BOARD

Mesdames W. R. Morris, S. T. Medd and A. Stevenson Address Trades Council Last Night—Delegates Concur in Request of the Lady Candidate for Approval of Idea.

Mrs. W. R. Morris, candidate for the School Board, Mrs. S. T. Medd and Mrs. A. Stevenson, members of the Woman Voters' League, appeared before the Trades Council last night and addressed the delegates on behalf of the candidacy of Mrs. Morris. Mrs. Morris herself, and neither of her friends, asked for a personal endorsation. All they requested was that Organized Labor endorse the claim of women to the right to representation on the Board. This request was complied with after many of the delegates had expressed appreciation for the public service which Mrs. Morris has already rendered the city in connection with the establishing of the playgrounds and the bathing beaches. The election committee will interview Mrs. Morris and it may be that she may yet be formally endorsed as one of Labor's nominees for a place on the Board.

All three ladies spoke briefly and to the point. Mrs. Morris said that Labor had always given a sympathetic hearing to women. What she wanted to know was whether the workingmen of the city approved of the idea of women sitting as members of the School Board. Women come more closely to the work of the schools than men do. Mothers settle all the disputes between pupils and teachers. Women have no desire to do men's work. No man can do his own work and that of women, too.

Mrs. S. T. Medd, one of the best known local workers in the cause of education, who has declined a nomination for the School Board, said she nevertheless believed that there should be two women on the Board. Until children reach school age they are almost entirely under the control of their mothers. Why should that control cease just as soon as the children go to school, and why at that period are the mothers not supposed to know anything about the care which the children require? If the mother's care is necessary in the home, why not in the school? Peterborough is a democratic city. There are no private schools, but all the children receive the same educational advantages and are treated alike. The mothers would think of many things in school management that never occur to men. Mrs. Medd declared that the women of this city were not getting into politics, because there should be nothing of the kind in educational affairs.

Mrs. Stevenson said that Mrs. Morris was not simply a woman's condidate, because she expected votes from men and women alike. Women she believes, are entitled to a voice in public questions, and are especially anxious to secure representation on the School Board.

Before the delegation retired Mrs. Morris thanked the workingmen for the support they gave her a year ago. She found that the mothers of the city knew her and appreciated what she had done for the public play grounds.

"Did defendant have knowledge of the dangerous condition of the cistern?" The Judge's answer was "Yes."

MONTENEGRINS AND SERBIANS BATTLE

PEACE CONFERENCE APPEALED TO BY FORMER NATION FOR ASSISTANCE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 18.—Fierce fighting by the Montenegrin people against Serbian occupation occurred around Cettinje between December 1st and 12th, it is declared in an official communique from the Foreign Ministry of Montenegrin Government seat, of which is in the suburb of Paris. The statement asserts that the Serbians placed women and children in front of them to prevent the Montenegrins defending themselves. Montenegrin Government has protested to the Peace Coference and asks that the Serbians be forced to evacuate the country.

REFUSES TO BE NEUTRAL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Brussels, Dec. 18.—The Belgian Government has categorically refused a proposition submitted last week by Great Britain and France guaranteeing the Belgian territorial integrity for five years on condition that Belgium observe strict neutrality during that period.

HUNDREDS OF RATS ARE SMOTHERED

WATER LOWERED, ICE BROKE AND HOMES WERE DESTROYED

Mr. J. Jacobs of Lovesick Lake district is responsible for the statement that hundreds of valuable fur-producing muskrats have been murdered already this winter by the carelessness of the government water officials.

He states that after a thick surface of ice had formed over the back lakes this fall the water was lowered about four feet. The ice broke and fell, smothering hundreds of the rats in their homes in that district alone.

Mr. Jacobs lives the entire year in that country, and is very anxious that more and efficient measures be taken to protect the game. There are other ways of protecting it than by fining the unfortunate man who kills something out of season, he says. If proper protection were accorded the game in the north country the hunting season could be at least doubled, in his opinion.

Something certainly ought to be done to prevent these ruthless massacres of valuable animals, upon the capture of which numbers of men depend largely for their living.

R. W. BURNABY IS NEW PRESIDENT OF UNITED FARMERS OF CANADA

Elected at Convention in Toronto to Succeed R. H. Halbert Recently Successful in By-Election in North Ontario. Premier Drury and New Government Endorsed.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 18.—R. W. Burnaby, was today elected President of the U. F. O. of Ontario in succession to R. H. Halbert, M.P.-elect for North Ontario, who resigned the leadership of Ontario Farmers, to enter into a broader federal field. The election of Mr Burnaby was made unanimous on the motion of W. A. Amos who made a close run with Mr. Burnaby for the position. Mr. Amos was then elected vice-president after all other candidates had retired in his favor.

Fifth in New Government

The formal motion of endorsation for the Drury Government which was carried by the U. F. O. Convention, reads:

"Wheras the cause of better Government in the Province of Ontario has been the central and dominating interest in the work of the United Farmers of Ontario during the past year:

"And whereas the persistent demand of the organized Farmers of the Province for greater economy, honesty and general efficiency in the administration of public affairs has resulted in the election to the Legislature of an entirely new Government:

"And whereas the success of this newly-elected Government will depend upon an absolute adherence to those principles enumerated in the platform of the United Farmers of Ontario, which is based upon the idea of the greatest good to the greatest number of the people, without respect either to those living in urban or rural communities—whether they reside in castle or cabin.

"And whereas the representative character of the great work that is to be done in the Province renders it imperative that the members of the present Government should not declare upon or elaborate matters of future policy without due care, investigation and deliberation:

"Therefore, be it resolved, that we, the members of the United Farmers of Ontario, here assembled in our sixth annual convention, endorse the action of the Joint Political Committee of the U. F. O. in taking steps to select a Leader to establish a Government in the Province of Ontario, as necessitated by the result of the recent Provincial election:

"And also reaffirm our position in the matter of the Government of the Province as expressed in the Provincial platform of this organization:

"And finally desire to urge upon the present Administration the seriousness of responsibility involved in the fulfillment of the great truths which has been placed in its hands."

RETIRING MAYOR DUNCAN ENTERTAINS ALL THE CIVIC OFFICIALS AT BANQUET

Many Problems for the Betterment of the City Discussed During Toast List—All Pay Tribute to the Mayor for His Faithful and Energetic Services

Over thirty officials of the city enjoyed a banquet given to them at Hooper's parlors last evening by retiring Mayor Duncan. During the course of the evening in moving and responding to toasts, many problems of civic importance were discussed and some very useful suggestions made. A spirit of good fellowship prevailed and a more united effort for a better Peterborough will undoubtedly be the outcome of the retiring Mayor's hospitality.

After the toast to the King had been proposed by His Worship the Mayor and responded to by all, Ald. Turner proposed the toast to the civic boards.

The Police Commission.

In referring to the Police Commission, Ald. Turner spoke of the movement on foot to make this an elected body. Although he was not one in favor of this resolution, he considered that it was not with the idea of replacing the present members of the board that the project was launched but with the idea of giving the power into the hands of the people. He praised the commission for their efficient and faithful services in controlling the body that administer the laws in the city.

Credit is 100 Per Cent.

Ald. Turner referred to the article that appeared in a local paper, "Is Peterborough Bankrupt?" in proposing the toast to the city trust. He stated that he read the local papers from surrounding municipalities and in the majority of those cases the Councils have been forced on different occasions to ask the Government for permission to re-establish their sinking fund and lengthen the term of their bonds. Peterborough has never been in that position. Peterborough has always paid its debenture debt and often came out with a surplus. Local credit today is 100 per cent. Ald. Turner stated that the question raised was an impertinent one and he felt sorr ythe articles had been printed. The city trust has always been a body of faithful servants in the interests of the city.

The Utilities Commission have by their past energy done much for the public of Peterborough. He complimented them on having the poles removed from George street.

Ald Turner also turned his attention to the Board of Health that has done a great deal toward making this the clean, wholesome community that it is.

The mover of the toast referred to the Charity Board as a necessary body of splendid workers doing much for the poor people of the city.

To complete the list of civic boards, Ald. Turner referred to the public library, that excellent institution made possible by the generosity of the late Andrew Carnegie. It is well equipped and maintained and provides an excellent source of knowledge for the general public.

All these things go to make Peterborough a city that all can be proud of, concluded Ald. Turner.

Tribute to the Mayor.

In replying on behalf of the Police Commission, His Honor Judge Huycke paid a high tribute to Mayor Duncan. He knew that the people of Peterborough are under a very deep debt of obligation to Mayor Duncan for his past services. The Judge stated that the more he knew Mayor Duncan the more he realised his value to the city and the more he respected him.

Referring to the elected commission, His Honor pointed out Sir Oliver Mowat's idea in having the county judge on the Board was to make the police partly Provincial and Dominion officials as well as local. Personally, he would be very glad to be relieved of his duties as chairman of the Police Commissioners.

He is proud of the Peterborough police force and considers it better than ever and above all he feels certain that every man on the force is honest and honorable. He urged the citizens to break up their little parties and cleaks and become united for a better and greater Peterborough.

Few Deaths.

Ex-Mayor Buller, chairman of the Board of Health, referred to the excellent work of the health officials during the "flu" epidemic when the percentage of deaths in Peterborough was smaller than in any other city in the Dominion. He stated that next year's board, whoever they may be will probably be called to

LABOR AND THE WOMAN VOTERS' LEAGUE

MRS. W. R. MORRIS, candidate for the Board of Education, appeared before the Trades Council last night and asked, not for a personal endorsation, but that Labor would approve of the principle that the women of the city are entitled to representation in that branch of the civic government. This request was unanimously granted, although a number of the delegates would have gone further and accepted Mrs. Morris as one of Labor's nominees for the position.

There may be apparent anomaly in a coalition of Labor and the U. F. O. A union of forces betneew the old line political parties always excites suspicion as a move to accomplish some purpose of mutual interest. There is, however, nothing either illogical or unnatural in a working alliance between Organized Labor and the members of the Woman Voters' League.

Ever since the first Labor union was organized the members have espoused the cause of womanhood. They have consistently contended for better working conditions for women, for the equality of the sexes, and for equal pay for the same line of service, no matter whether that service is rendered by a man or a woman.

Mrs. Morris has been identified with every public movement of note in the city, especially in any that have had to do with promoting the welfare of the rising generation. The public playgrounds and the bathing beaches which she has helped to secure are patronized chiefly by the children of the wage-earners. Parents are not slow to appreciate what she has done. This was made plain during the discussion in the Trades Council last night, especially by one delegate, who, when someone asked if Mrs. Morris had supported the Labor party candidates at the last election, declared that, after all, that really mattered little. The point was that the people were getting the benefit of her public service through their children, who were profited by the playgrounds and other forward movements which Mrs. Morris has helped to advance.

TRUSTEE WORTH STOOD ALONE.

ONE MEMBER of the Board of Education stood alone for the appointment of Mrs. W. R. Morris to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. G. N. Gordon. Trustee J. W. Worth was the one who took this position. He had been assbociated with Mrs. Morris in the work of the public playgrounds and the long struggle to secure bathing beaches for the citizens. He knew that Mrs. Morris possesses business ability of a high order, but against all the rest of his colleagues on the Board he espoused the cause of woman in vain. Mr. Worth is a candidate for re-election to the Board, as his term expires at the end of the present year. Not only his general record as a worker on behalf of education, but his position in the matter of filling the vacancy referred to, is likely to stand him in good stead with the electors.

WHAT IS MR. GORDON'S GAME!

IS MR. G. N. GORDON really to yield to the solicitations of that self-constituted committee of twenty-one citizens who have assumed the regulation of municipal affairs and who meet in secret in out-of-the-way places, first here and next there, to call prospective candidates before them for categorical examination? In a word, is Mr. Gordon to run for mayor, and are those articles he is running in a local paper a covert declaration of his platform by way of preparation? If that is really his intention, it is a somewhat difficult matter to define his exact position.

In the first place, Mr. Gordon is in the hands of a committee the members of which are out to save the city from domination by the Labor element. That is the prime test to which every candidate whom they catechize is submitted. If he is other than an avowed opponent of Organized Labor he is dropped cold.

Mr. Gordon has always had a favorite pose—that of the champion of the workingmen. Can it be possible that he would run for mayor against a candidate who has been endorsed by the Trades Council and who is a delegate to that organization?

But Mr. Gordon has appropriated some of the thunder and purloined several of the loaded guns from the camp of Labor. If he proposes to run on that platform, how can he be regarded as the candidate or look for the active support of the committeee who sponsors his candidacy? The most lenient judge cannot regard his position as other then anomalous.

Mr. Gordon cannot hope to win, either, on a policy that features the traducing of the city by representing it as on the verge of bankruptcy?

Two years ago, Mr. Gordon, while holding the office of city solicitor, acted as private attorney for an outside firm that wished to take up the manufacture of munitions here. Naturally they were anxious to secure all available concessions. Mr. Gorden obtained the usual exemptions for his clients by personally canvassing the then members of the City Council. His firm, however, had trouble with its workingmen, and an official from the Department of Labor at Ottawa was called here before the dispute was settled. Then the firm pulled up stakes and moved to a town in Quebec, where they were assured of cheaper labor. Leaders of the party to which Mr. Gordon admits allegiance sought to make political capital out of this move by castigating Mr. J. H. Burnham for not bringing the matter to the attention of the Borden Government with a view to preventing this migration.

If Mr. Gordon does decide to run for mayor, one of his chief difficulties will be the effort to convince the electors that a man whose private interests prevented him from attending closely to the duties of school trustee, which calls for a brief attendance at not more than a baker's dozen of meetings in a year, can take up the duties of the mayoralty, which demand daily attention and sacrifice of private interests.

THE END OF THE WORLD.

THE WORLD COMES to an end for every man when his friends gather to lay flowers on his casket and, gasing upon his marble features, settled into eternal slumber, utter the commonplace platitude—by which no intelligent person ever deceives himself—"Doesn't he look natural?" The world ends for scores of mortals every minute of the day or night.

At frequent intervals some self-appointed prophet arises and solemnly declares that he has a message that the world is coming to an end for all people and for all time at a date given with exactitude. Sometimes the earth is to be swept away in a gale of fire or dissolved into atoms by an earthquake. Then, again, if the taste of the seer runs to astronomy, he has it figured out that the planets are to come together in a collision in which the earth is to be ground to powder and so dissolved into space.

The pity of it is that there is always a certain class who are superstitious enouhg to he frightened to the point of death by these forecasts and who cease to take active concern in human affairs. Yesterday was the latest date set for the conclusion of all things on this earth, and we read that the churches of America were crowded with the conscience-stricken who were intent on making peace by securing pardon for their sins.

The Sacred Record tells us that when the Creator had finished His labors at the beginning He surveyed His work and found that it was very good. Little wonder that the fresh picture was pleasing to the Mind that had called it into being. Order had been called out of chaos. Light sprang at a word, like magic, from abyssmal darkness. The water was separated from the land. The sun and all the other planets were running their appointed courses. The hills were green and the valleys filled with flowers. Everything was perfect in its place; all that was needed was the dominion of a creature fashioned in the image of Omnipotence. In worshipful chorus the revolving heavenly orbs sang, "The hand that made us is Divine."

The child carefully erects a house of cards or of lettered blocks simply for the pleasure of levelling it to the ground by one sweep of his wanton little hand. It is unthinkable, however, that the Creator ever produced such a marvel as the world in which we live only to destroy it in the end. It was good when it came fresh from His omnipotent hands. It is good today. Man alone has lost his original bearings, departed from the purpose for which he was created. But opportunity is still his merely for the asking. Man will continue to die, but the earth shows no signs of decay in spite of the learned disquisitions of the scientists. The planets whirl through space just as they have done for countless ages, but the Guiding Hand saves them from all danger of a collision. While men believe that the end of all things is near the world has little chance of making progress.

There are men who assume to know all things as though they were in the confidence of the Creator. But, after all, they cannot do other than indulge in conjecture. The best of men cannot pierce the mysteries that it was never intended they should understand. "We have but faith, we cannot know," but the egotist can often work a real mischief by inspiring his weak or superstitious brother with the fear of an imminent calamity.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

CAPE BRETON SCOTCHMEN.

(Glace Bay Gazette.)

A good feature for the Cape Breton Island exhibition, it is suggested, would be a Highland gathering. This might include not only the usual athletic sports and contests, but Gaelic competitions as well, such as those which made so great a hit in Sydney last winter. These competitions, it will be recalled, comprised bagpipe playing, Gaelic singing and dancing, to which, in the case of the exhibition might be added any other features that might be suggested. A local feature of this kind, if properly advertized and staged and under competent direction, would undoubtedly attract great crowds from all parts of Eastern Nova Scotia and would add much to the prestige of the exhibition. It would be worth any number of midways and other important attractions and would probably cost less. The idea is worth considering and should be brought to the attention of the exhibition commission.

WHISKEY IN DETROIT $20 A QUART

Detorit, Dec. 18.—Sharp reaction in the Detroit whiskey market followed the news from Washington that the Supreme Court had upheld the War-Time Prohibition Act. Bonded whiskey, selling here for $15 a quart went to $18 immediately and today the prediction was that Christmas whiskey of the non-poisonous variety would $20 for a quart—or, rather, a fifth of a gallon, few full quarts of the old issue bonded goods being available now.

So far as could be ascertained, the price of raisin whiskey, which has caused approximately 20 deaths, according to police records and which has been described by Coroner J. W. Rothacher as the "deadly brother of the deadly wood alcohol," has not been affected by the Washington ruling, selling at the old price of $5 a quart.

Raisin Whiskey Steady.

Raisin whiskey is being turned out in Detroit and suburbs by the hundreds of gallons. Some idea of the magnitude of this business may be gained from the police records though these show only the stills and liquors that have been found and confiscated.

Since Sept. 1, just 252 stills have been confiscated. Many were large, indicating wholesale production, their capacity being from 50 to 100 galons every 24 hours and their estimated capacity, if continued in operation until the present is 2,006,250 gallons. This total is based on 15 gallons every 24 hours. At $5 a quart, this would have meant a return to the moonshiners of $10,251,250.

Chemists Analyze It.

Chemists who have analyzed raisin whiskey state that the harm comes through an active poison traceable to the raisin seeds, which, in the process of manufacture, combines with fusel oil. According to Coroner Rothacher, even a moderate user of raisin whiskey has only two years in which to live. In that time, either blinness or insanity may precede death, he says.

Records show six cases of self-destuctrion primarily traceable to raisin whiskey. Police officials also hold that, if the full details were obtainable, the total would be much larger.

So numerous are the moonshiners that there is a suspicion that some sort of an organization, similar to that of the "Big Five," which is said to control the price of bootleg bonded liquor, is in existence among the still proprietors.

Police Have Information

The retaiiing of bonded liquors according to police information, is controlled more closely. Frequent meetings are held by the rum runners wherein prices are set, plans made for getting the liquor into the city and its final disposition, each agent being allotted a cetrain quota of quarts. That explains the uniformity in prices and the fact that a deale, being rout of stock, either sends the known customer to another or obtains his order for him.

Bonded goods have shown a decided lessening in quality, however, and the strap of the Government can no longer be taken as an absolute guarantee. Some bottles are opened and mixtures, containing high percentages of ether and chloroform, substituted, which explains the fact that in police court many prisoners asset trhat they only took one or two drinks before they passed away. This is possible, physicians hold.

Nevertheless the estimate is that about 2,000 to 3,000 quarts of real and alleged whiskey are being sold daily in Detroit.

MICHIGAN TELEPHONE CO. TO RAISE RATES

Lansing, Dec. 18.—The Michigan State Telephone Company has filed a schedule of income and expenses with the Public Utilities Commission, and announced that a request for an immediate increase in rates in Detroit and throughout the State would be made.

"We don't intend to ask for any definite schedule of rates," George Welch, General Manager, announced "We are simply laying the facts before the Commission and asking for relief. The table of our income and expenses filed today, shows that we cannot continue to do business under the temporary rates qut into effect in August."

The company asked the Commission to put experts accountants to work on its books immediately, to verify the figures contained in the table presented today. This table purports to show that the present rates in Detroit yield about 10 per cent less than the Burleson rates, and that the present temporary rates throughout the remainder of the state yield ont-third less than did the postmaster general's schedule.

Must Back Bonds

E. S. Wilson, attorney for the American Telephone & Telegraph Co's. subsidiaries in the district, announced that the Michigan Company had been granted $12,000,000 by the holding company, with which to increase its facilities in the state, especially in Detroit and Flint, it will be impossible to make the extensions contemplated when this money was granted, he said, unless the Commission will grant a new temporary rate that will cover the interest payments on the new bonds that must be issued.

"Today's schedule appears to show that Detroit subscribers are now paying a larger share of the expenses of the company that they did under the Burleson rate schedule Despite this the request will be made to increase rates in Detroit as well as other exchanges. Revenues in Detroit during July, the last month that of the Burleson rates, were $515,734. In August, the first month that the Commission's temporary rates were in force, the revenue in Detroit exchange was $489,195. In September the Detroit exchange revenue went up to $499,738 and in Ocotber reached $521,462.

Expenses Fall.

Meanwhile the operating expenses in Detroit were falling. In July they were $469,246, in August $404,842, and in September $392,920. In October they went up again, but not to the level reached during the Burleson regime, totaling $451,559.

Operating revenue in the whole list of exchanges in Michigan, excluding Detorit, was $1,144,028 in July; $1,016,049 in August; $1,007,575 in September, and $1,052,072 in October. During the same months the total expenses including the payments on the A. T. & T. 4 1-2 per cent contract, but not including depreciation were: July $927,147, August $755,160, September $777,176, October $862,625.

Detroit Margin Goes

The figures indicate that the income and expenses of the exchanges outside Detroit have decreased about one-third since the Commission's temporary rates superceded the Burleson rates, while the margin of income over expenditure in the Detroit exchange has tended to increase.

The company representatives say they want temporary relief only, pending the final appraisal of all property of the company in Michigan, and the establishment by the Commission of a schedule of permanent rates for the whole state. These permanent rates will probably not be determined for at least a year.

Mainly About People

Ontario has a new Lieutenant-Governor, Lionel H. Clarke, who, at the time of his appointment to the high office, was chairman of the Board of Harbor Commissioners of Toronto.

His Honor has never taken a prominent part in public life, but is widely known in business cricles.

Guelph is his native place, and from the schools of that city he passed to Trinity College School at Port Hope. His career as a business man has been followed in Toronto, where for thirty years he has carried on a large grain trade, and for a considerable time was a member of the Board of Grain Supervisors. He has been president of the Toronto Board of Trade, member of the York County Good Roads Commission, and of the Canadian Niagara Falls Park Commission.

Seven years ago the Toronto Harbor Commission was organized, and Mr. Clarke was appointed chairman. Under his administration the harbor has been so improved as to make it one of the best on the Great Lakes.

The Hon. Lionel H. Clarke succeeds Sir John Hendrie, whose term of office has expired. He is the twelfth Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario since Confederation. His constitutional advisers are the Hon. E. C. Drury, Prime Minister, and his colleagues whose chief support in the House will be drawn from the members returned at the late elections by the United Farmers of Ontario.

WIT AND WISDOM

Sufficient for Him.

There's a Bible paragraph that begins, "What shall it profit a man?" And right there the profiteer drops the Scripture perusal and devotes his whole attention to finding the answer.

Space at a Premium.

Knicker—This will be a difficult Christmas.

Bocker—Yes, what with the liquor, coal and sugar, there is no place around the house to hide a present.

Clever Solomon.

It is an increasing wonder to us how Solomon could write so many corking good paragraphs and proverbs, great columnist though he was, with all those children around the house.

He Ought To Know.

A soldier from the front applied to the hotel for a job as cook.

"What can you cook?" asked the hotelman.

"Anything, sir," was the reply.

"Well, how do you make hash?"

"You don't make it, sir," said the soldier. "It just accumulates."

Should Be.

Concern advertises for "some irresponsible party to market our new 10c sanitary kitchen utensil." This job should be over-subscribed.

FALSE DEATH STORY SHATTERS REASON

WIFE OF GEN. BANDHOLTZ, MICHIGAN OFFICER, VICTIM OF RUMOR.

Baltimore, Dec. 18. — Her mind shattered because of a false report that her husband, Gen. H. H. Bandholtz, a Michigan officer in the Regular Army, had been lost at sea when a transport on which he was crossing the Atlantic was torpedoed by a Germarine, Mrs. May Cleveland Bandholtz has been placed in a private hospital near Baltimore. Her affiction is said to be incurable.

General Bandholtz entered West Point as a cadet from Constantine, St. Joseph County, in 1886. Graduating in 1890, he was commissioned a lieutenant in the 7th U. S. Infantry. Six years later he was detailed as military instructor at the Michigan Agricultural College. He rejoined his regiment when war against Spain was declared and served during the Santiago campaign. After the campaign he was granted leave from his regiment to accept a commission as major in the 35th Michigan Volunteers, tendered him by Governor Pingree. Returning to the regular service when the 35th was mustered out, he became governor of Tayabas Province, in the Philippines, in 1902, and in April, 1903, was appointed chief of the constabulary forces of the Philippines, and, with his command, conducted several successful campaigns against outlaw bands. He had attained the rank of lieutenant-colonel in the regular service, when the world war began, and in the war served on the staff of Gen. Pershing. He is a past national commander of the Spanish War Veterans.

Mrs. Bandholtz is a relative of the family of former President Grover Cleveland.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson XII. December 21, 1919.

THE PRINCE OF PEACE.
(Christmas Lesson).

The Golden Text—"Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins." Matt. 1:21.

The Lesson Text, Isa 11:10-; Luke 2:8-14.

For entire lesson, see Isa 11:1-10; Matt. 2:1-12; Luke 2:8-14.

The Time—Isiah Wrote about 736 B.C. The birth of Jesus was 5 B.C.
The Place—Jerusalem, Bethlehem.

Lesson Text Illumined.

Isiah 11:1. There shall come forth a shoot out of the stock of Jesse. Jesse was the father of David. At the close of the last chapter the fall of Assyria is pictured as the felling of cedars of Lebanon by the axe swung by Jehovah himself. The cedar once felled puts forth no new shoots—the Assyrian power shall fall to rise no more. Next the prophet likens the house of David to an oak, which when cut down puts out a new growth. A branch out of his roots shall bear fruit. The prophet sees one shoot of great fruitfulness. "The great fulfillment and illustration of these words was seen in the birth of our Lord. The once majestic stem of Jesse was reduced to a humble, unknown family, for which the inn had no room. The axe of Rome had levelled all the proud growth of the Hebrew forest, and the tree of this family had suffered with the rest. But the root sent up a new shoot and granch. Out of that cut-down tree sprang the life which remade the world, and has given such hope and joy to mankind as were never known before" (F. B. Meyer).

Verse 2. The Spirit of Jehovah. The Holy Spirit. Shall rest upon him. Recall the witness of John the Baptist, "I beheld the Spirit descending as a dove out of heaven; and it abode upon him." The spirit of wisdom and understanding—"perfection of intellectual endowment"; the spirit of council and might—"full possession of a ruler's practical qualities"; the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of Jehovah—"the religious spirit which is to crown and direct all other gifts." "The fulfilment and far more than fulfilment, of this ideal is in Jesus, in whom were 'hid all the treasure of wisdom and knowledge': to whom no cimcumstances of difficulty ever brought the shadow of perplexity; who always saw clearly before him the path to tread, and had always 'might' to tread it, however rough; who lived all his days in unbroken fellowship with the Father and in lowly obedience" (Maclaren).

Verse 3. His delight shall be in the fear of Jehovah. This recalls the words of the Psalmist, "I delight to do thy will, O. God." It may, however, mean that he shall delight in those who are governed by their fear of Jehovah. He shall not judge after the sight of his eyes. He shall not judge by appearances. Neither decide after the hearing of bis ears. He shall not judge by hearsay. Note that the reign of the Prince of Peace will be marked, not by peace alone, but also by judgment.

Verse 4. Here we see that he combines mercy with judgment. With the rod of his mouth. "Who is he whose bare word thus has power to kill and make alive? Is not this a divine prerogative? And does it not belong in the fullest sense to him whose voice rebuked fevers, storms and demons, and pierced the dull, cold ear of death?" (Maclaren).

Verse 5. The girdle of his waist . . . . . the girdle of his loins. The flowing garment fastened up by the girdle indicates readiness for action, and the meaning of the verse is that he shall be ready for all deeds of righteousness and faithfulness.

Verses 6-9. These verses are called a vision of Paradise Regained. "We, who live in countries from which wild beasts have been exterminated, cannot understand the insecurity and terror that they cause in regions where they abound. They do not impress any more the human conscience or imagination. But they once did so most terribly. Isaiah, from his ancient point of view, is in thorough accord with the order of civilization, when he represents the subjugation of wild animals as the first problem of man, after he has established a strong government in the land. Isaiah would not have the wild beasts exterminated, but tamed. There our Western and modern imagination may fail to follow him, especially when he includes reptiles in this regeneration, and prophesies of adders and lizards as the playthings of children. But upon a warm spring day in Palestine, to sit upon the grass, beside some old dyke or ruin with its face to the south, is indeed to obtain a rapturous view of the wealth of life with which the bountiful God has blessed and made merry man's dwelling-place. How the lizards come and go among the grey stones and flash like jewels in the dust! And the timid snake rippling quickly through the grass and the leisurely tortoise, with his shiny back, and the chameleon, shivering into new color as he passes from twig to stone and stone to twig,—all the air the while alive with the music of the cricket and the bee. You feel that the ideal is not to destroy these pretty things, but, as Isaiah declares —whom we may imagine walking with his children up the steep vineyard paths, to watch the creatures come and go—the ideal is to bring them into sympathy with ourselves, make pets of them and playthings for children, who indeed stretch out their hands in joy to the pretty toys" (George Adam Smith).

Verse 10. The root of Jesse. The sprout from the house of Jesse verse 1. That standeth for an ensign of the people. And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto myself, Jn. 12:32. Unto him shall the nations seek. Unto him shall the nations resort; around him rally. His resting-place. Jerusalem, the seat of the royal house of David.

Luke 2:8-11. In the same country. The country about Bethlehem, verse 4. The city of David. The glory of Bethlehem was that it was the birthplace of the great King David. Christ the Lord. Or, anointed Lord, Christ from the Greek. Messiah from the Hebrew. Both mean The Anointed One. Christ is the title of Jesus as the One consecrated to be the Redeemer of the world.

Verses 12-13. This is the sign. The fact that the newborn Babe was found in the manager was the "sign." Wrapped in swaddling clothes. The oriental mother wraps bands of cloth tightly around the body of her babe, confining legs and arms. Heavenly host. Superhuman beings.

Verse 14. Glory in the highest. Glory in excelsis, the Latin words, have given their name to the hymn which dates from the second century. Peace among men in whom he is well pleased. Many ancient authorities read peace, good pleasure among men Rm. The nominative case of the Greek word eudokia, good will, is found in an ancient manuscript and this reading is followed in the Authorized Version, where we have good will to men. In the four oldest Greek manuscripts there is an "s" added, making eudokias genitive case; this the Revisers decided to be truer reading, and accordingly in the English Revised Version and the phrase is translated among men of good will. To show more clearly that it is God's good will, not man's—for the phrase is "a Hebraism, meaning men to whom God is favorable"—the American Revised Version has the wording among men in whom he is well pleased.

About Sciences and Religions.

The philosophical sciences deal with the general principles, laws or causes that furnish the rational explanation of anything: the rationale by which the facts of any region of knowledge are explained. The phrase is used more particularly in reference to the study of natural philosophy or physics. Empirical methods are those of observation. It is a science that grows out of experience. Such a scientist is versed, or skilled, in collecting facts and from those facts generalizations are made. There are hundreds of religions.

Forgot Waiting Bride.

When John Kemble, the gifted tragedian, was married, he returned to the stage to play Hamlet on his wedding evening. Whether his mind became so absorbed in the character as to exclude all other matters of vital importance, we cannot say; but for the time he forgot his waiting bride and what had befallen him on that fateful day, and went off to his own room on the conclusion of the performance at the theater.

Flowers Foretell Rain.

The ordinary clover and all its varieties, including shamrock, are barometers. When rain is coming the leaves shut together like the shells of an oyster. For a day or two before rain comes their stems swell to an appreciable extent, and stiffen so that the leaves are borne more uprightly than usual. This stem swelling when rain is expected is a feature of many flowering grasses.

Construction Cost Reduced.

Examples of the economic advantages of using electricity are daily brought to notice, and are of special interest in Canada, where approximately 85 per cent. of the electric power is derived from water-power and is, therefore, usually available at low rates.

The saving effected by electric operation in construction work is demonstrated in a recent article in the Engineering News-Record. The plant referred to is for the construction of a nine-span concrete bridge in Ohio. Electric energy is supplied to some thirteen motors varying in size from five horse-power to sixty-five horse-power. These are used for such machines as the saw-mill, belt conveyor, concrete mixers, derricks, pumps, pile driver, cableway and concrete hoist towers. The cableway is equipped with a sixty-five horse-power motor, the conveyor with a fifteen horse-power motor, while a mixer of one cubic yard capacity has a twenty horse-power motor. In determining the reduction in power costs by using electricity, it is stated that the work can be carried out with an average power bill of $450 monthly, while the single boiler plant which has to be used for a steam hammer costs $10 per day. If steam were used throughout, separate plants would be required for all machines, owing to their wide separation, and it is estimated that each would cost as much as the steam-hammer operations.

Export Trade In Dairy Products.

It is the consensus of opinion of Canadian officials who have visited Europe, that the future of the export trade in dairy products is assured. In England butter is everywhere at a premium and Canadian cheese continues to hold its good reputation. Mr. H. S. Arkell, Live Stock Commissioner, who has recently returned from overseas, states that the shortage of milk and dairy products in Great Britain is unprecedented. The same is true of other European countries. The scarcity and high price of concentrated feed is to some extent responsible for this. This condition is so general as not quickly to be remedied. It is further responsible for retarding the increase of swine production and the restoring of the normal requirements of fat. This statement from the Live Stock Commissioner should give confidence not only to dairy farmers, but to those who are able to raise hogs.

Canada's Coal Production.

The tabulated statement of coal production shows that no coal is produced in three provinces, namely, Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba. In 1917 the total production in Canada was 14,015,588 tons, having a value of $47,643,646.

Quick Ventilation.

Quicker ventilation will be possible if the shade rollers are hung on brackets fastened in the upper extremity of the window casement rather than in sockets between the casing.

"Good Stickers."

There are some practical "makeshifts" for mucilage. The white of an egg will be found quite as good for sealing letters. Another substitute is a cold boiled potato rubbed over the paper.

Domestic Cat Distinct Species.

The Egyptian cat seemed to have a good claim to the honor of being the ancestor of the domestic cat, both on account of its tapering tail and size, in which it bears a great similarity to the domestic cat. But peculiarities which were discovered in its dentition were sufficient to remove its claim. So it seems best to consider the domestic cat a distinct species.

The Rattlesnake's Rattle.

The rattle of the rattlesnake is developed from the single conical scale or epidermal spine, which in most snakes forms the internal tegument of the tail. The bone on which the roof of the rattle rests consists of the last caudal vertebra and is covered with a skin which is the beginning of the rattle in young rattlesnakes.

The Canadian Mining Institute.

In 1898 an act to incorporate the Canadian Mining Institute was adopted by the Parliament of Canada. The founding of the institute was for the following purposes:

First, to promote the arts and sciences connected with the economical production of valuable minerals and metals, by means of meetings for the reading and discussion of technical papers, and the subsequent distribution of such information as may be gained through the medium of publications. Second, the establishment of a central reference library and a headquarters for the purpose of this organization. Third, to take concerted action upon such matters as affect the mining and metallurgical industries of the Dominion of Canada. Fourth, to encourage and promote these industries by all lawful and honorable means.

In March, 1905, an annual general meeting of the institute was held in Montreal and bylaws were adopted. To-day the Canadian Mining Institute is the one strong national mining organization of Canada. Its annual general meeting is one of the events that mining engineers and others interested in the development of the Canadian mining industry look forward to. It is now planned to have two annual general meetings, one to be held in the east and one in the west.

Big Prices for Muskrat.

Muskrat has had really the greatest advance of all furs. From the 30 cents of a few seasons ago to an average of around $3—and in the case of one exceptionally fine lot to $5.10 was certainly a great rise.

Since all kinds of furs are bringing high prices, an increased number of people have started in fur farming such animals as mink, skunk, marten, muskrat, etc., and there is no reason why they cannot all be raised at a profit, says the Black Fox Magazine.

If the kitchen windows have no awning, the shades should be dark blue or green.

Wanted Only "Overgrown."

Florence, having invited Earl to her birthday, was anxiously waiting for an invitation to Earl's party. One day she asked him if she was going to be invited to his party, to which he replied: "Oh, I'm not going to have any kids at my party, only overgrown people."

Pleased at Her Appearance.

Jane was busy entertaining herself by looking at the photograph album. Soon she came across a picture of herself taken when she was a tiny, bald-headed baby, and in all earnestness she said: "What a tunnin' homely baby!"

RETIRING MAYOR DUNCAN

make repairs to the Insolation Hospital.

Ex-Mayor Rush.

Ex-Mayor Rush stated that the Charity Board had not been called on as often as expected but was attending to its duties as faithfully as possible. He praised Relief Officer F. W. Miller for his work in the past in distributing the funds.

Civic Development.

Ald. Gainey next proposed the toast to the Civic Development Commission. He agreed with Judge Huycke's suggestion for a more united effort on the part of those who are working in the city's interests. Ald. Gainey said that he is looking for great things from this newly appointed commission and expects it to be a factor in the future advancement of the city.

Ryerson Ritchie's Address.

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, after paying tribute to the services of Mayor Duncan, responded as follows:

The compliment of your appointment, as a member of the City Development Commission, is highly appreciated; but, noting the men whom you have chosen to serve with me, I am a bit nervous about the chairmanship, for I have seen each one of them "in the chair" looking down on the rest of us. For the immediate present all I can safely promise is that we'll do the best we can with these four chairmen.

[illegible] sion has a real job on its hands, but, fortunately, we are to have the counsel and guidance of the Government City Planner, Mr. Thomas Adams, of the Federal Commission of Conservation, whose recent visit here was doubtless your inspiration in creating the commission. Mr. Adams stands at the head of his great profession and Canada is surely fortunate in having secured his services for the urban development of our great Dominion.

This new commission, Mr. Mayor, may rank with the City Council in two respects; first, its members are to work without wages and, second, they may be abused behind their backs. We are "great" in Peterborough in finding flaws in people who try to serve the city.

I venture the assertion that, as a rule, people who "buttonhole" the aldermen usually have some special or private interest at stake. Those who, sincerely and earnestly, seek to help the aldermen, from a conscientious sense of civic duty make a small percentage of the whole number of interviewers.

Some people have a habit of belittling and abusing the City Council much in the same way that they discredit the motives of the Board of Trade. Once in a while such abuse leaks into the newspapers.

As a matter of fact the Board of Trade, whatever its faults, cannot grow in influence or usefulness as a conservator or private self-seeking, individually or collectively. It must stand uncompromisingly for the pro- [illegible] rights of the individual. It must stand for the material welfare of Peterborough and each and every one of her citizens.

With what grace, what spirit of decency or fair play, do men question the integrity of other men who are public servants or who may be banded together to work for the public welfare?

The City Council, the legislature of Peterborough—how do we speak of this important body? When deputations of citizens wait upon the aldermen in Council, they pay them open respect. Do they do that in private conservation among themselves? In my humble opinion it is a disgrace that our aldermen are subjected to thoughtless criticism, unwarranted suspicion and unworthy abuse "behind their backs." They ought to have our aid and our hearty thanks.

There is such a thing as the hypocrisy of citizenship and I honestly think it is the curse of our day as much as hypocrisy is of Christianity.

If we cannot be honest with one another as citizens, faithful in our public and private lives to the higher ideals of citizenship, willing to spend and be spent in practical service, we may as well give up any effort to put Peterborough in the class of advancing cities.

We all have knowledge to gain, limitations and defects to overcome, and we need larger social vision, but we want to be told those things, face to face by friends whom we trust and [illegible] respect. Thus we may gain in our ability to serve.

The city is to be especially congratulated upon the action of the Council in proposing the acquirement of the land on the Ashburnham side, south of the new bridge. In my view this is the best thing that could happen to Peterborough at this time, for this park can be made, at small cost, an ideal central playground for the people, and it will show our confidence in the city's greater future. The opportunity may never come to us again.

The City Development Commission is intended to be a first step in doing for the city what is done every day in our several occupations. No mechanic or business man ever became proficient without study, practice and planning. Why should the city develop without design? There has been designing in spots by private enterprise, but no systematic or symmetrical planning for the good of the commonalty. Without the commonalty there would be no genuine private enterprise.

It is important I suppose that Peterborough shall grow and grow rapidly, but it is far more important that it shall become attractive to live and work in. Our city should be so developed as to attract industry, so planned that the workers, with brain and hands, will get more out of life than they can get in any over-grown, over-populous city. It is only by intelligent planning, painstaking foresight, common-sense and persistency that we can attain such a desirable condition.

The new commission is born at an opportune time. Reconstruction is our watchword. Encouragement is in the very atmosphere. Thank God, we already have the Baby Clinic and that we are positively tackling the problems of cultural development of life and living. We are planning for the better moral and mental development of ourselves, collectively.

But what of the material city in which we live? What of its physical formation and evolution? Our streets and thoroughfares, park and playgrounds, streams and watersides, our homes and neighborhoods—these are problems yet awaiting solution. We want no poverty, no idleness, no lack of occupation in Peterborough. We want neither palace nor hovel. We want a city of homes—we want a home-like city—good for us, good for our children.

Nature and fortune have favored us and, since our material and moral states are interdependent, our development should be symmetrical. Our city as a whole will be insignificant, mediocre or excellent—just what we make it. Are we not as a people judged by our city?

Good Education.

In proposing the toast to education, Ald. Crowe spoke of the great improvements the educational system has undergone in the past few years. The schools of the city are splendid and great credit is due the work of the Board of Education.

In replying to this toast Mr. R. Denne announced that there were six No. 1 schools in the city. The Collegiate has unfortunately outgrown its requirements and that will be one of the problems confronting the future Board. He stated that when the new school has been completed this city will have one of the best schools in Ontario. Another problem confronting the future Board will be the starting of a technical school.

Pleasure to Work With Mayor.

Then came the toast of the evening, proposed by Ald. Phelan to Mayor Duncan. Ald. Phelan expressed it as a pleasure to work with Mayor Duncan. The Mayor should take it as an honor that he was elected twice by acclamation to the chief magistrate's chair. He stated that as chairman of the Board of Works the Mayor has rendered him every assistance in his work.

Mayor's Reply.

The Mayor replied to the toast at length, thanking the citizens for cooperating with him in all his endeavors. He referred to every alderman in turn and expressed his appreciation of the manner in which they had served the city as heads of their separate departments or as serving under those heads.

He urged that the new Council get together and do everything that energy can do to take advantage of the city's advantages in bringing a number of the new industries that are considering locating here.

He urged all present to make strenuous efforts toward passing the bylaws to be submitted to the people on election day. He offered to drive a rig or anything else to help pass them both, as he considers they are for the benefit of the city.

To the Ladies.

In moving this toast Ald. Hamilton devoted most of his time toward praising the Mayor for his services, requesting Ald. Edgar to change his mind and run for alderman, and in urging the people to pass the bylaws.

City Solicitor Widdifield, in replying to this toast, referred to the part women had played in the history of the world.

Judge Huycke rose to his feet at this stage and complimented the city on choosing Mr. Widdifield as city solicitor to fill the recent vacancy.

Hope Aldermen Will Return.

In proposing the toast to the retiring aldermen, Ald. Morrison hoped they would all be returned to the fold on the next elections.

Ald. McIntyre, Edgar, Taylor, Phelan and Garside made suitable replies to the toast, in which they all intimated their ambition for further honors except Ald. Edgar, who is firm in his decision to retire.

Mr. R. Denne made the suggestion that the candidates for mayor retire in favor of a third term for Mayor Duncan and everybody get together to return all the retiring members. The pogram ended with the National Anthem.

Those present with the Mayor were His Honor Judge Huycke, Ald. Morrison, Taylor, Phelan, Turner, Hamilton, Edgar, McIntyre, Garside, Crowe and Gainey, and ex-Mayor Buller, ex-Mayor Rush, R. Ritchie, R. H. Parsons, W. J. Greene, Dr. McPherson, Chief Thompson, Chief Grange, H. Evans, R. Wilson, W. Fisher, C. R. Widdifield, S. R. Armstrong, F. W. Miller, C. S. Stapleton, C. Curtis, F. J. A. Hill and P. Thompson.

COULDN'T LEAVE HOUSE FOR YEAR

HAMILTON TELLS OF HIS WIFE'S REMARKABLE IMPROVEMENT SINCE TAKING TANLAC.

"Last Sunday my wife was able to be out of the house for the first time in almost a year, and she couldn't have been out then if Tanlac had not put her on her feet," is the remarkable testimony of William Hamilton, who resides at 149 Preston St., Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

"Mrs. Hamilton had Spanish Influenza over a year ago,' he continued, "and had never been able to overcome the effects of it. Her appetite was gone completely and she fell off in weight and strength until she was as frail and thin as anybody could be and still get around. Her nerves were all torn up and the least little noise would make her jump and quiver like a leaf. Many a night she has lain awake until daylight in nervous misery. She complained of dull throbbing headaches and it has made me actually suffer at times to see her so weak and run down and in so much pain. Somebody else had to attend to all the housework as she could just barely creep about the house and hadn't been able to go out-of-doors for nearly twelve months. She was confined to the bed most of the time and even when she would get up in her room for a while, she really ought to have been in bed.

"It sure was a surprise to me to see her build up the way she has since she started taking Tanlac. Her appetite is just fine now, why, she told me the other day that if she kept on she would eat us out of house and home. Every day she seems stronger and more like her old self and she never complains of being tired and weak and run down anymore. Last Sunday she went out for a long walk with me, for the first time she's been out of the house in nearly a year. She seems like a different person and is beginning to feel that her troubles are all over. Tanlac is the only thing that ever did her any good, and we both are happy as we can be over the way she has recovered her health since she has been taking it and we are glad to recommend it all the time."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

NO VERDICT GIVEN ON THE KOCH REMEDY

MEDICAL SOCIETY COMMITTEE REPORTS FAILURE; NEW BODY IS NAMED

Detroit, Dec. 18.—The merit or lack of merit of the cancer treatment evolved by Dr. W. F. Koch, of this city, is left an open question by the investigating committee of five doctors appointed by the Wayne County Medical Society, according to the committee's report to the society Monday evening.

The committee report complained that because of "negligent" treatment accorded by Dr. Koch to the nine patients placed in the Harman Kiefer Hospital by the department of health for the test, no conclusions could be reached. After asserting that the number of visits paid the patients by Dr. Koch was insufficient, the report said that "some of the patients were disgusted, some left, and the rest were sent home, closing our connection with the matter."

"It can be readily seen," the report concluded, "that with the few and irregular treatments given, nothing could be accomplished, and nothing found out about the value or lack of value of the treatment."

The committee, of which the members were Drs. J. Henry Carstens, W. P. Manton, J. H. Andries, J. W. Vaughan and Jas. E. Davis, asked to be discharged.

When Dr. Carstens, in response to a question by Dr. E. W. King concerning his personal opinion of the treatment, replied in the same tenor as the committee report, Dr. King moved the appointment of a new committee.

"We want to know whether this is a unco game or not before we have thousands of patients coming here from all over the country," he said. The society therefore named another committee, who will continue the investigation of this question.

LIQUOR INTERESTS CLAIM $400,000,000

Chicago, Dec. 18.—Liquor interests estimate their losses as a result of the enforcement of the war-time prohibition law at $400,000,000, according to a statement made here by Levy Mayer, chief counsel for the distillers in the middle west.

He announced that a suit to recover approximately this sum from the United States Government will soon be filed in the Court of Claims at Washington. He will go to New York next week to confer with the legal representatives of certain liquor interests with regard to the filing of this suit.

Attorney Mayer explained that this action is entirely apart from the proceedings attacking constitutional prohibition, to be submitted to the United States Supreme Court.

Joseph Wolf, a distiller's agent, announced the sale of 1,000 barrels and 30,000 cases of whiskey for immediate export. The bulk of it will go to Hamburg, Germany. Small consignments will be sent to Switzerland, Holland and Norway.

SHALL AMERICAN WOMEN VOTE FOR NEXT PRESIDENT OF UNITED STATES?

All Depends Upon the Action Taken by the Governors of Republican States.

Washington, Dec. 18.—Ratification of the suffrage amendment in time to permit women generally to take part in the next Presidental campaign depends upon the manner in which Republican Governors respond to the resolution adopted by the National Committee, asking that special sessions of the Legislature be called, according to Miss Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's Party.

Miss Paul sees no hope in democratic help and says the Republicans must be relied upon to put over the amendment in the matter of ratification, just as they did in passing it in the Senate. Miss Paul analyzes the situation by states and, while she is not willing to prophecy what action will be taken, it is clear that securing the requisite number of ratifications will not be so easy.

"The fact that the Democrats, by refusing the last two votes in the Senate, held up the passage of the amendment for more than a year, makes us hesitate to count our ratification votes until they are cast," Miss Paul explained. 'If Republican Governors will act there is no question but the amendment will be passed promptly.

"There are still six full suffrage states which have not acted. In four of these, Wyoming, Washington, Idaho and Arizona, the Governors are Republican. The Legislatures of four other states, presided over by Republican Governors, stand ready to ratify if called into session. They are Connecticut, Vermont, Delaware and Indiana. Republican Legislatures meet in regular session in January in Kentucky, Rhode Island and New Jersey. This would leave only one state to be secured.

"This one vote can easily be won, for Oklahoma and Nevada, full suffrage State, with democratic Governors, are still unaccounted for, while the Democratic Legislature of Maryland, meeting in regular session in January, is expected to take favorable action, and West Virginia shows a majority pledged when its Democratic Governor is will to act."

The situation in the States from which action is now looked for, according to latest information at the National Woman's Party, is as follows:

"In Wyoming Governor Carey, Republican, proclaimed a celebration for December 10, the anniversary of the enfranchisement of the women of that State, but refused to call the Legislature into session to aid in the enfranchisement of other American women.

"From Idaho Governor Davis, Republican, wrote that if Idaho is needed to make possible the ratification of woman suffrage, there is little question but that the Legislature will be called in special session.

"From Arizona the secretary of Governor Campbell, also a Republican, writes that Governor Campbell states that in his opinion the special session would be called to convene some time in March, 1920.

"Governor Hart, Republican, of Washington, refuses in all letters and interviews to consider calling a special session. In all of these States the Legislatures would, of course, give a practically unanimous vote for ratification if they met.

"In Indiana, a Presidential suffrage State, the Legislature is also strongly in favor of the Amendment. In Connecticut the Legislature is ready to ratify, but Governor Holcomb, Republican, is an anti-suffragist and refuses to call a session.

"In Delaware a poll of the Legislature shows that a majority of the members will vote for ratification. Governor Towsend, Republican, refuses to call a special session because of local issues. In Vermont the present Legislature passed a Presidential suffrage bill which was vetoed by Governor Clement, a Republican.

"In Kentucky, New Jersey and Rhode Island the Legislatures will meet in regular session next January. In Kentucky both the Republican and Democratic State conventions have indorsed ratification. Information from leaders in New Jersey shows that the State conventions of both parties have indorsed ratification of the amendment."

SOME THINGS THAT ADD TO A MOVING PICTURE

WONDERFUL LIST OF ATTRACTIONS APPEAR IN "YVONNE FROM PARIS."

Take dazzling Parisian dancer, a tyrannical aunt, a picturesque Italian violinist, a distinguished American theatrical producer, a good-looking bachelor playwright, a disreputable "lounge lizard" and a tigerish woman aflame with jealousy. Mix well with Paris and Broadway atmosphere. Add a plentiful sprinkling of stage, shipboard, cafe, hotel and taxi settings.

Flavor with the spice of real life in a big city. Stir in pretty dresses, sparkling smiles, twinkling toes, delightful acting quaint little incidents, and a charming romance.

Sweeten with Mary Miles Minter—decorate with an all-star cast—and you have a combination of comedy and drama that, baked into a pictur-pie made with customary "Flying A" care for detail, is guaranteed to tickle every palate and make 'em call for "More!"

The name of the prize production above analyzed is "Yvonne from Paris," and when it comes to the Empire Friday and Saturday you'll want to be on hand to get your rightful share of its delightful fare.

Never before has Miss Minter been supported by so many popular and capable players—folks like J. Barney Sherry, probably the best-liked and best-known character man on the screen; E. Alyn Warren, a genius in the makeup and pantomime of the Italian; Rosemary Hheby, who is so much in demand for adventuress roles that she never gets a chance to play the everyday kind of woman any more; Bertram Grassby, a specialist in the ways and wiles of cabs and "bounders;" Vera Lewis, with aristocratic manner that would put an English duchess to shame; to say nothing of Miss Minter's favorite leading man, Alan Forrest, who as an eccentric playwright has a role quite different from any part in which you have ever seen him.

"Yvonne from Paris" is a thoroughly charming screen play, with a real plot to hold the interest, and enough airiness of treatment and lightness of touch to make it a breezy enjoyable entertainment on the hottest day in the year.

FROM CITY TO FARM

(1) Gold Coin Potatoes grown from hand-selected tubers, and Marquis Wheat plot growing from hand-selected heads, on Rosehurst Farm, Cayley, Alberta.
(2) J. W. Lucas, an Eastern Canadian city boy, now owner of this Western Farm.
(3) Some of his Porkers.
(4) Grade Percheron Horses, used by Mr. Lucas on his Rosehurst Farm.

We are continually hearing about the farm boy who goes to the city, but we hear little about the city boy who goes to the farm. Yet, just as many farm boys have become successful business men in the cities, so there are undoubtedly many city boys who have become successful farmers. This is more especially true in the countries that are being newly opened up such as Western Canada. Among the winners at the International Soil-Products Exposition held at Kansas City recently at least one, if not more, of the successful exhibitors was born and bred in a city and only became a farmer after he had reached manhood. John W. Lucas who won prizes for white oats, brome grass seed, barley and rye, had never been a farmer until he settled on his homestead in Cayley, Alberta, sixteen years ago. However, he has set to work to learn all he could about this noble profession and nobody can say that he has made a bad job of it.

Mr. Lucas was born in one of the cities of Eastern Canada. Like many other boys whose parents are in moderate circumstances he earned money after school hours delivering newspapers and in various other odd jobs. Leaving school, he says, he got a real job at six dollars a week and later came West and worked in Winnipeg for a year. He had always felt a desire to become a farmer, however, and it is not surprising that the call of the Canadian Government for settlers for free homesteads at once appealed to him. He came to Alberta in 1903 and located on his homestead in Cayley, in the southern part of the province, the same year.

He is now the owner of eight hundred acres of land in a block, and is interested, besides, in six and a half sections of land—4,160. On his farm he has produced as much as 139 bushels of oats to the acre and 60 bushels of wheat to the acre. The quality of his oats may be judged from the fact that for five years he won the premier honors for this crop at the Alberta Provincial Seed Fair. He has also been a regular exhibitor and prize winner at the International Soil Products Exposition and other exhibitions held in the United States.

It has been Mr. Lucas' ambition to become a good farmer and he has spared no efforts to learn all he could about his profession. He spent the winters of 1912 and 1913 in Iowa as part of his agricultural education. Here he visited some of the best farms in the State, asked lots of questions, saw a good deal and came away with as much knowledge as he could gather. He considers these two winters spent in Iowa among the best investments he ever made. He learned much about horses, cattle and hogs, and also how good farmers select the ears of corn, how in this way they increase the yield, producing ears true to type and uniform in size. He figured that if corn could be so much improved by selection the same thing could be done with the heads of wheat, oats, barley and hills of potatoes. He came back to Alberta and began to use this knowledge. Not only has he increased the yield of these crops but has improved the quality and type as well. Instead of fields of oats, barley and other crops with heads of all sizes he has now fields of these grains with heads nearly all alike. By hand selection of potatoes, saving only the prolific hills of the type, he has been able to produce as high as thirty seven marketable potatoes from one hill, and from one potato planted a yield of seventy-three pounds of potatoes. This is a record difficult to beat anywhere.

These are some of the things a city boy has been able to do on a farm. Not only has he become the owner of a large area of land but on this land he is producing crops of the highest quality and a maximum quantity. Practically the whole of the crop grown by him he sells as seed at a higher price than that obtained by the average farmer, and the demand for what he produces is greater than he can supply.

He is also a great believer in livestock. A man who has studied farming as he has done naturally would be. Cattle, hogs and horses are raised on his farm and the same painstaking care in the selection of types and breeding is paid to livestock as he pays to the selection of grain, with results equally as satisfactory.

The success of John W. Lucas should be inspiring to many a city boy. "Any boy can do what I have done in this country," he says. "All it needs, is persistence." To this may be added patience and a desire to excel, qualities possessed by most successful men, whether in city or country.

BLOCK ARCTIC CURRENT

PROPOSAL TO DAM BELLE ISLE STRAIT.

Canada Would Benefit by Having St. Lawrence Free of Ice All Year—Newfoundland and New England States Would Also Have Milder Climate.

PLANS now chrystallizing in Newfoundland may lead to a marked amelioration of the somewhat rigorous climate of the island. The proposed daming of Belle Isle Straits, which would block the Arctic current, would also greatly help Canadian commerce by keeping open the St. Lawrence route. It would also give the New England states a milder climate.

The citizenry of Newfoundland is keen to construct a great dam squarely across the throat of the Strait of Belle Isle and thus shut the door in the face of the frigid and intrusive Arctic current.

It is into the Strait of Belle Isle that the Labrador current so frequently drives great masses of field ice and towering bergs to menace navigation during the spring and summer months when the glacial Northland releases these perils to shipping. At other times, the Labrador current surges into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, chills the contiguous air and sets back for weeks vegetation's response to the rays of the northern sun. According to our hydrographic experts, describing the drift of ice and bergs in the grip of the Labrador current:

"By the middle of January the shores of Newfoundland and Gulf of St. Lawrence are full of ice which has been frozen there, and are opened or closed by a favorable or adverse wind. Navigation in the River St. Lawrence is closed about the middle of November and does not open until about May. A wind from northwest to southwest will clear the eastern coast of Newfoundland, while the Gulf of St. Lawrence may remain full of ice until the first of May. Even after this date much ice is found in the gulf until July, and by August or earlier the field ice is replaced in the Strait of Belle Isle by bergs."

Plainly, the Arctic flood that enters the Gulf of St. Lawrence by way of the Strait of Belle Isle is one potent aid to the development of local ice by chilling the waters so that they will freeze early. This, quite apart from the intrusion of bergs and floes from Labrador, closes the St. Lawrence river to navigation for months when movement to and from the sea would be of great economic moment to Canada.

The throat of the Strait is in the neighborhood of Forteau Bay, where the span from shore to shore is ten miles. Even so, the soundings show depths ranging from 32 to 62 fathoms (192 and 327 feet). Nothing approaching a dam of such length and height has yet been erected. Further to the eastward where the distance across is about eighteen miles, the soundings show depths of 17, 20, 43 and 18 fathoms across the strait from Wreck Bay to Cape Norman. Here the shallower water and more moderate currents, even with a wider interval to be closed, would make it easier to plant the obstruction. In either case, the enterprise would call for the expenditure of a vast sum.

It is argued as an offset that the climatic modifications, which would be effected by shutting out the Labrador current, would induce enormous agricultural increases and raise the value of the lands by billions of dollars. Further, we are told that the exclusion of the Labrador current from the Gulf of St. Lawrence would permit the warm waters of the Gulf Stream to swing in nearer to the coast, thus tempering the cold months and making the St. Lawrence river as well as the gulf navigable the year round.

The Labrador current brings masses of sand, etc., from the Arctic, which have been deposited in the Grand Bank, and instead of underrunning the Gulf Stream without serious interference has been forced more and more surfaceward by the steadily rising Grand Bank—an obstacle in the main of its own forming. In a kindred fashion, but to a lesser extent, the Gulf Stream has carried sand northward and has helped to upbuild from the south the great barrier which to-day brings the frigid waters of the Arctic current and the warm flood from the tropics into disastrous conflict in the neighborhood of Newfoundland—robbing the Gulf Stream of the major part of its beneficial heat and modifying radically its further paths of travel.

Seven years ago an American mechanical engineer, Carroll Livingston Riker, of New York city, who has done notable things in the realm of hydraulic engineering, boldly proposed the building of a giant jetty projecting to the south and east from Cape Race directly across the main path of the southbound Labrador current. In laying his scheme before Congress a year later Mr. Riker claimed that he could accomplish this amazing result at an expenditure of $20,000,000! He purposed effecting this by drawing upon the forces of nature in such a way as to induce both the Gulf Stream and the Labrador Current—especially the latter—to rear a great sandy bulwark right athwart its own present sweep. No action was taken, but the plan now proposed is somewhat along this line.—Robert G. Skerrett, in Toronto Star.

Value of Farm Stock.

The total value of farm stock in Canada at the time of collecting the last statistics was estimated to be $1,102,261,000, as compared with $903,686,000 in the year 1916. In 1917, for the first time, the total value of farm stock exceeded one billion dollars.

Warren Mallor, Woodslee, sold 9,700 lbs. of tobacco, which was grown on five acres, for $4,070.

New Zealand Freight For Export Held Two Seasons in Storage

NEW ZEALAND farmers and exporters are watching with anxiety the growth of stocks of meat in the cold stores of the Dominion. There are nearly 7,000,000 freight carcasses of mutton and lamb awaiting shipment and some of this meat has been held already for two seasons, writes the Wellington correspondent of the Christian Science Monitor.

A freight carcass, it may be explained, is 60 pounds of meat, and in shipping measurement it represents three cubic feet, so that New Zealand wants 21,000,000 cubic feet of refrigerated cargo space to clear its stores before the new season commences. The shipping will not be available and the Dominion, once again, will have to carry forward an awkwardly large quantity of meat.

Dominion producers are watching the American Meat Trust at the present time. They are not sure that they are themselves getting what they call a square deal. New Zealand sells to the British Government its exportable surplus of meat at the following f.o.b. prices per pound: Mutton, 4⅝d. to 5¾d.; lamb, 6½d. to 6¾d.; beef, 4¼d. to 5d. Readers will scarcely need to be told that these prices are below the world market rates. The British Government accepts the meat in the New Zealand cold stores, pays an advance on it and arranges for shipment. This contract was entered into during the war and it runs until June, 1920.

The prices admittedly have been profitable to the New Zealand farmers. At the same time the British Government sells the mutton and lamb in England, wholesale, for 1s. 3d. a pound and the beef for 1s. 3½d. a pound; and the profit made by the Imperial authorities on this transaction is used to equalize the cost of the Government's purchases of American meat at 1s. 2d. a pound and over. The American and New Zealand meat is pooled.

The trouble, from New Zealand's point of view, does not end there. The Germans sank some of the Dominion's refrigerated steamers. The British Government has commandeered others and used them to carry not merely American troops, but also American meat. Consequently frozen meat has accumulated in the New Zealand stores. True, this meat has been bought and largely paid for by the British Government, but it fills the stores, hampers the freezing companies, and threatens to cause a serious state of affairs when the British contract runs out in June. Britain will be in a position to give preference in shipment to the accumulated meat. The new season's meat will have uncertain prospects and heavy storage charges. Prices will fall, and then, argue the producers, the trust, which already has a footing, will have a chance to secure control.

In fact, the producers suspect that the trust has too much influence in London already and they point to the heavy British purchases of American meat at prices that are regarded here as almost fabulous. Some of these purchases were made while New Zealand was clamoring for the relief of congested stores, but perhaps the men at this end are not making sufficient allowance for the transport problem. Obviously it was much easier for Britain to ship meat from America than from New Zealand at the period of acute shipping shortage.

New Zealand farmers are asking now that the New Zealand Government shall urge the Imperial authorities to sell the Dominion's meat at the landed price, independently of meat from any other source. They argue that by this means they can secure increased consumption and hasten the disappearance of the accumulated stocks. The Government will make the desired representations; and a committee of farmers is going to Britain to deal with the situation on the spot.

Suddenly Owns a Coal Mine.

By a sudden turn of fortune's wheel George Morgan, working in a colliery in the Rhonuda Valley, Wales, is now suddenly the owner of a steam coal seam having an estimated yield of 20,000,000 tons. He is a man of 58 years, living in humble circumstances.

Mr. Morgan was born at Lane End, in the Forest of Dean, a mile out of Coleford. His family had occupied common land in the district for generations past. About forty years ago he and five others pegged out a claim to certain land. Morgan has outlived a rival claimant, and is the sole surviving owner.

The Government has at last acknowledged his claim, and forwarded him title deeds with the benefit of all mineral rights and turnout. The only stipulation as to royalties is that he pay four cents per ton on all coal worked. The land forms part of the Trenchard seam, which varies in thickness from three to seventeen feet.

Compestible Coal.

"What kind of coal do you wish, mum?"

"Dear me, I am so inexperienced in these things. Are there various kinds?"

"Oh, yes. We have egg coal, chestnut—"

"I think I'll take egg coal. We have eggs oftener than we have chestnuts."

Kind-Hearted Man.

"By the way, George, what shall we get Mabel for a wedding present? She gave us that plush upholstered chair that's in the attic, you know."

"I don't think we'd better send her anything, dear. Why not let bygones be bygones?"

Members of the Brantford Housing Commission will receive $150 for their services.

Yes, Luke, the coquet was created so the fool might have a companion.

Rainbow's Formation.

While it is true that the beautiful colors displayed by the rainbow are due to the passage of light through raindrops, the popular conception that the drops are directly in line between the sun and the bow is incorrect, according to scientists. The light enters the raindrop and is refracted and reflected back to form the bow. In this passage through the drop the different colors are produced which, blended make our ordinary white light.

Quiet-Little-Dinner Note.

A minister was telling us the other day about hurrying around a hotel in Columbus with one hat on his head and another in his hand, not knowing any more than a rabbit where he got the second hat, and we told him not to mind that, as we'd often been that way in Columbus. And the good man seemed greatly comforted. A man should so live that he can do some kindly act like this every day or so.—Liberty (O.) Press.

Raisin Grapes.

Ordinary grapes do not make good raisins. Leading varieties used are the Muscatel, Gordo, Blanco, Muscat of Alexandria and Malaga. The bunches are cut from the vines and placed on trays to sun-dry, being turned from time to time. The process is simple. Large growers have curing sheds to avoid risk in drying on account of rain. Seeding is done by machinery.

WINS ON A TWENTY TO ONE SHOT AND BECOMES A FAMOUS TURFMAN

Victory of Horse Called "Spring Chicken" Under Arc Lights of St. Louis Night Track Starts Barney Schreiber on His Career, Now Closed.

By AL SPINK.

There were sighs and tears in the American turf world when the other day news came from Cincinnati of the death there of Barney Schreiber the old master of Woodlands.

Time was when Barney was the best-known turfman in America. Barney's purse strings always hung low, and when flour ran low in the barrel and the oat bin was empty the old master of Woodlands filled them to the brim and asked neither pay nor promise for the doing.

The sons of Sain and Bannockburn in the halcyon days of the turf in America carried the Schreiber colors to victory in many a race.

There was a time when Schreiber had millions, but in the turf crash of ten years ago he went down with the rest.

It is just twenty-five years since Schreiber set out on his wonderful career. It was in 1894 that he made his debut on the race course. Just before that he had made a little money clerking in a clothing store and with Teuton thrift had put it away for the rainy day which comes to all alike, when the glare of the race course took hold of him.

It was a time when they were opening new race courses every day at St. Louis a time when they were racing there days, nights and Sundays and when bookmakers were going in with shoe strings and coming out with tanneries.

A friend brought Barney to the electric-light course one night. It was a wonderful-looking place then this south side track at St. Louis, and Barney had never seen anything like it before The bookmakers had their slates up and on one of them Barney said:

"Spring Chicken, 20."

"What does that mean?" asked Barney of his friend.

"It means that the bookmaker is betting you 20 to 1 that Spring Chicken don't win. Give me $10 and I'll get you back $200."

Barney put up the $10 and as he did so he heard a shrill cry. It was the mob of plungers shouting their heads off for their respective mounts.

Of a friend Barney asked a moment later:

"What horse is that 'way out in front?"

"That's Spring Chicken," said his friend, "and he's going to win by a city block." And that's what he did.

It was the Spring Chicken race that made a turfman of Schreiber.

"I always like Spring Chicken," Barney said afterward. And it was the $200 easy money he won on Spring Chicken that night that changed the whole course of Barney's life.

It is too long a story, the tale of his beginning; of how he was first a bettor and then a bookmaker; of how he ran a small roll into a large bundle, and of how from a plain, uncouth German lad he rose to be the shrewdest and gamest bookie on the face of the earth.

It was many years after his debut at the south side that I sat at dinner one Sunday with Barney in his great mansion at Woodlands. No English lord, duke, earl or square could boast of a finer table. And on the wall in Barney's parlor, where he who walked might read, were magnificent steel engravings, giving the pedigree of Sain, Brannockburn and the thoroughbred stallions on the Woodlands Stock Farm, the property of Barney Schreiber, Esq., its owner and master.

From the dining room window there was a fine view of the splendid farm. And as far as the eye could reach on its broad acres could be seen strolling, walking or running playfully the matrons and thoroughbred colts and fillies which had come to life at Woodlands.

"That colt over there which you see leading all the rest," said the master, "is worth his weight in gold. I was offered that for him today. But I am not selling now. What are my horses worth as they stand? I wouldn't part with them for a million.

"And the farm? There's 1,000 acres. There's not an acre of land to be purchased in St. Louis County today for less than $250. A great deal of it is worth four times that. And so my farm I figure is worth easily a half a milion."

Near the Schreiber mansion stood a great building, a full block in length and breadth. In it there was an eighth of a mile race track, on which the youngsters were galloped when the weather without was cold or rainy.

Substantial outbuildings of every sort and description could be seen here, there and everywhere, and in the centre of Woodlands was a regulation half mile course used exclusively for training purposes.

As each racing season developed Schreiber picked out the best of his 2 and 3-year-olds and all-aged horses and sent them away in divisions and in charge of different trainers. And each trainer tried to return with better results than his rival.

Immensity, discipline, order, plenty, liberality and good nature were in evidence on every side, and as I ate my dinner and picked the bones I murmured softly:

"Spring chicken."

And Barney, hearing even the whisper, laughed heartily and shouted:

"Spring Chicken; yes, that's what did it Hurrah for Spring Chicken!"

"The higher they fly; the harder they fall." Barney—in the days of his properity, would never sell a horse.

"We raised them to race, not to sell," he would say. And when the racing game collapsed one night, Barney and Woodlands went down with it. It would be a crime to tell the story of ruin and disaster which followed. It would be a dastardly act to describe the trail of the vandal and the wiping of Woodlands and its thoroughbred family from the face of the earth.

They are only memories now. But one night in San Francisco in the Hotel Saint Francis, while the big exposition was on, I sat again with dear old friend Barney and again we talked of the olden days.

"I am as clean as a Christmas turkey," Barney said. "How are you?"

And I had to reply, "Just like you. But still eating Spring Chicken."

"That's it," said Barney. "That's it Spring Chicken. That's what did it all.

"Hurrah for Spring Chicken!"

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to in it than in Life Insurance."

As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $66.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $2495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

Curtiss Aeronola

The Last Word in Talking Machines.

Hear It—To-Day—Do!
You Certainly Will Be Interested.

We say it quite frankly—we want you—yes, we are anxious to have you go and hear a Curtiss Aeronola.

We feel that we have built the finest talking machine ever made, and we are backing our judgment with the financial resources and skill which we put into the making of Aeroplanes.

We have already sold thousands of Curtiss Aeronolas, but—we want you to buy an Aeronola. First of all, then, listen to its Tone. It brings from the record everything that the artist intended should be brought out. We often play records on it, simultaneously with the playing of the same records on other instruments, and in this, the greatest of all tests, the immense superiority of our reproducer, tone arm and specially designed horn has been proven over and over again.

When, in addition to this, you see for yourself the three exquisite cabinet finishes (Fumed Oak, Walnut and Mahogany) we feel that you will surely wish to buy a Curtiss Aeronola.

Do not let another week go by. Go to a music store and ask them to demonstrate the Aeronola to you, or write for our Catalogue and we will send it by return mail and tell you the name of a dealer near where you live.

Finland's New Canal.

Finland's new Government is planning to make Lake Ladoga, situated between that country and Russia, accessible to large seagoing vessels. This will be accomplished by the construction of a canal which will connect the lake with the Gulf of Finland. The waterway will make it possible for ships plying the Baltic and North Seas to take their cargoes into the heart of the country without transferring the goods to railroads on the coast. Craft of 1,000 tons and more will be accomodated by the canal. Lake Ladoga has an area of 7,000 square miles. It is open for navigation about 180 days out of each year, being covered with ice during the remainder of the time. —Popular Mechanics.

Birth of Red Cross Idea.

The suffering of soldiers in the Crimean war first directed the world's attention to the merit of systematic care for the wounded. In 1859 M. Henri Dunant was visiting Italy and witnessed the carnage of the battle of Solferino. He organized volunteers to help take care of the wounded. Out of his work grew the conference at Geneva, in 1863, and another in 1864. These conferences were the formal beginning of the Red Cross. The name and insignia were adopted. The American Red Cross was organized by Clara Barton in 1881.

Birds Foretell Weather Change.

Swallows are unerring in their instinct. If they are flying high, then an umbrella is not an immediate necessity. But if, when they are in search of their food, they skim along at a low altitude, it is safe to predict a downfall at no great period. The long-distance flyers, such as gulls and rooks, are well worth attention. They are not only weather-wise, but wise in common sense. They never venture far from home when bad weather is brewing.

United States Korean Treaty.

It was in 1882 that the first treaty with Korea was signed by the United States, and foreigners took up their residence with official sanction at Chemulpo, the seaport of the capital, Seoul. Even with this foothold in the new country, the unwelcome visitors pushed their way but slowly into other parts of the kingdom, and as late as 1897 only a relatively small portion had been visited by white men.—National Geographic Magazine.

Iodine for Scratches.

Scratches on dark oak furniture may be greatly improved in appearance by carefully painting the scars with iodine, using as many coats as necessary to produce the desired depth of color. When this is dry go over the whole piece of furniture with a good furniture polish.

Elephants' Picnic.

An act not down on the program was given without charge the other day in the old seaport town of Marblehead, Mass., when four elephants of a small circus, named with fine allied patriotism General Foch, General Pershing, General Haig, and Princess Pat, jumped a stone wall, escaped the circus, and took to the woods. The personnel of the circus, acrobats, riders, clowns and canvasmen, followed, and so did many of the townspeople and half a dozen policemen, but the elephants made for the woods first and there they spent the day with a large and appreciative audience watching on the outskirts. Peanuts and bananas, usually a temptation to elephants, failed to entice them from their New England jungle; but as twilight fell, and habit suggested feeding time, the big beasts came peacefully out of the woods and allowed the trainer and his assistants to lead them back to the circus grounds. And all Marblehead went home to belated suppers.

How Laundering Affects Clothes.

After thirty washings with hard soap, soda, sodium silicate and perborate, respectively, linen and cotton textiles showed higher strength values with hard water than with soft water. With soft water sodium silicate showed a distinct injurious action on cotton and perborate was still more harmful. Goods washed with soap improve in luster and show a brilliant white color by reflected light; goods washed in soda show a strong yellow in transmitted light with a slight shade of pink; by reflected light they appear slightly gray. After washing with silicate the goods are white but quite without luster, being dull and chalky.

Obtrusively Friendly.

Personally we try not to be too fastidious in choosing our associates, all the same we never chum with the good-fellow kind of a man who would ask Saint Peter for a match.—Dallas News.

GASOLINE EXPLODED

Fire This Morning in Residence of Col. J. W. Miller.

A fire occurred thihs morning at half past ten at the residence of Col. J. W. Miller, 212 McDonnell street. It appears that some men were employed putting in gas fixtures in the house. Some soldering was necessary and a gallon of gasolene had been brought to heat the soldering irons, by torch. The vapor from the caught fire and exploded the gasolene, which in time set fire to the storway and burned some of the wrapping o nthe steam pipes. The quick work of the fire department subdued the flames, the loss being not at all serious.

FALSE ALARM WAS SENT IN

Department Had Run for Nothing in Zero Weather

The fire department were given a hurry call in 20 below zero weather last night. It appears that about 11 o'clock a freight train went through on the G. T. R. leaving a particularly heavy "smoke barrage" behind it in the vicinity of Charlotte and Bethune streets. A passerby, noticing this heavy volume of smoke by Perkins Ince & Company's warehouse, figured that the place was on fire and immediately sent in a call.

The fire department came out on the double, but could find no trace of fire. A key was procured and an entry into the warehouse effected.

Some of the firemen say the Chief made a few caustic remarks, but it must be taken into consideration that it was near midnight—and 20 below!

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 18.—At the conclusion of today's meeting of the Cabinet Council Premier Borden informed the Canadian Press that he was not as yet prepared to make any statement as to his intentions.

Urged to Hold on.

From present indications there is some possibility that Sir Robert Borden may be induced to postpone his proposed retirement from the Premiership. Urgent requests have been made by his colleagues that he remain. Every mail brings shoals of letters expressing the hope that the retirement will not be necessary. Sir Robert intimated this morning that he will make an official statement, probably late this afternoon.

No Statement Yet.

At the conclusion of today's meeting of the Cabinet Council the Premier informed the Canadian Press that he was not as yet prepared to make any statement as to his intentions. Possibly a statement will be issued later.

PLAYGROUNDS ASSOCIATION CLOSE AN EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD SEASON

Over 1200 Children Attended Regularly and Enjoyed the Supervision and Advantages of Grounds—99 Cts. Balance Reported by the Treasurer.

At the annual meeting of the Playgrounds Association held yesterday the work of the past season was reviewed and plans made for an even more extensive work next season. The association feel the work is very much worth while and feel grateful to the public, especially those who contributed, for their whole-hearted support.

During the past season 12.00 children attended the various playgrounds regularly. Besides these there were a great many visitors who enjoyed the privileges for a short time and then left the city again. The playground work is an excellent one that has never been taken hold of by any other people. From past results the association is satisfied that its efforts have been well rewarded by the great benefits the modern equipped grounds have been to the children of the city. There they all go and enjoy pure, wholesome outdoor sport under efficient supervisers who thoroughly understand the requirements and needs of children.

Treasurer's Report.

I take pleasure in submitting to you a financial statement of your association for the period from November 30th, 1918, to December 17, 1919.

Funds for the carrying on of the work of the association have been received from two sources, namely, public subscriptions, amounting to $1,140.30, and a grant from the Board of Education of $750.00.

The first amount requires no explanation, but in connection with the latter, I may say it was a grant from the Board of Education, the funds to be used for the purchase of permanent equipment, this equipment to be the property of the Board of Education:

The grant was paid out in three months:

R. G. Sturgeon & Co.	$620 60
Ernest L. Telford	70 00
J. J. Turner & Sons, Ltd. ..	59 40

This amount appears in both the receipt and disbursement columns of the statement.

As regards disbursements, the largest item is for salaries of the supervisors of the different playgrounds. The balance of $158.13 paid out, is made up of small accounts for small equipment, sporting goods, advertising, etc.

All accounts for the year have been paid, and the balance shows a credit in the bank of ninety-nine cents.

Respectfully submitted.
E. J. H. VANSTON,
Treasurer.

MR. FRANK GRADY IS THE WINNER OF THE GRAFTON CO. TALKING MACHINE

Excellent Program of Music Provided by G. W. V. A. Band at Their Concert Last Evening—Other Successful Draws.

A very enjoyable concert took place last night in the G. W. V. A. rooms under the auspices of the G. W. V. A. Band and Grafton and Company. The first number on the programme was a selection by the band "the Nationl Anthem" march. The band then played "Poet and Peasant" overture.

The chairman, Comrade H. J. Staunton made a few remarks on the Christmas treat for the children of soldiers, to which the proceeds of the concert went. Bandsmen E. A. Everett then sang "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," and in answer to the hearty applause, an encore. The band then rendered "Operatic Airs." Miss Flowers gave a piano solo, after which the band played another selection.

The drawing for the gramophone and the six other prizes offered by Grafton & Company then took place. In announcing this, the chairman dwelt on the fact that Grafton & Co. were doing all they could for the returned men as far as this firm was concerned, by allowing a discount to all returned men and their dependents; that they had been doing this since demobilization.

Any who were present who had not received a ticket were allowed to register them. The tickets were well shaken up in a large box by Mr. Staunton and a little girl, from the audience drew out the lucky number, which was 878. The holder of this ticket, Mr. Frank Grady, 47 Crescent street, is the winner of the gramophone. The second prize of an Electric lamp was won with ticket No. 702, by Mr. A. Cokerill, 346 Mark street; the third prize, a mat, with ticket No. 16, by Mr. F. Board, 543 Sherbrooke street; the fourth prize, a pair of gloves, with ticket 652 by Mr. A. E. Hardy, Laing P.O.; the fifth prize, a muffler, with ticket No. 328, by Mr. W. J. McFarlane, 52 Alive street; the sixth prize, a tie, with ticket No. 587, by Mr. H. Nelson, 480 Sherbrooke street, and the seventh and last prize, a pair of mitts, with ticket No. 826, by H. Yelland, 693 Harvey street.

After the drawing the concert proceeded. A vocal solo, "Because," was given by Bandsman R. F. Dyer. Next came a cornet solo by Bandsman F. Robinson. The band then played "Joyland" by request, followed by a march. "Great Little Army." Miss Flowers was the accompanist. Comrade H. Staunton occupied the chair.

A vote of thanks was moved and seconded to Grafton & Co., Ltd., and conveyed to Mr. Conway by Comrade S. Whatley.

Mr. Conway replied saying that he only voiced the sentiments of Col. Grafton, of Grafton & Co., Ltd., whom he wished could have been present that evening. He said that both he and Col. Grafton were doing all in their power to help the returned men back to civil life. He then thanked the chairman of the evening for the privilege of speaking and reminded the returned men present of the discount privileges to be obtained at Grafton & Co.'s stores. The concert concluded with the singing of the National Anthem.

WOODVILLE CHURCH BURNED TO GROUND

FIRE IN NEW FURNACE HEATS PIPES AND FIRE RESULTS

Lindsay, Dec. 18. — Fire at 6.30 o'clock last evening totally destroyed the Presbyterian church at Woodville. The cause is supposed to have been overheated furnace pipes. A new furnace had recently been installed, and fires were lighted in it for the first time yesterday in preparation for choir practice for the Christmas services. The church was one of the largest and finest in the Presytery, seating, with its galleries, 1,300 persons, and its construction, thirty years ago, cost $12,000. The insurance carried was small. Rev. W. W. Bryden is the present pastor.

CRESSMANS CONTINUE THE WINNING STREAK

The basketball game, Cressman vs. Bankers, which was postponed last Saturday night, was played yesterday, resulting in a win for Cressman. The score was 42 to 23. The play was fast on both sides, but the Bankers being without two of their regular players were slightly handicapped.

"I dont' know for sure."

Witness told of Mr. Vass telling his that when husband and wife were separated for eight years they could be again married.

Under cross examination Mr. Hatton asked the witness why he was in the "coop' one day

"Because I forgot my military papers," was the answer.

His employer, he stated, brought his papers to the police station and got him out.

Bowler denied that he had ever been engaged to his employer's daughter. He had taken her out but there was no agreement of this kind.

"Did you think a bill of sale or agreement of trust was being drawn up in the lawyer's office that day?"

"Agreement of trust."

"Who told the lawyer what to do?'

"Mr. Vass."

Under cross-examination witness swore that the first that was said about the assigned pay was in a letter he sent from England to Mrs Redman.

"Did you offer to buy a piano for Mrs. Redman's little girl "

"No I did not."

"Do you know that Mrs. Redman offered, through your lawyer, to return to you all the money she had on hand?"

"Yes."

"How much money did you want?"

"Something over $880.

At this stage of the case the witness who had been showing marked signs of nervousness, fainted, and the court adjourned until 2:30 this afternoon.

St. Catharines police rounded up a gang of seven boys, aged from 11 to 14 years, who are charged with stealing.

CHRISTMAS 1919

Adventures of Peace and Goodwill

PEACE and Goodwill were two little Sprites who came into existence with a Child, who lay cradled in a manger, one night, long, long ago, when a strange and wonderful star gleamed radiantly in the eastern sky. The Child sent them forth into the world as His messengers, but they had not gone very far before they found their way barred by a great giant. This giant's name was Selfishness, and of all the giants they had encountered on their way, none were so formidable as he. Try as they would, they could not pass him, for his hands, swollen with a disease called Grasp, were extended on either side. His feet kept treading constantly in the path called Progress, and he grew and grew until his head reached that altitude among the clouds known as Station.

Peace, a sweet-faced little maiden with heart-healing in her eyes, and a voice angelic with songs of everlasting joy and hope, grieved that she could not give her message, and Goodwill, her brother, a merry youth, on whose lips a thousand hearty greetings burned for lack of utterance, racked his brain for a plan by which they could outwit the Giant Selfishness.

And then Christmas, their birthday, came around, and lo! The Giant's hands dropped, his feet stopped their terrible tramp, tramp, and his head bent till his face was hidden, and Peace and Goodwill slipped past him unhindered. For a week they held high carnival all over the world, touching with their magic hands the tired hearts of the earth-children, bringing to the sick comfort, succor and joy. In return they heard their own peculiar language spoken and their praises sung in church and street and home, and then, between them and the people, still smiling from their presence, the great Giant Selfishness rose up again, and th[illegible] carefully down behind him, and watched his hands swell out again and his feet resume their old tramp, that ever grew quicker and quicker, and his head lifted until his face was lost among the clouds. Goodwill grew restless after awhile. He stood up and reconnoitred the Giant.

"Think," he said to little Peace, whose eyes were growing sad, "that if we climbed ever so gently up the Giant's back, he might not notice us, and we could stand on top of his head, and look down and see what the world is like when it is not Christmas."

So they began their pilgrimage up the Giant's back, Goodwill leading, Peace following, timidly, behind. After a perilous climb they reached the top of the Giant's head. Before them lay a great bald spot, with a sharp rise in the centre of it. Goodwill, who was a wise Sprite, bent down and whispered to Peace:

"We must go very carefully here. That hill in the centre of that clear space is the bump of Self Interest. They say it is a very tender spot; if we touch that we are done for."

With care they rounded the bump of Self Interest, and reached the Giant's nose, down which they slid in search of a good point of vantage, which they found at the bridge. They sat down and viewed the world, and the Giant never saw them, for Selfishness is a very short-sighted Giant indeed, and cannot see even as far as the bridge of his nose. And what a funny world it was! Crowds of men and women were going around in a mad whirl. Around and around they went, with their hands full of queer bundles, into which they were looking with eager, searching eyes. Some had bags of jingling yellow gold, which they turned over and over with hasty hands; some turned their anxious gaze up and down Scrolls of Fame; some turned the leaves of Knowledge; some searched for something in sceptres and crowns; some tried to unwind gossamer threads of Pleasure and Fashion, which melted away in their fingers; and under their feet, trodden and bruised, lay Love, and Faith, and Hope, and Charity, the last quite dead, the others almost so.

"What are you seeking for, children of the earth?" said the sweet voice of Peace from the bridge of the Giant's nose.

"We search for Peace, we search for Peace," came the piteous cry from the whirling throng below, and yet, no one let his neighbor know that he had uttered the cry.

"I am here," said Peace, gently.

"Come to us, oh, come to us," they cried.

"I will come to you gladly—oh, so gladly—if you will make room for my brother, Goodwill, also. Let him come, and he will help you to lift those poor crushed things that you tramp beneath your feet," said Peace.

The people turned and scowled at each other. "We do not want your brother; we want only you," they said.

Peace clung to Goodwill's hand. "Oh, I could not go without my brother," she said. "I never go any place without him; we are always together. You would kill me if I went down there without Goodwill to look after me."

"Then we do not want you. You are an imposter. Peace is hiding somewhere among these things we carry; we will find her." And they fell to searching and whirling more eagerly than ever, and listened no more to Peace.

"I suppose we must go back and wait for Christmas; it seems to be the only time that the earth children want us," said Goodwill.

"How very, very different the world is then," sighed Peace, as they turned, and crept softly up the Giant's nose.

THE FAIREST FLOWER THAT GROWS

HOLLY AS A CHRISTMAS DECORATION.

Holly has its place in the legends and at one time many carols were composed in its honor.

European peasants think that a sprig of berried holly which has been used in church decorations will bring luck to the house, so when the evergreens are removed they beg for a spray. Holly used for decorating houses must, on the other hand, be burned after Jan. 1, or ill-luck will follow.

In some parts of England, as in Ireland, girls seek omens from burning the Christmas decorations, and say the more noise they make and the brighter they blaze up the warmer is the affection of their lovers. In some places it is considered unlucky to burn the Christmas decorations, and they are thrown away instead.

The holly tree was dedicated to Saturn and was said to have many healing virtues.

A pretty legend is handed down about the first Christmas tree. When Ansgarius preached the "White Christ" to the Vikings of the north the Lord sent his three messengers, Faith, Hope and Love, to help find the first tree. They were to seek one that should be as high as hope, as wide as love and that bore the sign of the Cross on every bough; so they chose the balsam-fir, as it met their requirements better than any other tree in the forests.

It was usual at Roman weddings to present the bride with a wreath of holly, significant of the warmest congratulations.

In India and Persia the followers of Zoroaster, the founder of fire worship, soak pieces of holly bark in water and throw the infusion in the faces of the newly-born babies, believing this will ensure them prosperity and safety in this world.

Efficiency in work, to say nothing of equanimity of temper, depends very largely on the ability to take the right, that is to say, proportionate and timely, views of duty and opportunity.

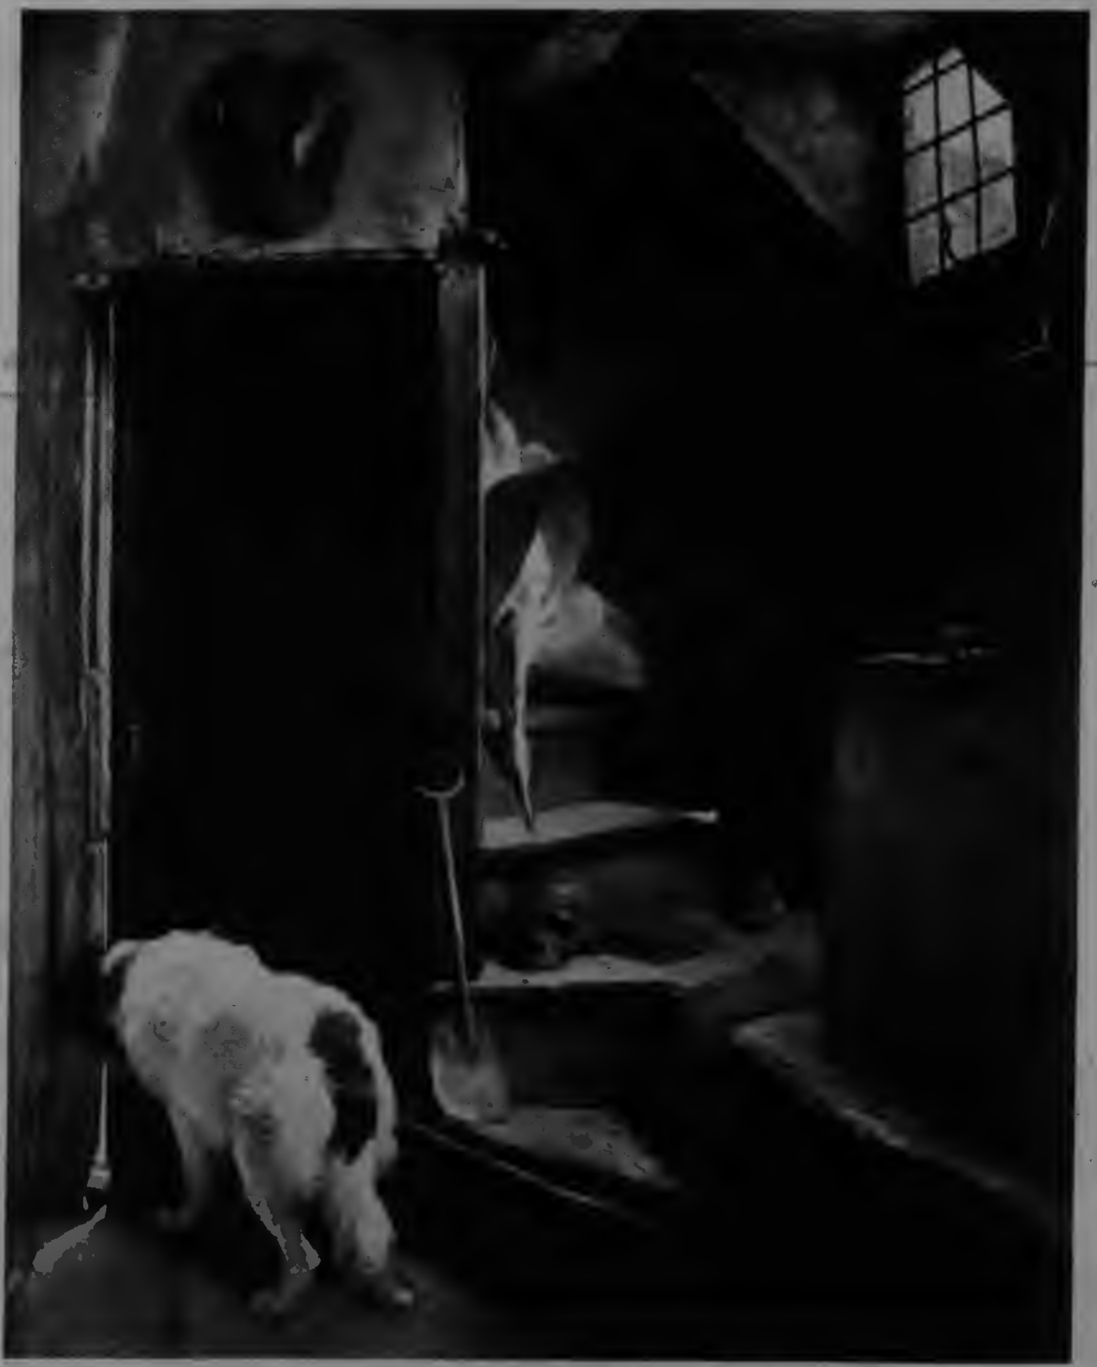
The Home of Shakespeare

THE house in Healey Street, Stratford on Avon in which William Shakespeare was born and spent his early years has undergone many changes; but, as carefully restored in recent years and reverently preserved for a national memorial of the poet, its appearance now is doubtless not materially different from what it was in the latter part of the sixteenth century.

There are a few houses of the same period and the same class still standing in Stratford and its vicinity, which according to the highest antiquarian authority are almost unaltered from their original form and finish. One writer mentions one in particular in the Rother marked "the main features of which are certainly in their original state," and sketches of the interior given by him closely resemble those of the Shakespeare house.

Shakespeare's house as it stands to-day has three gables and is on the line of the street. The floor of the main room is composed of large smooth blue stones, embedded in the earth. This room has an enormous wide chimney with a large throat; a settle is on one side and an ingle nook on the other, where one could sit close to the flame within the face of the fireplace. Doubtless Shakespeare, as a healthy imaginative boy, often did sit there and gaze into the curling flames weaving strange fancies as his mother and sisters moved about in household duties. From this room you pass into an L divided into three rooms. One room facing the street is now used as a record room. Adjoining the kitchen and also facing the street are two rooms used for a museum of Shakespeare souvenirs; the sword carried before his father and his signet ring are here. There are seven rooms on the first floor, six on the second and three attic rooms, making sixteen in all. There are no halls or porches. The staircase to the second floor, shown in the accompanying illustration (which is from a painting by Wallace and Landseer) ascends from the L room. A staircase leading into the attic is closed to visitors. The ceilings are low, easily within touch of the hand. Visitors are permitted to sit in Shakespeare's low chair in the front room above the kitchen. The walls are covered with pencilled signatures, but none are now permitted. It would seem as if all the great of the earth have been here to honor this room. The panes of glass, which are small, are scratched all over with signatures made with diamond rings, among them "W. Scott" and "T. Carlyle." A book is now provided where each visitor enters his name in ink, and judging from the size and numbers of the book a stream of visitors has flowed into this goal of literati for many years. A shilling each one pays defrays the expense of custodians, four in number, and repairs. The house belongs to the nation, which patriotically purchased it and would not allow Barnum, the showman, to dismember it and carry it away. The oak framework of the building, floors joists, rafters, stanchions, are solid, round, discolored, dimension oak hardened with great age, as the structure was ancient when John Shakespeare purchased it. The casings, doors, windows and fittings are not horizontal or perpendicular to a level, are sunken loose jointed, and admit the winter winds—"admonishers that feelingly persuade us what we are." Many large fires and warm bedding were required to keep the inmates comfortable in that house in winter. It is rather too well ventilated in winter time. Plaster and wood are the materials, the joinings being mortised and pinioned, no iron nails being used. It is an honest house, no sham, and picturesque with its pointed gables, small window panes and many wood mullions.



SHAKESPEARE'S HOME

The shadowy forms of the Shakespeares haunt this house. What a splendid woman the mother of such a man must have been! What a physical frame, heart, brain and mind! Here the marvelous child was born, here nurtured.

DREAMS AT CHRISTMAS TIME.

The meaning of dreams, says a recent writer, often varies with the season. Dreams that have a certain significance in May often have quite another meaning in September. After innumerable inquiries and com[par]isons the writer has been able to attach these interpretations to the following Christ[mas] dreams:

To dream of falling from a great height, as, for example, from a cliff or church steeple, means the advent of a stranger who will bring about some kind of distinct change in the dreamer's life. Should the dreamer arrive on the ground in his dream then the change will have very disastrous results. To dream of flying signifies a journey to some hilly district within the next twelve months. This is a dream blind people often have at Christmas.

A dream many people seem to have at Christmas is that of standing on the bank of a very swift-flowing stream and watching fish swim past. They swim quite naturally and without doing anything extraordinary until the water suddenly becomes dark and muddy, when they all rise out of it and turn into birds. This dream usually portends good luck in the form of a present of money. It is said people who have had it received small legacies within six weeks of dreaming it.

To meet a black man unarmed in one's dreams means hearing of the birth of a child. If the black man is armed the child will meet with an illness soon after its arrival. To dream of picking up money on Christmas Eve portends some financial disappointment, not necessarily a large one. To dream of trying to catch a train and failing signifies receiving intelligence of some old friend; if the train is actually in motion when one first sees it, then the old friend will visit one's house within the next twelve months.

To dream one's teeth come out portends ill-tidings; and if one sees a face on any of the teeth then the person the face represents will shortly die. To dream of snow at Christmas signifies three consecutive months of happiness; of rain, three months of mingled joy and sorrow; of sunshine, a message of greeting from the dead.

A very common dream lovers have at Christmas is that of standing before a mirror and seeing a tree suddenly shoot into buds; if the buds are fresh and firm looking this portends a successful wooing; but if the buds all of a sudden fall off or become black this signifies a break in the courtship. Fruit is a very pleasant thing at all times, but to dream of it at Christmas is significant of more than ordinary pleasure, for it portends a kiss in the near future from the object of one's dearest affections. Flowers have very special meanings in Christmas dreams: Holly signifies good tidings in a letter: mistletoe, presents of all kinds; roses, a letter from a lady; ferns, a cut from a knife; lilies, snowdrops and white flowers in general, news of the death of someone very young or very old. To dream of a stranger on Christmas Eve portends the making or marring of a friendship. To dream of one's father on the same night in the year portends shaking hands within the next twenty-four hours with someone who will bring you luck on a Friday. To dream of one's mother means a present in the form of some wearing apparel, most likely a pair of stockings, a girdle or necktie.

To dream of one's sister signifies the wedding of some near relative within the next six months. To dream of one's brother signifies petty quarrels and unpleasantness with a neighbor.

An experience young people often indulged in on Christmas Eve was putting various articles under one's pillow and sleeping on them. For example, if one put the handkerchief of the object of one's affection under the pillow and dreamed of him or her then it signified a successful ending to one's courtship; if one slept on a purse and dreamed it suddenly became full of money it portended many Christmas presents; but if one dreamed there was anything else in the purse beside gold coins then bad luck would come to the dreamer for seven consecutive weeks. Sleeping on a piece of holly and dreaming of water meant a journey across the sea before the end of the year; if instead of water there was sand the dreamer would go for a very long land jounrey; if there were rocks only then the dreamer would have a very unprofitable and trying year.

Another favorite device was to put a number of letters of the alphabet cut out of cardboard under one's pillow, and try and go to sleep before the clock struck twelve, if one succeeded then the spirit of one's future spouse came to one, rearranged the letters so as to spell their name correctly, and made one dream of the following things: A black cat, which signified the present o[f] a golden coin on the morrow; a horse, which meant a ride in a carriage and pair; or a house, which portended an invitation to spend a fortnight with a rich relative.

CHRISTMAS IN FINLAND.

Christmas holidays in Finland are celebrated after elaborate preparation. For dinner boiled or roast goose is stuffed and cooked with vegetables, a special brand of ham is boiled, wild ducks are roasted, smoked reindeer tongue is boiled, partridges are roasted and Swedish Lutfish is cooked. Jams and jellies made from delicious wild berries and native cakes and cookies are always part of the feast. Mjod is the Fius cider, and with Branvin, white brandy, Kalja, beer like the Russian kvas, and Finnish wines, is served on festal occasions. Viborg Kringla is an excellent native bread baked in straw.

The Finnish Santa Claus is called "Jul-Backen," meaning yuletide goat. His offices are performed after the fashion of good gift spirits in other lands.

Milk, cream, butter and eggs, game, poultry and fish are all plentiful in Finland and are used without stint. Farmers who butcher frequently have standing orders to supply city customers with their meats; while their wives and daughters serve the same families with cakes, jellies, jams, cream cheese and other dainties weekly or oftener if need. The Finns live well and abundantly.

The smorgesbord is a dinner feature borrowed from their Swedish neighbors. In the centre of most boards stands the Branvin, a silver tankard with separate taps for the different liqueurs served with the relishes. Celebrated sea foods comprise the following: The trout from the pool below Imatra, the Niagara of Finland laki, eaten raw in the "R" months, like our own oysters, gada, a salt-water pike, unusually large crayfish and strormring, the Baltic herring.

The Finns are a hospitable and jolly people with well-developed community spirit; each village has a central workshop to which come in turn a carpenter, blacksmith, harness maker, machinist, tailor, shoe-maker and so on down the list, each remaining as long as they are needed before moving on to the next village. When a farmer has more work than he can do in a limited time he announces a "talkoo." All his neighbors respond and combine to give him a day's lift, finishing the day with an outdoor dinner and a barn dance, considering it a privilege and pleasure to help a neighbor. The community spirit is also typified by the hotels, which are known as guest houses.

DIVINE PROVIDENCE.

"Successes and the lucky strokes in war are commonly called the fortune of war; but this is the Divine Providence, which is especially operative in the plans and preparations of the general, even though he then and afterwards ascribes the whole to his own sagacity.

This he may do if he will, for he has full liberty to believe in Divine Providence or not, and even to believe in God or not; yet let him know that no detail of his plans and preparations originates in himself.—Swedenborg.

FORCES WITHIN.

Trials without discover forces within. Says Victor Hugo, "There are instincts for all the crises of life." A deep perplexity awakens a flash of insight; a bitter opposition sets the soul on fire; a grave peril opens our eyes to horses and chariots of fire; a severe catastrophe evokes a heroism of which the sufferer had not thought himself capable.

Here's a Merry Christmas to all

TO those who are grief-stricken to-day may their grief be no harder than they can bear. To those in peril of sickness, may this day be a turning point for better health. May those blest with riches know the delight of having bestowed comforts and cheer upon their less fortunate neighbors. May those in poverty and distress be enabled to feel the thrill of the true Christmas spirit and enjoy above all the knowledge that the world is a bright place and that its people are not unthoughtful, and not unwilling to share the joy and good will that this day signifies. May there be no broken hearts; no sorrowing mothers; no grieving wives; no weeping children. In a word, we wish everyone a merry Christmas in all that the day and the phrase typify.

At The Christmas Party

North Pole Party.

ASK the guests to come in white, and have all the decorations white, with the usual Christmas greens, which may be tied with red ribbons. For the table centrepiece have a pole about two feet high wound with cotton and sprinkled with diamond dust. Dip the cotton in liquid glue and then in the sparkling dust. Around the base simulate ice and snow with cotton and snow crystals, to be found at the Christmas tree ornament counter. A mistletoe hunt will be fun and artificial bits of this fascinating plant may be used. For every spray found award a wee silvered bell. They may be purchased by the hundred for a nominal sum. I believe they are called costume bells. To the child who has the most bells give a tiny silk flag to be placed on top of the "north pole" when supper is served.

A jolly stunt will be to play ten pins. Have the "pins" wrapped in white cotton and the ball also. Give each child two or three turns; it is best to have an older person keep score. A filled tarletan stocking may be awarded the winner of the best score. The bells won by the guests in the mistletoe hunt should be strung on a white ribbon and worn around the neck. The tinkling will add to the happy time. Five to seven are good hours for this party, with the following menu served at 6:

Oyster soup, crackers, creamed chicken with baking powder biscuits, rice croquettes, white grape salad, angel food and ice cream in the shape of snowballs. This is a white menu. The favors may be cotton balls, covered with sparkles, each ball containing a wee gift. A white tissue paper cap may be given each child as he or she enters the dining room.

A Candy Party.

This is one of the jolliest parties imaginable, and it seems worthy of being passed on right now. A young matron, who is chairman of the candy booth of a holiday bazaar, conceived the very clever notion that "many hands make light work," so she invited six girls and their best boy friends to come with aprons for both. On arriving each one was assigned his work by cards, which read, "Crack the walnuts and almonds," "Seed the dates," "Pull the molasses candy," "Make French cream," etc. The result was that everyone got busy and by going home time there was a goodly supply of fudge, molasses kisses wrapped in waxed paper, chocolate creams and stuffed dates, not forgetting peanut brittle and popcorn balls. Each couple was given a little bag of goodies to eat on the way home. This proves that work and pleasure may be combined with most gratifying results.

A Guessing Contest.

This is a rather interesting contest to use at a spinster party. The girls seem to find strictly feminine affairs quite popular and they are called "kimono," "dove" or "spinster" parties, according to the locality. There is no reason, however, why men should not be invited.

The answers to all the queries hid in gent:

1. A busy gent (diligent). 2. A rebellious gent (insurgent). 3. A selling gent (agent). 4. An acrid gent (pungent). 5. An importunate gent (urgent). 6. A luminous gent (effulgent). 7. A needy gent (indigent). 8. A neglectful gent (negligent). 9. A gent in pressing necessity (exigent). 10. A gent who deviates (divergent). 11. A gent approaching a certain point (convergent). 12. A knowing gent (intelligent). 13. A compliant gent (indulgent). 14. A forcible gent (cogent). 15. A gent acting for a royal person (regent).

To choose partners for any desired game, have a basket or plate with cards (one for each person), half of them being of the color of one team and half the color of the opponents. Thus the guests will be divided into teams according to the colors drawn. On the cards write the positions of the players; for instance, the one drawing "right end" will hunt for the one having "left end" and the one who gets "right tackle" will hunt for "left tackle"; the right guard and the left guard, the right half back and the left half back, the quarter back and the full back, the centre and the referee, the umpire and the field judge may be partners. The hostess and her partner may be the captains.

Another pastime may be finding how many words may be made from "football"; the one having the most at the end of a stated period to receive a prize. A good way to end the evening will be to have a rousing "sing" of college songs and an impromptu dance.

CHRISTMAS SCENES IN BETHLEHEM.

Although much has been written upon the subject of Christmas in Bethlehem, and we have had glowing accounts of its gorgeous processions and ceremonies, no one appears to have been bold enough to tell the world of the distressing scenes which may be witnessed in the one spot on earth where man would expect peace to reign at that glad season of the year. Christmas is a long business at Bethlehem. First come the Latin ceremonies, which take place on Dec. 25, followed 13 days later by the Greek services, while 13 days later comes the Armenian Christmas feast. The services are held in the Church of the Nativity, one of the most remarkable edifices in the world. The Holy of Holies of the church is the grotto or manager. It is a small underground chamber said to be the actual site of the stable where the Savior was born. Just in front of the altar is a silver star, let into the marble floor, said to mark the exact spot of the Nativity.

In the various ceremonies the bitterest rivalry exists between the various sects, and even during the ordinary services. Turkish soldiers have to be on guard day and night in the church to prevent strife. On special occasions, such as Christmas time, an extra force of soldiers is necessary if order is to be maintained. It is during Christmas festivities that the church is cleaned. To prevent quarrels among the rival priests, the authorities many years ago set down definite rules as to what portion of the walls, pillars, floors, etc., this or that body may clean or sweep. Despite these elaborate precautions, however, trouble often arises. During the Christmas festivities of 1913 a deplorable scene was witnessed in the sacred building. Two sects disputed the rights to clean a certain portion of the church. They went to the Governor of Bethlehem and he decided a certain sect possessed the right to do the work. When they started to sweep however the rival priests flew at them and soldiers had to hold one sect back while the other did the sweeping.

THE NEW CHRISTMAS.

By a Canadian.

Five Christmases have come and gone since the world ran its normal course when each succeeding festival was but a quiet milepost in the story of families.

Our family circle had never been broken through this one or that one failing to appear around the Christmas turkey. And then the war!

Another year and the poppies were blowing over a six months, mound of sanctified ground in Flanders'. The family circle was broken, and never again might a reunion be looked for.

And still as the two years rolled on many a grave was added to Canada's sanctuary in Europe; each Christmas saw homes wreathed in new fear and sadness. The queer nightmare of a glad Christmas time in the midst of such tragic scenes was a new era that has happily come to a close.

But last year, Christmas was indeed the festival of the Prince of Peace. It was as though He had come again to the earth and set in progress a new era of the world's story, as indeed He may have done.

Story of a Christmas Poem

DOUBTLESS there is no more unique or felicitous Christmas celebration than the one held in honor of the memory of Clement C. Moore, whose joyous Christmas poem, "A Visit From St. Nicholas," has spread the Santa Claus legend throughout the world.

At a certain set hour on the afternoon of the day before Christmas, one thousand children congregate at the Church of the Intercession (New York City), to participate in an annual festal service consisting of the singing of Christmas hymns by the children, and the preaching of a sermon specially prepared by the rector for the occasion. After the service at dusk, they proceed in a picturesque procession to Trinity Cemetery, to the grave of the beloved Christmas poet, Dr. Moore. The children, singing as they go, carry colored lanterns, which greatly enhances the beauty of the joyous scene. Upon reaching the grave, they each in turn place on a floral offering, as a tribute to the memory of the man who gave to the children of many generations a most delightful Christmas gift in his Christmas poem.

Clement C. Moore, son of the second Bishop of New York, was born in 1779 and educated in New York City. In early life he was willed a large piece of property—now known as the Chelsea District, in the heart of New York—then, a vast estate with beautiful lawns and groves surrounding a stately mansion which was the late poet's home until a short time before his death.

Dr. Moore was a profound scholar and the founder of the present theological seminary, in Chelsea District. Besides giving the city block for this college, he gave his services free for thirty years as professor. He compiled a ponderous dictionary, wrote a volume of poems, and several learned books. He lived to the age of 84, a long life full of good deeds—a life of unselfishness, marked by a disregard for all material things.

"All the year round his life seems to have kept Christmas, for his was a spirit that loved to give."

YOUNG CANADA IN WINTER TIME

It is nearly a century ago since Dr. Moore wrote the poem whose story is treasured by every childish heart. He wrote it for his own little daughters in honor of the Christmas season in the year 1822. On Christmas eve, in the beautiful old Chelsea home, in a room fittingly decorated with evergreens and lighted candles, and the glowing yule log in the old fashioned fire place, he read it to the little girls, who listened with delight to their father's Christmas story.

It is said that this legend of Santa Claus was told to Dr. Moore in his boyhood days—by a jolly fat old Dutchman who himself resembled Santa Claus. This story told by the quaint person remained with him and he expressed his happy memories in the poem which became popular from the moment it appeared in print. And it is interesting to learn how it came to the press, all unknown to the good doctor. A young woman friend of the family who was visiting at the Moore home, read the poem in an album, copied it and sent it to a certain paper. So the following Christmas one year after it was written it was given to the world, and proved to be a rare Christmas gift.

Needless to say, Dr. Moore was somewhat surprised to see it in print, but nevertheless delighted to know that it gave such pleasure to old and young alike.

One of the little girls to whom he read the poem on that memorable Christmas eve so long ago—died not many years ago at a great old age. To her was given the pleasure of seeing how her father's Christmas poem was appreciated and loved.

That this poem is truly a Christmas gift, in every sense of the word, is recognized by the fact that not a cent in royalties would Dr. Moore ever accept from any publisher who chose to print it.

It has spread gladness in foreign countries, as well as in our own, for it has been translated into many languages, to the delight of those little ones in faraway lands.

And so, though Dr. Moore's wonderful dictionary and learned writings are forgotten, his simple little Christmas poem lives and will ever remain a joy to the children of all generations.

THE NEW CHRISTMAS.

In every age the Babe is laid in swaddling clothes with the beasts, and the wise men come to do Him homage. He is born eternally anew in the hearts of men who strive after the things that make for His peace. His star shines always in the East for them, for He is that Light which lighteneth every man that cometh into the world.

On this Christmas of all the Christmases, "when the war drum throbs no longer and the battle-flags are furled, after the deadliest conflict that ever befell between His friends and His enemies, the heavenly hosts stand waiting the word of peace which will set them free to do their shining errands once again. He, whose goings forth are from of old, from everlasting, has led us to victory over the enemy, but He is ready to lead us to a greater conquest yet. It is the fight to vanquish ourselves.

It may well be that there are no worse beasts than ourselves, with whom He has to be cradled. It may be that no Kings of the east will do Him homage or bring Him gifts, if we cannot robe ourselves in the glory of the lilies, and bring Him the offerings of humble and contrite hearts. It may be that the angel message will remain unsung unless we discover ourselves as the heralds of His goodwill to men, and raise the chorus of brotherhood and joy.

We have fought with beasts, but we have to fight with men and when we have slain the old Adam that beats against the Light, we shall find the new Adam in our own hearts, and see suddenly the throng of the celestial host, and hear the far-off singing among the stars. For this is the first Christmas of a world returned to peace.

Summer Playgrounds in the Highlands of Ontario

EXPERIENCED travellers declare that in wealth of vacation attractions the great Province of Ontario is unsurpassed by any other region of the Continent. It has all the beauties of the Great Lakes at its doors, and has literally thousands of smaller lakes, island-studded, and set amid unspoiled forest scenery. In its waters are the gamiest of fish, and the altitudes of the vacation districts of the Province are such as to make the climatic conditions, even in the height of mid-summer, of the most pleasant and healthful order.

Of these districts the most highly regarded are those comprised in the wonderful region known as the "Highlands of Ontario"—really the western extremity of the great Laurentian Mountain range. These include the two Provincial reservations, Algonquin Park and Timagami, and Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays, Kawartha Lakes and the 30,000 Islands of the Georgian Bay.

The Grand Trunk Railway System has done notable work in opening up to travellers these beautiful playgrounds. In Algonquin Park the Railway has given the public a system of hotels that have by their unique features and excellent direction won a foremost place among summer hotel enterprises of the continent.

A few quiet days in Algonquin Park, paddling over the lakes, where the greenery comes down to the very water's edge, and the breezes are impregnated with the life-giving fragrance of the stately pine, tamarack and balsam, will remove all those kinks in the physique and spirit that come with the long winter months. There is something in the northland breezes that wafts away the worries. Sleep, which was fickle and hard to woo, comes to you on the wings of evening. Once you make the acquaintance of the Park it soon develops into a friendship which lasts as long as life itself. Everything that is dear to the heart of the lover of out-door life is to be found in the Algonquin Provincial Park, and the Park has the advantage of being easily reached from all centres in the eastern and central portions of the Continent. For those who want to enjoy the pleasures of the pathless woods, and yet secure all the comforts of good service and social companionship, there are the first class hotels, also the log cabin camps. At these camps there is a large central lodge or meeting place, and in close proximity to it there are a series of individual log cabins comfortably furnished, and with modern conveniences, including bath rooms with hot and cold water. The large lodge is used for a general rendezvous and the log cabins furnish privacy for families or parties.

The Highland Inn is the largest of the hotels in Algonquin Provincial Ontario Park and overlooks beautiful Cache Lake

The park is a paradise for the canoeist, containing, besides numerous rivers, over one thousand lakes, varying greatly in size. Most of them are connected by deep, still-water channels, or racing streams of strong water, making it possible for the canoeist to paddle fifty miles without having any long portages.

The abundance of fish in all the waters of the park assures the angler of plenty of sport. Among the special varieties to be caught are the genuine square-tailed brook trout, red-spotted or speckled; the gamey black bass of the small mouthed variety, ranging from half a pound to four pounds, and the black-spotted salmon, or its near relative the grey trout.

Wild life roams unmolested inside the Park and splendid pictures are taken by the camera enthusiast. The prohibition of hunting greatly adds to the opportunities of the picture-hunter, since the wild creatures are much more approachable than in localities where they are persistently hunted. Bathing, boating, tennis and billiards may be enjoyed at the Highland Inn. An excellent tennis court and a sandy bathing beach are among the facilities which have been added to the Inn, which is situated directly at Algonquin Park Station (The Park headquarters) and overlooks beautiful Cache Lake.

The Timagami Forest Reserve is also the happy summer home of hundreds of discriminating travellers from all parts of the Continent. Resting in the midst of the green wilderness of the Timagami Forest Reserve like some gigantic octopus with innumerable legs and arms and feelers stretching out in every direction into a wonderland of evergreen hills, lies Lake Timagami. Imagine this lake with its 1,600 islands and inlets. There are 1,259 islands surveyed and marked on the Government map, ready for leasing to the prospective cottager. Visiting four islands each day and remaining forty days each year, it would take you ten years to merely pay each one a flying visit. Timagami has 3,300 miles of shore line. If you paddled around it once to explore its beauties you would have a canoe trip from Halifax to Vancouver and some two hundred miles into the Pacific Ocean. To enjoy all this wilderness no great hardships or discomforts must be met. On this lake plies a fleet of gasoline launches. These carry guests to and from all points on the lake. There are also several permanent camps where visitors may enjoy floored tents, comfortable dining halls, and all the novelty and freedom of camp life. Or the still more venturesome health-seeker may take to the canoe, the Indian guide, the portable tent, the spruce bough bed, the portage, the never-ending chain of wildwood lakelets, and enjoy Nature and store up health.

Another beautiful region is the Lake of Bays District. Here also the altitude, 1,000 feet above the sea, makes the spiced air rare and invigorating. The Lake of Bays is the gem of a chain of lakes, some of them linked, one to another, by locked rivers, and some by open free-flowing streams. Upon these lakes are natty little steamboats giving service to the various points. These lakes offer safe and enjoyable facilities for boating, bathing, golfing and fishing, being sheltered from heavy winds by the numerous islands and land-locked bays.

The Muskoka Lakes are probably the most famous of Canadian resort districts, comprising three lovely lakes, Muskoka, Rosseau and Joseph. When you enter the Muskoka district you are amazed at the extent of the lakes, which appear so small on the map. Then the multitude of islands and the diversified shore line cause the visitor to wonder how the captains of the lake steamships pilot their vessels so swiftly and safely through the maze. This is also a paradise for any man or woman fond of a canoe or a launch, and everywhere in these lakes there is good fishing and bathing in safe waters, and fine opportunities for a game of golf or tennis.

THE 30,000 ISLANDS OF GEORGIAN BAY.

Penetang, Ontario (101 miles north of Toronto and 201 miles from Buffalo, N. Y.) is the chief gateway to the 30,000 Islands of the Georgian Bay—an all around vacation territory, and one of the best fishing districts on the continent. The Grand Trunk trains connect with the steel steamer "Waubic" of the Northern Navigation Company's fleet, which calls at all the important points in the region between Penetang and Parry Sound.

The whole journey through the Georgian Bay is one of panoramic variety, including shaded nooks, wave-lashed shores, with rocky forest depths. The Archipelago, which is an arm of Lake Huron, consists of something like thirty two thousand islands, ranging in size from several square miles down to the size of a dining table. The territory abounds with good fishing grounds and game sites. There are hotels which accommodate varying numbers of guests, and the food served at these island hotels includes all of the wild game and fish native to these regions.

DON'T LOSE COURAGE.

Whatever you lose don't lose your courage. Losing the prize, whatever it may be, but winning self control, patience, the ability to view another's success with generous fairness, and then to get up and try again—that can never be failure.

Life is mostly a matter of getting up and going on again, when we come to think of it—of losing something and learning to make the best of it.

NEW YEAR'S RITES IN THE HIGHLANDS.

New Year's Day was not in pre-Reformation times associated with any special rites. Hence Scottish Reformers, while subjecting to discipline those who observed Christmas, were willing that New Year's Day should be appropriated to special pleasures. Towards the closing hours of the 31st December, each family prepared a hot pint of wassail bowl, of which all the members might drink to each other's prosperity as the New Year began. Hot pint usually consisted of a mixture of special and sweetened ale with an infusion of whiskey. Along with the drinking of the hot pint was associated the practice of "first foot," or a neighborly greeting. After the year had commenced each one hastened to his neighbor's house bearing a small gift; it was deemed unlucky to enter empty-handed.

With New Year's Day were in some portions of the Highlands associated peculiar rites. At Strathdown the junior anointed in bed the elder members of the household with water which the evening before had been silently drawn from "the dead and living food." Thereafter they kindled in each room, after closing the chimneys, bundles of juniper. These rites—the latter attended with much discomfort, were held to ward off pestilence and sorcery.

The direction of the wind on New Year's Eve was supposed to rule the weather during the approaching year. Hence the rhyme:

If New Year's Eve night wind blow south;
It betokeneth warmth and growth;
If west, much milk, and fish in the sea;
If north, much cold and storms there will be;
If east, the trees will bear much fruit;
If north-east, flee it, man and brute.

Christmas Poetry

OLD CHRISTMAS.

HEAP on more wood!—the wind is chill;
But let it whistle as it will,
We'll keep our Christmas merry still.
Each age has deem'd the new-born year
The fittest time for festal cheer;
And well our Christian sires of old
Loved when the year its course had roll'd,
And brought blithe Christmas back again
With all his hospitable train.
Domestic and religious rite
Gave honor to the holy night.
On Christmas Eve the bells were rung;
On Christmas Eve the mass was sung:
That only night in all the year,
Saw the stoled priest the chalice rear.
The damsel donn'd her kirtle sheen,
The hall was dress'd with holly green;
Forth to the wood did merry-men go,
To gather in the mistletoe.
Power laid his rod of rule aside,
And Ceremony doff'd his pride.

All hail'd, with uncontroll'd delight
And general voice, the happy night,
That to the cottage, as the crown,
Brought tidings of Salvation down.
The fire, with well-dried logs supplied,
Went roaring up the chimney wide,
The huge hall-table's oaken face,
Scrubb'd till it shone, the day to grace,
Then was brought in the lusty brawn,
By old blue-coated serving-man
Then the grim boar's head frown'd on high,
Crested with bays and rosemary
Well can the green-garb'd ranger tell,
How, when, and where, the monster fell;
What dogs before his death he tore,
And all the baiting of the boar.
The wassail round, in good brown bowls,
Garnish'd with ribbons, blithely trowls.
There the huge sirloin reek'd; hard by
Plum-porridge stood, and Christmas pie;
Nor fail'd old Scotland to produce,
At such high tides, her savoury goose.

Then came the merry-makers in,
And carols roar'd with blithsome din;
If unmelodious was the song,
It was a hearty note and strong,
Who lists may in their mumming see
Traces of ancient mystery;
White shirts supplied the masquerade,
And smutted cheeks the visors made —
But, O! what maskers, richly dight,
Can boast of bosoms half so light!
England was merry England, when Old Christmas brought his sports again.
'Twas Christmas broach'd the mightiest ale;
'Twas Christmas told the merriest tale;
A Christmas gambol oft could cheer
The poor man's heart through half the year.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

Heart of the World, beat gayly—
This is the season of mirth,
This is the season when daily
Joy is renewed in the earth.

Checked are the looms and the spindles,
While through the silence there rings
Laughter of children that kindles
Echoes of heavenly things.

Heart of the World, beat strongly
This is the season of hope;
Banished the doubts that have wrongly
Clouded life's generous scope.

Under the snow germs are stirring,
Fruits of the summer long flown,
Life has one purpose unerring;
Rip'ning the seeds that are sown.

"NOW I LAY ME"

Heart of the World, beat kindly —
This is the season of love;
Men, tho' they seem to grope blindly,
Follow the dictates thereof.

Learn from the ages this lesson
Love is the treasury's key—
Then will thy labor bless thee and thy neighbor,
And life be as deep as the sea.

MR. WARDLE'S CHRISTMAS SONG.

I care not for Spring, on his fickle wing
Let the blossoms and buds be borne;
He woos them amain with his treacherous rain,
And he scatters them ere the morn.
An inconstant elf, he knows not himself,
Or his own changing mind an hour,
He'll smile in your face, and, with wry grimace
He'll wither your youngest flower.

Let the Summer sun to his bright home run,
He shall never be sought by me;
When he's dimmed by a cloud I can laugh aloud,
And care not how sulky he be;
For his darling child is the madness wild,
That sports in fierce fever's train:
And when love is too strong, it don't last long,
As many have found to their pain.

A mild harvest night, by the tranquil light,
Of the modest and gentle moon,
Has a far sweeter sheen, for me, I ween,
Than the broad and unblushing noon,
But every leaf awakens my grief,
As it lieth beneath the tree;
So Autumn air be never so fair,
It by no means agrees with me.

But my song I troll out, for Christmas stout,
The hearty, the true, and the bold;
A bumper I drain, and with might and main
Give three cheers for this Christmas old,
We'll usher him in with a merry din
That shall gladden his joyous heart,
And we'll keep him up, while there's bite or sup,
And in fellowship good, we'll part.

In his fine honest pride, he scorns to hide
One jot of his hard-weather scars;
They're no disgrace, for there's much the same trace
On the cheeks of our bravest tars.
Then again I sing till the roof doth ring,
And it echoes from wall to wall—
To the stout old wight, fair welcome to-night,
As the King of the Seasons all!

—Charles Dickens, in "The Pickwick Papers"

CHRISTMAS, THE KING OF SEASONS.

Then let us all sing till the roof doth ring,
And it echoes from wall to wall;
To the stout old wight, fair welcome to-night,
As the King of the Seasons all.

NEW PRINCE, NEW POMP

Behold a simple, tender Babe,
On freezing winter night,
In homely manger trembling lies;
Alas! a piteous sight.

The inns are full; no man will yield
This little Pilgrim bed;
But forced He is with soulless beasts,
In crib to shroud His head

Despise Him not for lying there;
First what He is inquire,
An Orient pearl is often found
In depth of dirty mire.

Weigh not His crib, His wooden crib,
Nor beasts that by Him feed;
Weigh not His Mother's poor attire,
Nor Joseph's simple weed

This stable is a Prince's court,
The crib His chair of state,
The beasts are parcel of His pomp,
The wooden dish His plate

The persons in that poor attire
His royal liveries wear;
The Prince Himself has come from heaven;
This pomp is praised there

With joy approach, O, Christian wight;
Do homage to Thy King,
And highly praise this humble pomp,
Which He from heaven doth bring.

SANTA CLAUS.

He comes in the night! He comes in the night!
He softly, silently comes'
While the little brown heads on the pillow so white
Are dreaming of bugles and drums,
He cuts through the snow like a ship through the foam
While the flakes around him whirl;
Who tells him I know not, but he findeth the home
Of each good little boy and girl

His sleigh is long, and deep, and wide,
It will carry a host of things,
While dozens of drums hang over the side,
With the sticks sticking under the strings,
And yet not the sound of a drum is heard,
Not a bugle blast is blown,
As he mounts to the chimney top like a bird
And drops to the earth like a stone.

The little red stockings he silently fills,
Till the stockings will hold no more;
The bright little sleds for the bright snow hills
Are quietly set down on the floor,
Then Santa Claus mounts to the roof like a bird
And glides to the seat in the sleigh;
Not the sound of a bugle or drum is heard
As he noiselessly gallops away.

He rides to the east and he rides to the west,
Of his goodies he touches not one;
He eateth the crumbs of the Christmas feast
When the dear little folks are done.
Old Santa Claus doeth all that he can,
This beautiful mission is his;
Then, children, be good to the little old man,
When you find who the little man is

A Great Canadian Soldier

WHILE there is no doubt truth in the saying that the battle-field is the grave-yard of many a military reputation, it is also true that it is the birthplace of military reputations. In the great war of 1914-18 many soldiers "won their spurs," and rose from obscurity to prominence. Amongst these there is no more outstanding figure than that son of Canada, Arthur William Currie, who, while still a young man, having just passed his fortieth year, rose from private in a Canadian military regiment to major-general and commander of the Canadian forces in France and Flanders, was knighted on the field of battle by his sovereign and earned the reputation of one of the Empire's greatest military leaders.

Currie was born at Napperton, Ont., on December 5th, 1875, being a son of William Garner and Jane Currie. He was educated at Strathroy Collegiate Institute, and in 1893 went to British Columbia, teaching school at Sidney, B. C., for a brief period. He early became interested in military affairs, and for fourteen years served with the Fifth Regiment Canadian Garrison Artillery, of which he became lieutenant-colonel. He has been president of the British Columbia Rifle Association since 1907. In 1901 he married Miss L. S. Chaworth-Musters, of Victoria, and has one daughter.

From the ordeal of Langemarck emerged the men who have since become the brains and genius of Canada's fighting forces in Flanders. Among these none is greater than this Canadian, known to the world as Major-General Sir Arthur Currie. At the outbreak of the war Currie was a colonel in the militia, not known to a dozen Canadians outside British Columbia. But he attracted the attention of headquarters at Ottawa, and he had the unique distinction of being the first Canadian officer commissioned to go overseas by the Minister of Militia. The offer was wired to him from Ottawa the day after the outbreak of war, and was just as promptly accepted.

Currie went to the front as head of a Vancouver Highland battalion, fought through Langemarck, St. Julien and other battles, earned a reputation for leadership and courage of the highest order, received highest praise from General Alderson, won the D. S. O., and the command of a brigade. As a brigade commander he proved to be an unqualified success, so much so that his work attracted the attention of the British headquarters staff, and when there came a reorganization of the Canadian commands, as a result of the arrival of two new divisions in the field, he was made a major-general and given command of the Second Division. He was in command of this division when it met the full force of the German impact at Hooge, in what has been so aptly described as "that particular hell at Hooge," and his skilful handling of an admittedly critical situation in a position of great difficulty in the bloody Ypres apex won for him the unstinted praise of British military experts.

As to the struggle at Hooge referred to, the London Times correspondent described the awful nature of the German artillery preparation over Maple Cape, Observatory Ridge and Armagh Wood. "Each one of these names," remarks the writer, "will be written large in history. The lines in front of these points were held by a battalion of the Canadian Mounted Rifles, and other battalions came up later to assist them through the barrage, and few things finer, it is said, were ever seen in war than the way in which they came." (The enemy's advance was preceded by a smoke barrage). "To the dazed and broken remnants of the men in our trenches then, the enemy was not visible until he was close at hand." Of one battalion few of the men who remained had any rifles left that were fit for use even if the men had been fit to use them. But when they saw the enemy coming and close at hand they climbed from the trenches to meet them and, some blind and deaf and staggering, they charged magnificently, but pitifully to their death with no weapons but broken rifle butts, bits of entrenching tools and in some cases their fists. To these brave soldiers, Gen. Byng sent this message: 'I am proud of the Canadians under my command. Their behavior has been magnificent. I have never known fiercer or more deadly barrage, nor have I seen any troops fight with more earnestness, courage and cheerfulness.' Finally reinforcements arrived, and for a week the battle declined to an intermittent bombardment, for infantry raids were impossible owing to the downpour of rain. Then, at 1.30 on the morning of June 13, the First Canadian Division under Major-General Currie attacked on a front of 500 yards extending from the south end of Sanctuary Wood to a point 1,000 yards north of Hill 60. They found that the enemy had not gone far in consolidating his gains, and they found, too, that our previous bombardments had done great execution. They occupied all his advanced line and regained their original front trenches in the most important part of the section, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy and taking 128 prisoners."

It was on June 19, 1917, that the announcement was made that Gen. Currie, who had been knighted by the King on the battlefield of Vimy, had been authorized to take over the chief command of the Canadian forces, a position until then filled by Gen. Byng. It was a remarkable promotion and well illustrates the possibilities for natural talent in a great struggle where real ability is an absolute essential.

The splendid work of the Canadian forces after Gen. Currie took over the command has been the admiration of the world, and he has received messages of thanks from the British and Canadian Governments. In no engagements have the valor of the Canadian troops and the splendid leadership of Currie been more strongly marked than in the final Allied offensive on the West front, including their capture of the important city of Valenciennes.

GENERAL SIR ARTHUR CURRIE

OUR EMOTIONS.

Among the most precious things that come to a man is one of those impulses or emotions looking toward something that is nobler and better in his own life, some haunting vision of a good and worthy thing that he ought to be or to do.

We all have them, and if they do not plant in our soul some vital seed that will bear its fruit of good in the days to come then our life has been the scene of a real, and often far-reaching, tragedy.

These emotions seem very fleeting indeed; but they are likewise very precious, for we may capitalize them so that they will become the actual gold of character and achievement in some future day.

Mere feeling that has not added to it the sterner process of willing or strenuously purposing or striving to do, will never get us anywhere, and may indeed become an agent of vitiation and weakness rather than a source of power.

THE KEY OF HAPPINESS.

It is very difficult to realize it sometimes, and it is very hard on our pride to admit it when we do realize it, but it is a fact nevertheless, and a fact that we should let get hold of us, and stay with us—that the joy and happiness and satisfaction of our lives depend very much more upon ourselves and the kind of people we are than upon the kind of things that happen to us.

ANOTHER INDUSTRY IS ABOUT TO COMMENCE OPERATIONS HERE

Peterboro Paper Box Company Under the Management of Mr. Wilfred Hall—Will Start in the Grand Central Block on Monday.

Peterborough has been fortunate in securing many new manufacturing industries in the last few months and still another is added to the list by the establishment of the Peterborough Paper Box Company, Ld.

This company is purely a local concern and is backed by a few of Peterborough's biggest and best business men. It will manufacture all kinds of boxes made of paper and cardboard. It has also been registered to act as a wholesale and retail company for the sale of the goods when manufactured.

The new company will be located in the building to the rear of the Grand Central appartments formerly occupied by Ald. Edgar with his wholesale business. There are three stories that will be occupied, each floor being 51 feet by 24 ft., which gives ample accommodation for a fairly large concern should the business grow as rapidly as is anticipated. The premises have been repainted and re-adjusted for the new business and will be clean, bright, comfortable quarters for the employees engaged in the work. An office is being equipped and everything is expected to be in readiness to commence operations on Monday, Dec. 22

The manager of the new company will be Mr. Wilfred Hall, who is determined to make the industry flourish. There is a ready market for this form of goods and a very bright prospect is in view for the Peterborough Paper Box Company.

The company will start operations on a small scale, but in the new future, when all the machinery has been installed, they will employ from 15 to 20 hands.

This company will beyond doubt become a real industrial asset to the city of Peterborough.

ATTEMPT WAS MADE TODAY TO TAKE LIFE OF LORD FRENCH, AT DUBLIN

Several Shots Fired at Lord Lieutenant But All Fail—One Assailant Killed

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Dec. 19.—An attempt was made at one o'clock this afternoon to assassinate Viscount French, Lord Lieutenant of Ireland. Lord French was driving near the Vice Regal Lodge, when a shot was fired which instantly killed a civilian nearby. A policeman was wounded.

Several shots are said to have been fired by Lord French's assailants, but none were effective and the military present promptly returned the fire, one of the assailants falling dead. Ambulances were immediately rushed to the scene. Information gathered indicated that the assassins fired from a field while the Vice Regal party were passing. The first shot fell in front of the Vice Regal car and the second entered the side of the car, another piercing the back. The cyclist policeman acting as escort was hit in the foot.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN DECIDES TO REMAIN PREMIER FOR PRESENT

Will Take Long Rest in the Hope that Health may be Restored—Colleagues in Cabinet Urge Him to This Course—Issues Official Statement.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—Sir Robert Borden has announced that he would withdraw almost immediately from active participation in public affairs, remaining, however, the titular head of the Government at the earnest request of his colleagues until it can be seen whether or not a prolonged rest will make him well enough to resume later on.

The statement which is issued says that Sir Robert's own feeling is that he should resign, but that he could not disregard the views urged on him unanimously by his ministers.

He states that he considers it essential, however, that his Parliamentary supporters "should approve of the arrangement which his colleagues have urged and which he has accepted."

Wants Policies Discussed.

He reminds the public that on October 2 last he submitted to a Unionist caucus his proposals as to the policies for which he thought the Government should stand during the lifetime of the present Parliament. At a caucus to be held next session Senators and members are to make suggestions with regard to his proposals, and he believes that these proposals as finally accepted should be presented to Parliament and to the people.

Sir Robert has still a good color, and during a limited period each day his capacity for work is undiminished. But in using up the small store of nervous strength remaining to him in the strenuous work which falls to a Premier he is using up the vitality which may permit him in the days to come to repair the ravages made on his constitution by the strenuous years of war and the more wearing tasks of reconstruction.

Sir Robert will not leave Ottawa immediately, as there are a few personal arrangements which he must make before leaving for the south, but his departure will not be long delayed.

Statement of the Premier.

Sir Robert had an interview with members of the Press Gallery, after which he handed the following:

"The Prime Minister has not rallied effectively from the sudden and severe illness which prostrated him during the first week of September. After a long respite from work he found on returning to active duties that his health and vigor had been greatly impaired. Thereupon he placed himself in consultation with, and under the direction of medical authorities of the highest eminence. As a result of their examination, Sir Robert Borden has been emphatically advised that the condition of his health absolutely forbids him to continue at present the discharge of his official duties, and that continuance therein would inevitably result in a serious and permanent impairment of his health, and eventually in complete incapacity for further work.

"Under these conditions he felt that he ought to relinquish duties so highly important, so extremely onerous and so intensely absorbing as those of Prime Minister. This view he placed before his colleagues at his conclusion after mature deliberation. Their attitude toward him in every instance has been most sympathetic and considerate. While agreeing, and even urging, that the preservation of his health must be the first con-

Mr. Gordon Demands Retraction

Mr. G. N. Gordon has sent the following letter to The Review:

A. H. Stratton, Esq.,
Managing Director,
Review Company, Ltd.

In last night's Review there is a startling statement written by way of editorial reflecting upon me professionally. Needless to say I appreciate the right of the press to criticize me in public capacity at any time it feels that it is in public interest to do it. However, the statement is made that while I was holding office as city solicitor I acted as private attorney for an outside firm that was to make munitions, and were anxious to acquire all available concessions, and that I obtained unusual concessions for this client by personally canvassing members of the City Council.

If this were true it would be a violation of my oath as a solicitor and the obligations cast upon me as a solicitor, and in addition to that would be a proper ground for imposing upon me penalties for such misconduct.

While I was acting as solicitor for the city I did not act as solicitor in any way for any individual or corporation seeking exemptions from the city, nor did I, or any member of my firm, interview any member of the Council in order to obtain any concessions for any individual or corporation. As city solicitor I drew the agreements between the city and a Toronto corporation desiring to locate in Peterborough, and I received my instructions from the city clerk. Neither my firm or myself performed any services for this concern until nearly a year after when we were called upon to draw certain documents and to advise in certain threatened litigation. I never had anything to do with the matter of their exemption except to prepare the documents requested by the city clerk.

Finally the Toronto Capitalists interested in this munition plant disposed of their holdings to a Montreal lawyer who may have been acting for other parties interested, but I do not know, and this gentleman incorporated his own company, and acquired the interests of the Peterborough Metal Products. I had nothing to do with the incorpation of his company and his company did not make any request for exemption but acquired only the property and equities of the former owners. On behalf of this company I never interviewed aldermen, nor did my firm, or did I make application for exemption or partial exemption.

This article is altogether without any foundation, and so serious is this charge that if it were not contradicted it will likely mean serious loss of business to me and injure very much the practice which has taken me nearly fifteen years to develope to it's present modest proportions.

In justice to myself and my firm I must, therefore, ask you to withdraw these very serious and grave charges which have been made against me in my professional capacity, and I must ask that this be done without delay as publicly as the defamatory statements were published.

Yours truly,
G. N. GORDON.

It most certainly never occurred to us that because Mr. Gordon held the office of city solicitor at the time referred to he was for that reason barred from either acting as a private attorney or of taking part in any move to secure new industries for the city. What he did, or rather what The Review alleged he did on that occasion, appeared to us as perfectly legal and regular. We certainly had no intention of questioning his professional integrity. The point we attempted to make was that Mr. Gordon had simply changed his mind on the subject of bonusing industries, and such changes are by no means uncommon among men who take an active part in public affairs.—Ed. Review.

WHEAT PRICES WILL INCREASE

RISE OF 12 TO 15 CENTS A BUSHEL IS LOOKED FOR

BIG PROFITS FOR THE FARMERS

AMERICAN MARKETS ARE ONCE MORE OPEN TO CANADIAN GROWERS

According to a report in circulation the Canadian Wheat Board will announce shortly a substantial advance in the price of wheat for domestic uses. It is expected that the increase will be 12 or 15 cents per bushel although the only definite statement made was that the boost would not exceed the latter figure. The explanation given for the increase is that the Canadian price fixed by the Board of $2.30 per bushel at Fort William, has for some time been considerably below what would be secured in the American markets. It was stated, however, that in any event, the policy of seeing that Canadian four mills were adequately supplied would be adhered to.

The question of the increase has been under consideration for the last few days at a special conference which Mr. James Stewart, chairman of the Wheat Board, held in Ottawa. Mr. Lincoln Goldie, the Board's Ontario representative, represented this province.

This year's Canadian wheat crop amounted to about 190 million bushels of which fifty millions would be required for flour and thirty-five millions for seed, leaving nearly 100 million bushels for export. About sixty million bushels have been sold already for export. From the difference between the first price paid to the producers and that which it is expected to secure, about twelve cents per bushel, or a total of about $7,200,000, will be netted for return to the growers. When the entire crop is sold it is believed that the total extra return to the growers over the original price set will amount to about $50,000,000. This is largely due to the removal by the United States of the embargo on wheat shipments into that country as a consequence of which the Canadian growers are enabled to enter markets where the price ranges from $3.00 to $3.45 per bushel, as compared with the Canadian price of $2.30.

FORTY THREE LOST ON BRITISH STEAMER

WIRELESS MESSAGGE INTERRUPTED BY STATION AT HALIFAX TODAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 19.— Forty-three of the crew of the British steamer Manxman have been drowned at sea according to a wireless message intercepted by the Camperdown station here this morning. Survivors of the crew are on the steamer British Isles due at New York on Monday.

Officers Lost Lives

"Those drowned were the captain the first mate, the fourth engineer, the wireless operator and thirty-nine of the crew. According to a wireless message sent out by Capt. Gore of the British Isles, the Manxman foundered in mid-Atlantic on Thursday morning. All other officers, the chief steward and eleven of the crew are safe aboard the British Isles. The radiogram did not state how the men lost their lives but it is presumed they went down wi htheir ship, though there is a possibility that they may have had time to take to the boats and these subsequently capsized. The British Isles sighted the distressed ship on Wednesday and stood by for twenty-four hours with a view of assisting the Manxman to port.

TRIPLE MURDERER HAS PAID THE PENALTY

PAUL KOWALSKI HANGED AT SUNRISE TODAY IN HAMILTON JAIL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Hamilton, Dec. 19.—The triple murderer, Paul Koawlski, Polack, was hanged this morning at sunrise for the murder of a fellow countryman, named Knot Tremluk. Some weeks ago, while awaiting the execution of the sentence for the Tremluk murder, Kowalski got loose and attacked his death watch, County Constable A. C. Springstead, throttling and killing him with a sharpened spoon. When Chief Turnkey Arthur Awtry and others sprang upon the powerful prisoner and forced him into his cell, Awtry was so badly injured by Kowalski that he died shortly afterwards.

OTTAWA AGAIN RESTING EASY

DECISION OF PREMIER BORDEN TO STAY QUIET SECRETARY OF MEASURES

UNIONISTS ARE OPTIMISTIC

WILL BE NO TROUBLE IN HOLDING PARTY TOGETHER NEXT SESSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—The Premier's decision to remain at the head of the Government has produced a political calm at the Capital in marked contrast to the uncertainty and excitement of the past few days. The effect of the announcement is to restore conditions to an even more stable basis than existed before it was known that ill health might compel Sir Robert to retire from public life, because it is generally recognized that not a great deal in the way of Cabinet re-organization is to be expected from the Premier under existing circumstances. Sir George Foster being the senior member of the Privy Council will naturally assume the duties of Acting Premier should he desire to do so. With the political situation normal again there is no reason why the calling of the next session should be delayed.

Unionists Are Optimistic.

The Unionists this morning express the opinion that the Government will not experience great difficult in maintaining their majority in the Commons during the approaching session. They say there will be no desire on the part of any party or grou pto precipitate a parliamentary crisis. Nevertheless, recent events are believed to have materially increased the likelihood of a general election next autumn more particularly in the event of Sir Robert Borden not being fully restored to health and being eventually compelled to permanently retire from public life.

Toronto, Dec. 19.—The Board of Conciliation, probing into the difference between the Toronto Railway Company and its electricians, resumed its sessions at the city hall at 10 o'clock today. It is likely that this is the final session and the award will be completed tomorrow. Judge Gunn, the chairman, arrived in town from Ottawa last night.

DEFENDANTS GIVE EVIDENCE IN CASE OF ALLEGED CONSPIRACY ETC.

Mrs. Edith Redman Denies That Any Question of Marriage Ever Arose Between Her and Bowler--Case Continues.

The case of Bowler vs. Redman and Vass continued at 10 o'clock this morning. The defence was called on to give its evidence as all on behalf of the plaintiff had been heard yesterday.

The first witness for the defence called at 10 o'clock this morning was the defendant, Mrs. Edith Redman.

She told of meeting the plaintiff about a month before he left for Kingston at a dance at Blodget's house. Witness swore that Bowler had first mentioned leaving the car with her. Bowler said on that occasion: "Mrs. Redman is alone and so am I."

Bowler called for her and took her to Mr. G. N. Gordon's office to make arrangements for handing over the automobile.

"Was Mr Vass at the office at that time?"

"No, he was at home at the time we left."

"Who gave the instructions to the lawyer?"

"Mr. Bowler.

"Where was the exchange of the bank account first mentioned?"

"In Mr. O'Brien's office by Mr. Bowler."

"I objected to it because I thought he had given me enough," stated Mrs. Redman.

"How much money was there in the bank account?"

"228.49," was the answer.

"Was the money transferred?"

"Yes."

Witness told of Bowler visiting at Vass' once on leave while he was at Kingston before going overseas.

Then she did not see him again until he returned from overseas. Then he again visited at Vass' who cared for him. She was there at the time.

She told of Bowler coming to her and making an appointment to meet her up town, apparently with the idea of getting his money back. She could not keep this appointment, but wrote a letter to Bowler explaining why she was not there.

"What was the next thing you heard about it?"

"A letter from his solicitor demanding the money."

"What did Bowler say about the $15 a month."

"He said to spend it the way I pleased on my little girl."

"Did you try to make a settlement with Bowler after he returned?"

"Yes, I offered to give him all the money I had left in the bank."

"Was anything ever said by Bowler or by you about marriage either before he went overseas or after he returned."

"No, we never talked of getting married."

"Did he ever propose to you?"

"No."

"Did you ever propose to him?"

"No, I never did."

The witness swore that Vass had never said anything to her about obtaining Bowler's money.

"Did you ever ask Dummit to marry you?"

"No, I never did."

"Did you ever get down on your knees and plead with Dummit to marry you?"

"No, I did not."

Mr. Hall: "What became of the car?"

"I sold it to Mr. Vass for $250 last June. He paid me $200 and gave me a Victory Bond worth $50.

Under cross-examination Mrs. Redman could not give any explanation for giving her signature under oath as being a widow.

"Why did you pass as a widow before Bowler?"

"I don't know. I guess I usually went as a widow."

Mr. Gordon then read portions of a letter written by Mrs. Redman to Bowler in which she said she was anxious to be near him in Toronto.

"Why did ou say that; were you anxious to be near him?"

"No, I can't say I was. I was trying to get a position in Toronto."

"Do you think it was proper for a married woman to sign her name with sweetheart in a letter to a

MAIL CARRIERS FAVOR STRIKE

TORONTO POSTIES ARE NOT SATISFIED WITH PRESENT WAGES

DATE OF WALKOTU NOT YET SET

THIS WILL BE DECIDED, HOWEVER, AT THE UNION MEETING TONIGHT

Toronto, Dec. 19.—If you are going to send a Christmas present through the mails to anyone in Toronto post your parcel early. For some days the postal carriers of Toronto have been taking a secret ballot to find out whether or not they will strike. Wednesday night the vote was counted and the men pronounced over-whelmingly in favor of calling a strike. Tonight in the Sons of England Hall they will hold a meeting and decide the date on which they will go out.

This unexpected move on the part of the Toronto postal carriers is according to them the result of months of grievance against the Government in the matter of the scale of wages paid to them. They state that they are asking only for a living wage and that in spite of repeated overtures to the Government they have been met with indifference or with well-worded replies which have led the public to believe they have received an increase or are about to receive it. As a last resort a secret ballot was decided upon and taken with the result that unless definite action is taken immediately by the Government residents of Toronto may have to call at the General Delivery wicket for their letters in the very near future.

Every man should know something about law, and if he knows enough to keep out of it he is a pretty good lawyer.

ALLEGED CIVIL SERVICE REFORM.

THE MEASURE of civil service reform that was introduced some two years ago by the Union Government turns out to be simply a plan by which patronage so-called is taken out of the hands of the various representatives in Parliament and transferred to the party leaders at Ottawa. The plan, too, gives both elements of the Government something like a fair and equal chance at the fleshpots, and that was probably the real object that the framers of the movement had in mind. So far as any real reform is concerned, the whole proposition is simply a ghastly travesty on the rights of the electors. There are jokers in the bill which make it possible for the deputy minister in a department to manipulate the situation to suit himself.

In the event of a postmastership becoming vacant, there is a general impression to the effect that the new law provides for the appointment of the employe oldest in point of service. The fact is, however, that the filling of such vacancies really rests with the Deputy Postmaster-General. That official can look over the field, and if he decides that there is no eligible local successor he can go through the formality of advertising in the Canadian Gazette for a candidate, and out of the applications make his choice. There is nothing in the world, for instance, to prevent the Deputy Postmaster-General, if he is so minded, to fill the vacant postmastership in this city by the appointment of a man from Vancouver, Winnipeg, Halifax or any other place in Canada, the question of experience not necessarily entering into the calculation. Does any one for a moment believe that such a system is an improvement over the old plan of having the sitting member make the selection? Such a course as that shown to be possible has already been adopted more than once in making civil service appointments.

Rank outsiders, and men, too, without training in their new duties, their sole claim upon the position being party service, have been appointed respectively to the collectorship at Vancouver and the postmastership at Hull. A beautiful system indeed! Simply a division of the spoils among the members of a hybrid Government that has outlived the purpose for which it was elected.

CHANCE FOR A NEW INDUSTRY.

THE CITIZENS of Peterorough have an opportunity to secure another industry, and at the next municipal election a bylaw will be submitted to the ratepayers by which it will be decided whether or not the Canadian Aladdin Company, Ltd., shall locate here. The voters entitled to pass on such questions have always shown themselves qualified to appreciate their opportunities. There is no doubt as to the result of the vote on this particular question once the matter is laid plainly before the public.

The Aladdin Company is a Canadian concern, the parent branch of which is now in Bay City, Michigan. They have an office in Toronto and for several years have been carrying on business in this country on the contract system, but now are desirous of establishing a plant of their own. Peterborough as a manufacturing location looks good to them. The business of the company is the making of ready-cut houses, that is, they cut and fit the different parts required in the building of a house and ship these parts to any point, ready to be put together. Now that the City Council has adopted the housing plan the Aladdin Company is invested with an additional interest as a business proposition.

In the bylaw to be voted upon on January 1 it is proposed that the city give the company as a site for their factory 334 feet of land fronting on the Monaghan road, south of Henry Hope & Sons, and running back to the Grand Trunk railway, and a fixed assessment of $5000 for ten years, except for school and local improvement taxes.

The company will erect a building 100 x 200 feet for their industry, and will not use the site for any purpose other than manufacturing. They are to have the building erected, the machinery installed and the factory in operation before September 1 next, and will before that time expend not less than $70,000 in building and plant. They expect to employ thirty to forty men at the beginning. They fully expect, however, to expand, and with this in view they have arranged with the city to reserve the remaining 334 feet of the property so that they can purchase it at any time within five years for $10,000, or a part of it at a proportionate price. But the city can terminate this option at any time on thirty days' notice, and if the company wish to purchase part of the remaning property but not the whole of it, the city can keep the southern part with a frontage of 200 feet on the Monaghan road, which would leave an available factory site. If, however, the company's business grows, as they expect, so that they will need the whole property, they can purchase it at the price mentioned, but all the property must be used for manufacturing purposes only.

The city has nothing to lose but much to gain by giving this proposed agreement effect. The land in question belongs to the city and consequently yields no civic revenue. Not one cent will be added to the municipal debt. The taxes will not be raised. The company will pay full rates for ten years on property assessed at $5000. The total tax receipts will not be less than $500 a year, as the company will pay school taxes, not on the fixed assessment but on the full assessed value of their property. A vacant lot owned by the city will at once become an earner of civic dividends.

There is another and perhaps the most vital reason of all why this proposition should be endorsed by the ratepayers. The Aladdin Company will employ only men, from thirty to forty at the beginning, men, too, who are skilled workmen and well paid. It is safe to assume that each of these men will be the heads of families of not less than three, so that the population of the city will be materially increased. There is at present in this city a preponderance of industries in which the majority of the employes are girls and women. What is wanted is more manufacturing plants where men only are on the pay roll. The female members of the families of these men can secure employment in the factories that now complain of a dearth of this class of labor.

The reputation of the Aladdin Company is excellent in the business world. Building operations have been at a standstill for the past five years, and the resulting dearth of houses must be made up by extra effort for at least as many years to come. The line in which the Aladdin people are engaged assures them steady trade far into the future. All in all, this is one of the best opportunities that Peterborough has had for many a day to add to its industrial activities, and the bylaw should be supported by every taxpayer in the city.

METHODISTS AND JERUSALEM.

(New York Herald.)

AMERICAN imagination and idealism and love of the spectacular led Bishop Quayle, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, to suggest to a recent meeting in this city of leaders of his Church that they devote part of their new hundred million dollar fund to the erection of a great Protestant temple in Jerusalem.

The idea seems a good one—to a committee sitting in New York and unhampered by any definite knowledge of conditions in Palestine. To rear a modern temple in the Holy City appeals to the average person even as it appealed to the Kaiser. William II. got ahead of Bishop Quayle. He not only built great Protestant and Catholic Churches with flaunting towers within the walls of Jerusalem, but he also erected on the Mount of Olives a splendid and sumptuous hospice, as a memorial to himself. There is no evidence that the cause of religion was furthered by these expensive and ostentatious buildings, though they may have been of service to the German propaganda.

If Bishop Quayle, who is a wise and good man, will ponder his project further he will doubtless conclude that Jerusalem stands in no urgent need of further ecclesiastical erections. In the matter of buildings and institutions religion would be better served by subtractions there than by additions. Already the population is largely pauperized by the many foundations of various faiths which have been established in the shrine city as works of piety and devotion.

While considering the subject, American religious leaders might give serious thought to the relative unimportance of mere masonry in meeting the emergent spiritual needs of a sorely perplexed time. Whenever there is a paucity of spirit, then organizations turn instinctively to structures. There is something perhaps unconsciously defensive in the erection of buildings to represent ideals. Almost every society, be it fraternal, philanthropic or religious, at one time or another becomes possessed of this passion for intrenching itself behind stone and brick and steel. The longing for permanence has something to do with it. Sometimes when men are not utterly sure of the self-perpetuating power of their principles, they turn to material memorials, in the way of temples or office buildings or other edifices.

THE TWENTIETH CENTURY MINISTER

Essay By Rev. John Galt Awarded First Prize In Forward Movement Compitition.

Some months ago the Forward Movement Committee of the Presbyterian Church in Canada offered a cash prize of $125 for the best essay on "The Twentieth Century Minister," the competition to be open to the Dominion. There were a large number of contestants but Rev. John Galt, pastor of the Gilmour Memorial Church, had the honor of carrying off the prize. The essay of Mr. Galt has been printed in pamphlet form and is being sent all over the Dominion, thus earning for the gifted author a national reputation. The full text of the essay is here given:

A man, strong, very courageous, whose shoes are as iron and as brass and whose strength shall be even as his days. This is what the hour demands, for the Promised Land to which the Israel of God has been journeying, or, if you will, wandering, for many weary and some aimless years, is manifestly now in sight. The world, God's great harvest field, that on which he had bestowed labour, patience, and outlay; that from which He has promised His Son that He shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied, is surely white already to harvest as never hitherto. Words fail to tell the sum of the pregnant possibilities of the present and the near future. All the world of men seems to be ready for something, and something great, but whether the peoples will be seen wandering like sheep having no shepherd, or whether they will be led into the paths o frighteousness and peace, must depend in large measure, under God, on the Twentieth Century Minister.

The Conditions and the Man

God has never wanted for a man to stand for Him, and it would be strange indeed if, after having graciously led thus far, He would now fail to find the man for the hour and the task. It seems to have been God's way in the past to raise up and prepare men for His work by means of the very conditions with which they would have to deal when their call came, and doubtless Divine Wisdom is working now as ever. The new day calls for men of courage, and God has in His wise providence been showing our youth the class from which the ministry of the century must be recruited, what courage is.

Langemarck and Vimy Ridge, with their thousand deep-throated cannon, have sung the chorus of courage to our young men to such purpose that we dare not but believe that the high quality of heart of those who fell will live in those who could only hear and wonder. We shall need men of self-sacrificing quality; and our young people have had lessons in this, too, such as have never been given to any in times past. They have seen their own brothers leave well-paid and comfortable employment at great financial loss, plus the hardships, horrors and hazards of war. Shall we dare to think that the brothers of the men who compelled the world to admire and wonder, the striplings who could not go up to the war, are of a poorer sort? They are of the same breed, and it is ours to treat them as being such by telling them that we look to them to be the men who will make a highway of the trail their brave brothers blazed in France and Flanders.

The Great Challenge

The task that has emerged upon us is the greatest yet. It is chiefly in the realm of the spiritual and the ethical and so falls to be handled mainly by the Christian Church. For the work in hand, the Church needs men.

"Men who will not fail their brothers,
Men who will not shame their mothers."

Where are they, and how are we to get them? They are in our churches and schools and homes, and they can be enlisted as their brothers were. The army-makers of our Empire, in the work of finding men, did homage to the Church in adopting both her methods and her modes of appeal. Let the Church do honour in return, and once and forever make an end of talking about improving the comfort of the ministry. Tell them that their King has need of them, that multitudes are ready to perish, that brute force and atheism threaten to destroy what their brothers fought and died for; call them, not to comfort and to ease, but to hardship and heroic endeavor, as did every true crusader from Peter the Hermit, who enlisted millions in the most hazardous enterprise of all time, to the recruiting agents of the past four years who recruited millions for the greatest war of all time. Boys are not so much concerned about what they are to get in the days to come, as they are about what they are to be in the days to come.

A Man

A boy wants to be a man. Too often in the past have the feebly witty spoken of men, women, and clergymen as if the Christian minister were neither one nor the other, but rather a sexless addendum to humankind. The insinuation has always been as mean as it has been untrue, for although there have been multitudes of unworthy men found in the ranks of the ministry it has been substantially true throughout that the Christian minister has been at least one niche higher than the average of his fellows.

However, that may be, the minister that the twentieth century calls for, and the only minister that will count, will be the one who is cast in manly mould. He need not chew gum, nor flirt the cigarette, nor become excited over the spring openings for men's millinery, but he must be clean strong, virile, fearless. The records of the Christian ministry simply teem with the names of grand men who played the man from youth even down to old age, and the twentieth century ought to be able to show something better yet.

A Man Among Men.

It may be that in the past the training given to the ministry has tanded somewhat to make the minister a man apart from other men, but there are signs which indicate that in the future greater pains will be taken to make the student feel that he is called to be a man among men, one whose advice may be sought and whose counsel may be depended upon in connection with everything that matters in the lives of men, a mna whi will count for something in matters relating to the well-being of his community. Other-worldliness, once so highly regarded by those of the school of the "uncoguid," may still be valued by some of the best of people, but the man who would minister to his fellows in the present and in the near future, had better cultivate a sanctified this-worldliness and get to know the inner and outer life of his fellowman so that his work may tell in matters connected with the daily round and common task. The man who aspires to distinction as a hunter gets to know the ways and thoughts of the animals he would capture; and so it is with those who watch for souls.

A Man of God.

The minister of the twentieth century must be a man of God as well as a man among men, one who has cultivated the knowledge of God, His will, His purposes, His plans. In the Great War it was found that the ideal officer was the man who knew how to keep in manly touch with his men and who, at the same time, felt out towards the higher command so that he might know all that could be known about the plan of campaign. The minister owes it both to God and to man to be a man after God's own heart, for only so can he be of every possible service to either; moreover, it will be expected of him. Woe to the man who fails to measure up, but for him who is truly a servant of God there will be abundant respect and admiration. When there is a man among men and a man of God in the same person, worth-while things are going to happen.

A Man With a Message.

There will be nothing feeble or indefinite about the truly called and sent minister of the twentieth century. He will be infinitely more than merely a man of good and religious influence, if he knows himself to be a man with a message,—not a man with a theory or a philosophy, although he may have plenty of both, but with a clear and definite "Thus saith the Lord." There may have been ministers who have rightly been regarded as objects of pity, but never was it the man who knew God's message and made haste to deliver it. Such men always did, and always will, stand in the proudest position open to created things. We speak but words of sober truth when we say that the man appointed to speak for God ranks highest and must have precedence. More men will recognize it, if the preacher makes his King's business his chief concern. There need be no failure in knowing the message of God in all the plenitude of its power and beauty and simplicity: prolonged and devout study of the Word of Truth cannot fail to make the student wise unto salvation.

A Man With Authority.

Of all men of the twenties century who may speak to their fellows with authority, the minister of the gospel must be conceded the chief place. It will not, it is true, be an authority inherent in himself, but the authority of one sent.

There need never be anything cringing or apologetic about the man who is called and sent. In minor degree he may say with truth, "The spirit of the Lord is upon me, because He has anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; He has sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovery of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised, to preach the acceptable year of the Lord."

The Authority of Knowledge.

The correct language for the Christian minister in all the ages has been after the fashion of, "We speak that we do know and testify that we have seen." So is it now. The gospel message is not a new or untried thing, but has been subjected to every kind of test; it has been tried and proved by all sorts and conditions of men, and found to be yea and amen under every kind of circumstance. Peter, on the day of Pentecost, spoke as a man who knew with assurance, and Paul at Athens dared to be sure in the presence of the philosophical dilletantes of his age. All the strong men of the pulpit have been clothed with the authority of knowledge, and it was largely this that made them strong and gave them presence and dignity before the people.

The Authority of Urgency.

Nor is this all, for, in the nature of things, the minister of the twentieth century will be invested with the authority of a great and pressing urgency, and urgency always brings with it the highest kind of authority for the man who can point the way, for the man who has the word to speak, and who can deal with the situation. All of this the Christian minister can do, and all the more if he himself is charged with a sense of the supreme urgency of the situation, if he sees and feels the dire condition, both n the hereafter, of those who know not the gospel.

As has been set down elsewhere, "the humble country hind who would under ordinary circumstances have an attack something like palpitation on hearing the majestic tones of the voice of his lordship's splendid footman, on the steps of the great mansion, if that mansion were on fire, would instantly forget all his fears, and the great oaken door before which he trembled so a few hours ago, would now quake with the blows and kicks he would deliver upon it under the inspiration of a terrible urgency. He, the erstwhile trembler, would now order the silk-stockinged men-servants about as if they were mere gutter boys, and he Emperor of all the Europes in Scotland. The very persons of the great lord and lady would now be sacred to him, only to ge rescued from their danger. A few hours ago this poor man feared that he might not be holding his hat in a sufficiently respectful manner, now he fears only that he may be too late to throw their Graces out at a window. The consciousness of a terrible urgency has transformed the man."

So will it be with the minister who knows and feels the urgency of his mission, to whom it is a reality. The man of the Book will know that no such message urgency as that which he is charged to bear, ever sounded in the ears of men. Its language is "Flee," "Haste," "Tarry not," "To-day," "Now." From end to end of the Book of books, text after text rings out to the soul of man like the sound of some great clarion trumpet sounded in the night. When the preacher takes these upon his lips and yields himself to their divine spell and storms the ears of every creature with them as if he were the first to speak them and as if he might be the last who would have that privilege, he will most assuredly speak as one having authority.

A Man of Courage.

We have learned of late to value the man of courage, the man who, at the call of duty, flings himself against death itself if need be. All honour to such, and may the world become worthy of them and of the great sacrifices they have made! It may be that the Christian minister has not loomed large in the eyes of men as a man of courage; but it is difficult to see how a man can be a worthy minister without a brave heart and a ready will to sacrifice. To reprove, to rebuke, to exhort, without fear or favour, or in spite of fear and in defiance of personal interest, demands courage as real as that called for in any military campaign; moreover, the call is for the exercise of courage not for a campaign but for a lifetime.

Nor can the minister dispense with physical courage, for the path of duty will always lead him to where death is doing his most deadly work. In times of epidemic he will practically live in the infected atmosphere of the sick-room. He will be expected to be calm and strong, when others are full of fears and weakly prudent. His must be the courage strong enough and tender enough to go to the brokenhearted in their hours of darkness and despair, for his it is, of all the sons of men, to bind up the broken heart.

A Man With a Tender Heart.

The minister of the twentieth century must be a man with a tender heart as well as a strong and brave fist can also be the man of the tender him from the heated contest to the bedside of the sick or dying, and the ideal man will know how to be as gentle with the sufferer as he is stern with the robber of widows and orphans. He will know how to be as tender with the erring but repentant, as he is severe in the denunciation of sin. The world will admire the man like Luther, who said, "Though every tile in Worms were a devil, I would go." But the blessing of those who are ready to perish will ever belong to the man who knows how to speak the name of Jesus in just the right kind of whisper, the while a soul passes the portal from life to life.

Nor is it unusual for men to have the grace to be big enough equally to fit the fight and the sick chamber. Doctor John Clifford, sometimes known as "the fire-brand," is literally a living benediction in the house of pain or sorrow. One said of him, "It is worth while being sick to have the pastor come the way he does." The man of the clenched first can also be the man of the tender touch.

Who is Sufficient?

Nor need the ordinary man fear that this is not for him, that be is not big enough; any man is big enough for all this and more, whose one hand is given to the Christ, that he may be held and made to stand, and the other given to his brother man, that he may be the link between. St. Paul thanked God that he could do all things through Christ which strengthened him. Divine grace makes the man of faith in the living Christ invincible; faith as a grain of mustard seed is still the formula for the removal of mountains. If the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth, there is no need for any one to say, "Who is sufficient for these things?" The promise to Asher is a promise to every called and sent man: "his shoes shall be as iron and as brass, and as his days so shall his strength be."

Mainly About People

Sir Donald Mann is the hero of a little tale stowed away in the corner of the Acton Free Press conducted by "The Old Man." In reminiscent mood "The Old Man" writes:

"It was at this same Dominion Hotel that the banquet to Sir Donald Mann, when he was just plain Dan Mann, was tendered about forty years ago. Dan and his brother Alex. had their first business venture as partners on a stony farm near Crewson's Corners. Their farming experience was disastrous. Within three years Sheriff MacKindsay sold them out for debts. Dan went west and prospered. As soon as he had saved up sufficient money to liquidate his creditors' claims he gathered it together and hustled back home. His first business, after greeting his father and mother, was to hunt up the men he owed. Every last cent was paid. A few days later the fortunate creditors put their heads together and banqueted Dan, and Mr. and Mrs. Agnew set out the finest spread that had ever graced their board."

Poker More Expensive.

Mr. Pott (wildly) — "You don't mean to tell me it cost $37 to get that hat trimmed? That certainly is the limit!" Mrs. Pot—"Oh, is it? Why, I understood it costs some men more than that to get trimmed in a poker game."

Resourceful.

Sir; I've found how blondes, at least, attain and maintain those gobs of hair over the ears. A sponge in each wad does the work.

An Easy Capture.

When a lady boarded a street car in Liege wearing a little tricolor ribbon, a German officer ordered her to remove the emblem. Three times he repeated his order; then he rose from his seat and tore it from her coat.

"It's easier to take than Paris, isn't it?" she calmly asked.

OPPOSE RADIAL BY-LAW

Kitchener Commission Says City Lacks Sufficient Power.

Kitchener, Dec. 19. — The local commission of this city, which operates the Kitchener-Waterloo street railway, has gone on record as opposed to the Hydro-Radial by-law to be submitted to the ratepayers on January 1st. In the resolution passed by the commission it is maintained the city is handicapped by lack of electric power, with no relief in sight until the Chippawa development is completed, and the increase in applications for domestic, commercial and industrial purposes will consume all the increase. In addition the commission thinks it unwise to hand over the control of the city streets to an outside body.

Ingersoll's death rate for the year is but a little over twelve per thousand.

CONSPIRACY GROWS IN SUIT FOR MONEY

WITNESS TELLS OF ATTEMPTS TO LEAD BOWLER INTO PECULIAR TRAP

The civil case of Bowler vs. Redmen and Vass, which was adjourned yesterday morning when the plaintiff fainted in the witness box, was resumed yesterday afternoon about two-thirty o'clock.

Bowler answered the questions of Mr. Hatton and Mr. Hall without further difficulty, although it is apparent his nerves are very badly shaken by his experiences overseas.

The next witness called was Mr. Wm. Dummit with whom both the defendants boarded at the same time. The chief point of interest in his evidence was that during the time the defendants were living with him Vass had suggested to Mrs. Redman that it would be a good idea for her to marry Bowler. She might just as well have his money as anyone else. Dummit thought the remarks had been made in jest, but he could not swear how seriously it had been meant.

Former Employer.

Then James A. Blodgett, a farmer about a mile west of the town, and former employer of the plaintiff, was called to the witness stand.

He told of the same incident that Bowler had spoken of when the plaintiff had first met Edith Redman. It was a common custom for Vass and his friends to throw hints toward Bowler about how much Edith Redman cared for him, stated the witness. They did such things as occupying every chair except that close to Mrs. Redman's and when Bowler came in he would have to take that chair. On such occasions, Vass would remark on the circumstance saying it was a sign of Mrs. Redman's kindly affections toward him.

"Can you read or write?" asked Mr. Hatton on opening his cross-examination.

"No," answered the witness.

"You can talk pretty good though can't you?"

The reply was in the affirmative.

"Did you ever get so wound up that you could not get stopped?" asked Mr. Hatton.

"No," was the answer. "I say what I have to say, though."

"Did you ever tell Bowler he could not marry Mrs. Redman because she already had a husband."

"Yes, but he said that Vass had told him that he could because Mrs. Redman had been separated from her husband so long."

"Did you want him to leave his automobile with you?"

"No I suggested that he leave it with Mrs. Shepherd to do as she liked with it."

This witness concluded the evidence on behalf of the plaintiff and the defence was left over until this morning.

Mr. Hall submitted that there was no evidence that involved Mr. Vass in any conspiracy and requested that the charge against him be dismissed. The judge, however, decided not to take any action of this kind until after all the evidence was in.

RATS MYSTIFY FARMER.

No Authentic Data How They Carry Off the Swag.

A mystery that farmers, poultrymen and many a housewife would like to have solved is: How do rats carry eggs?

This mystery is enacted, in one form or another, annually on thousands of farms and sometimes even in city homes. The housewife has an accumulation of eggs ready to go to market. They partially fill a wooden crock, set on a box in the cellar. One evening the contents are intact; the next day they have vanished, with not a sign to indicate where or how they have gone.

Or maybe the farm boy has a hen setting on 15 eggs, in a box high up from the floor. He finds the hen off after several days, and casually counts the eggs. Two are gone. Critically examining the nesting materials, he finds no indication that the hen has broken the eggs. The following day he finds a third egg vanished, the second day two others are gone. Then, suddenly, the trusty broody hen leaves her nest, "broken up." Rats? It doesn't seem possible, yet the farm boy knows the explanation really is rats. They have been practicing such magic in the poultry house for generations.

How do rats carry eggs? Some time ago the query was put up to the most famous of all American naturalists, John Burroughs, who, according to the Scientific American, admitted that he didn't know, but that he had heard an explanation, current among farmers, but he couldn't say that it was the correct one.

The mystery of how rats carry eggs is unsolved "officially" after hundreds of years of conjecture. That eggs disappearing are borne off by rats is proved clearly enough by the discovery of whole, uncracked eggs beneath floors, in partitions, and other hiding places. In farming communities various theories are advanced and every now and then someone actually claims to have seen the rats at work. These eye-witnesses of a most unusual thing say the rat holds the egg between chin and forefeet, or hugged tightly between the forefeet; that he tumbles off elevations deftly protecting the egg as he falls; that usually there is a crowd of rats about to drag the egg rat lying on its back, by the tail across the floor to the hole.

Others say the rats carries the egg, held between folds of skin under the chin without assistance. The general testimony, however, would explain such a conflict of opinion. It is agreed that rats work in gangs when egg-carrying, and that it is difficult to determine from a distance exactly what they are doing among themselves. It is said there is always much squealing, but whether because some are getting hurt, or by contrast are hugely enjoying themselves, is not indicated.

Cases of Genuine Fasting.

When the cupboard is bare, and housekeeping funds are low, the poor taxpayer thinks of the fasting of the Carthusian monks, and wonders if that is a practical answer to his problem.

Apart from the obvious tricksters of the traveling fairs, there are many notable cases of genuine fasting.

In the year 1347, Cicely Lidgway was charged with the murder of her husband, and in order to impress the judges with her innocence, she fasted for forty days and was acquitted, folks considering her salvation as a direct divine intervention.

A well-known American medical man Dr. Tanner, of New York, fasted for forty days in the summer of 1880, and lost nearly three stone in the process.

Louis Latteau, who died at the age of thirty-three in 1883, was said to have gone without food for twelve years!

Amongst the most famous of the fake fasters was "The Fasting Woman of Tutbury," who claimed to have abstained from food for twenty months. She created a furore before being finally exposed in 1808.

A man named Cavanagh astonished the world by declaring that he had lived without food from February, 1839, until November, 1841, that is nearly two years, but on his statement being disproved he was imprisoned.—Tit-Bits.

Really Small Flats.

Verona was much impressed with her first night in a berth on a sleeper and in relating some of the wonders of her trip, remarked: "Why, Aunt Emma, the flats were so small we couldn't all live together. Mamma and I slept in the first flat and daddy in the second flat."

Dreaming of Cats.

With the exception of black ones, it is said that to dream of cats is unlucky. If the animals scratch, the dreamer must beware of a rival in love. To dream of chasing a cat means disappointment over something.

Inexpensive Fun.

Probably complaining about everything all the time does no real good, but it seems to be about the only way we can have any fun at all and still live within our means.—Ohio State Journal.

Strange People in the Caucasus

"BEHIND many a laconic cable despatch of to-day which sounds dry and unpronounceable, lies a background of vivid romance and human interest," an authority on the geography and history of the world says, which calls attention to these lines from an Associated Press despatch from Constantinople:

"The Lesghians, as these mountaineers are called, have already surrounded Petrovsk, in the northern Daghestan, thereby cutting the railway from the Baku oil field to Rostof-on-the-Don, which passes through Petrovsk."

Thus, remote Daghestana, "an island in the sea of history," suddenly emerges into world limelight in connection with Gen. Denikine's struggle for Russian supremacy. George Kennan supplies the geographic setting and local color for this piece of news, as follows:

"In the southeastern corner of European Russia, between the Black Sea and the Caspian, in about the latitude of New York City, there rises abruptly from the dead level of the Tartar steppes, a huge, broken wall of snowy, Alpine mountains, which has been known to the world for more than 2,000 years as the great range of the Caucasus.

"It is in some respects one of the most remarkable mountain masses in existence. Its peaks outrank those in Switzerland, both in height and in rugged grandeur of outline; its glaciers, ice-falls, and avalanches are all upon the most gigantic scale; the diversity of its climates is only paralleled by the diversity of the races that inhabit it; and its history, beginning with the Argonautic expedition, is more remarkable and eventful than that of any other range on the globe.

"No other region that I have ever seen presents, in an equally limited area, such diversities of climate, scenery, and vegetation. On the northern side of the range lie the treeless wandering grounds of the Nogai Tartars — illimitable steppes, where for hundreds of miles the weary eye sees in summer only a parched waste of dry steppe grass, and in winter an ocean of snow, dotted here and there with herds and the black tents of nomadic Mongols.

"But cross the great range from north to south, and the whole face of nature is changed. From a boundless steppe you come suddenly into a series of shallow, fertile valleys, blossoming with flowers, green with vine-tangled forests, sunny and warm as the south of France.

"Sheltered by a rampart of mountains from the cold northern winds vegetation here assumes an almost tropical luxuriance. Prunes, figs, olives, oranges, and pomegranates grow, almost without cultivation, in the open air; the magnificent forests of elm, beech, maple, Colchian poplar and walnut are festooned with blossoming vines, and in autumn the sunny hillsides of Georgia, Kakhetia, and Mingrelia are fairly purple with vineyards of ripening grapes.

"Climate here is only a question of altitude. Out of these semi-tropical valleys you may climb in a few hours to the highest limit of vegetable life and eat your supper, if you feel so disposed, on the slow-moving ice of a glacier.

"The Caucasian range may be regarded for all ethnological purposes as a great mountainous island in the sea of human history, and on that island now live together the surviving Robinson Crusoes of a score of ship-wrecked state and nationalities —the fugitive mutineers of a hundred tribal bounties.

"In Daghestan there are four or five thousand Jews, who, although they have lost their language and their national character, still cling to their religion; and among the high peaks of Toosbetia, the same province, is settled a community of Christians, said to be the descendants of a band of medieval Crusaders. But these are exceptions; nine-tenths of the mountaineers are Mohammedans of the fiercest, most intolerant type.

"The languages and dialects spoken by the different tribes of this heterogeneous population are more than 30 in number, and two-thirds of them are to be found in the province of Daghestan, at the eastern end of the range, where the ethnological diversity of the population is most marked.

"Of course, the life, cutsoms and social organizations of a people who originated in the way that I have described, and who lived for perhaps 2,000 years in almost complete isolation from all the rest of the world, presented when they first became known, many strange and archaic features. In the secluded valleys and canyons of the eastern Caucasus it was possible to study a state of society that existed in England before the Norman conquest, and see in full operation customs and legal processes that had been obsolete everywhere else in Europe for at least a millennium.

"Many of the aouls of central and southern Daghestan bear a striking resemblance to the pueblos and cliff-dwellers of new Mexico. The stone-walled houses are built together in a compact mass on the steep slope of a high terrace, and the flat roofs rise in tiers or steps, one above another, just as they do in the settlements of the pueblo Indians. The roof of one house forms a small square front yard for the occupants of the house next above it, and ladders serve as means of intercommunication between the roofs of the ascending tiers."

Those Girls.

Kitty—Jack was miserable when he kissed me goodbye at the station.

Catty—I don't pity him one bit; he didn't have to kiss you.

Wm. Winegarden, London who has answered several charges of breaches of the O.T.A., was again fined $200 and costs.

SENSE OF LOCATION.

Insects Are Able to Find Their Way Home.

For a long time naturalists have been experimenting with various forms of animal life with a view to determining whether such animals possess a sense that enables them to seek out desired places, even when they have been transported a great distance therefrom.

Among the first to experiment in this way was the French natural scientist, Fabre, whose investigations concerned chiefly the wasp family, says the writer of an article in the Christian Science Monitor.

Fabre painted the abdomen of each of a dozen wasps with white pigment; thrusting each insect into a small paper cylinder, and then deposited all the cylinders thus filled in a tightly closed box that was carried over two miles from the place where the nests of the wasps were found.

When the wasps were liberated they flew off in various directions. Fabre returned to the nest about five hours after the liberation to observe the wasps that were coming and going. He soon found four wasps whose breasts were painted with the white pigment; and it was not long before the others so adorned arrived.

It was contended, from these experiments, that the evidence showed that the wasps could not have found their nests either by sense of smell or by that of sight; and it was therefore maintained that they were possessed of a sense, called by some the "sense of location" or "orientation."

Further experiments were of still greater interest. Nine wasps were caught, painted white, and taken to the centre of a city, some four miles distant from their nest. The wasps at once flew up above the roofs of the city, and immediately took a southern course toward their nest. The next day five of these wasps were found in the nest.

Another member of the wasp family that appears to possess the sense referred to is the "parasite wasp," that one which lays its eggs in the cells of the "mason bee." Upon the completion by the mason bee of its cells, eggs are deposited in it, and food is placed by these eggs for the use of the young bee when it shall be hatched. When these measures have been taken, the mason bee thinks to clinch the matter by sealing the cell under clay. The clay, in turn, is surrounded with a wall of mortar made of mud, and around this is placed a wall of earth baked into a solid mass by the sun.

Now, about the time the egg has hatched into the larva, comes the parasite wasp. It stalks over the wall with its sensitive feelers daintily sounding this and that bit, and, at the precise moment that it reaches the spot whereunder the cell lies, the wasp begins to bore, this task consuming a number of hours. Eventually the wasp has succeeded in sinking a shaft straight and true to the concealed egg. Then when her young are hatched, they are enabled to have a nice little feast.

To consider the case of other than insects in this connection, attention may be called to the actions of the striped seal, that builds her house many miles from the open seas, in most cases. The seal dives under the floe, and swims about until she hits upon a spot that is sheltered from the sea and wind. Then she rises, breaks the ice, and constructs a vaulted chamber under the snow. Here the young ones are safe until they attain a growth sufficient to enable them to take to the water.

Now, the only entrance to this hut is through the opening in the ice, and this can be reached only after swimming at least a mile and a half or two miles under water. Naturalists aver that the striped seal swims away from her dwelling every morning to fish in the open sea; that she has absolutely no guide for her return voyage; that there is entire darkness in the water under the ice; that the bottom of the floe presents the same appearance everywhere; but that, nevertheless, the seal finds her home every night as surely as if her road were as brightly illuminated as a city street.

Chinese Hold Secret.

Ever since Honk Kong was established, the industry of vermilion making, entirely in the hands of the Chinese, has been an important one. The factories at Hong Kong have inviolate trade secrets. The manufacture of this pigment is among the foremost of the colony's industries. There are something like a hundred small plants for the manufacture of vermilion in Hong Kong and Kowloon. The raw material comes from Australia, and the vermilion is prepared altogether by what is known as the wet method. The Chinese made artificial cinnabar long before Europe was a civilized country, and to this day there are trade secrets in the vermilion industry which no European has yet been able to fathom. Some of the granite stones there, between which the pulverized ore is ground, are almost prehistoric. —Family Herald.

Too Many Cases.

In a certain part of African dominions is a doctor who acts as understudy to the magistrate. Recently each was conscious of having transgressed by riding a bicycle without a light. They decided that the majesty of the law would best be vindicated by each appearing before the other. The magistrate, taking precedence, first tried the doctor and fined him five rupees. Then the doctor tried the magistrate and fined him one hundred. The reason he gave for his severity was that the offence was becoming far too common.

The Reason.

"Alas!" sighed young Callow. "If only Eve hadn't been so fond of apples." "My dear boy," said Cynicus, "Eve wasn't so very fond of apples, but that was the only forbidden fruit."

Firemen T. McIntyre was instantly killed in a collision between a passenger train and a light engine at Stralak Station, near Sudbury.

Hoover Tells Europe That It Must Get Back To Regular Product

THE recent statement [illegible] George Paish, the [illegible] economist who was [illegible] to the Treasury dur[illegible] war, and is editor of the Stat[illegible] credits of sixteen billion [illegible] by Europe to re-establish [illegible] a vital point in present [illegible] business. There is no [illegible] Britain, and the continent[illegible] tions, need tremen[illegible] foodstuffs and raw [illegible] get back to regula[illegible] so much has alre[illegible] by the United States [illegible] credit, and by other [illegible] as Australia, that [illegible] cessions are not easily [illegible] ada is able to make [illegible] the case of Brit[illegible] dred millions [illegible] balance we owe British [illegible] least two billions and [illegible] sure of our money. But as for [illegible] eral credits all round, finance Governments, there is a g[illegible] disinclination to make them.

Herbert Hoover, who made such a name for himself as Director-General of Relief for the Allies, who had control of the disposition of hundreds of millions' worth of supplies to the various Allied countries of Europe, became an expert on the economic conditions of these countries. His word carries great weight. Recently he submitted a confidential report to the Allies' Supreme Council at Paris, on the question of Europe's needs of further raw materials. The significant thing about it was his assertion that while the Western hemisphere could for a time supply the deficiency in European production, on credit, it could not long continue to do so. He declared: "Nor, as a practical fact, could credits be mobilized for this purpose for more than a short period, because all credits must necessarily be simply an advance against the return of commodities in exchange, and credits will break down instantly the return of commodities becomes improbable. Further if such credits be obtained for more than temporary purposes, it would result in the economic slavery of Europe to the Western hemisphere, and the ultimate end would be war again."

Europe's recovery will never be accomplished by piling up borrowings upon borrowings, like a reckless debtor in despair, but by getting to work, and producing again. Newspaper despatches tell us a good deal of the unrest by labor in many of the European countries, of falling off rather than increase in production, and general laziness. Why should the people of the United States and Canada work tremendously to produce on credit for those who will not help themselves? Some bankers like Mr. Vanderlip tell us of threatened outbreaks of Bolshevism in Europe on account of a general shortage of supplies, and that the only relief is in continuing large supplies, no matter what the prospects of payment. But in the present temper of much European labor, to be able to obtain sufficient supplies on credit is an invitation to stop working, and indulge in Socialistic dreams and postpones the day when through privation and want, Europe will desperately set about producing for itself. Mr. Hoover says that unless productivity can be increased immediately, only chaos can result, and possibly the worst incentive to greater productivity would be large hand-outs of supplies from outside, making work quite unnecessary for present purposes.

This is doctrine that is diametrically opposed to much of the gospel preached by men like Sir George Paish, but he and they see things exclusively from a European point of view. The trouble in Europe is that many small nations would rather fight than eat or work. The central empires are in chaos. Poland is full of unrest. Czecho-Slavia is the only spot in old Austria where industry progresses. Roumania is trying to grab a part of Hungary. The Jugo-Slavs are on the point of war with d'Annunzio's forces. Russian affairs are in a horrible state. We on this continent do not understand the depth of racial hatreds and social discontents in Europe, but by this time we should have learned not to expect too much in the way of quick return to business and production. Mr. Hoover decries food control systems, as they exist in Europe, but he is looking only on the economic side, not the political. It is necessary, to keep the masses from turning conditions upside down, that food control and rationing be continued even at the expense of a slower return to normal production.

The drop in the dollar value of European currency to discounts ranging between 12 and 60 per cent. means that Europe must pay that much more for products bought on this continent. It means higher prices in Europe, generally, and the reduction of imports to absolutely the lowest volume. This in itself is one of the best correctives of the situation. Europe has to continue on semi-famine conditions until it is ready to settle down and produce for itself. Instead of throwing in billions upon billions of fresh supplies on credit — and making our own conditions that much worse —to ease the empty stomach and Bolshevist-minded brains of European labor, the barrier set up by depreciated European currencies means that a resolute house-cleaning is in order. After all, a hundred and twenty-five million people on this continent cannot continue to supply four or five hundred million people in Europe with a large part of their requirements, just because those four or five hundred million are so obsessed with blockades, embargoes, censorships, armaments and Bolshevism that they will not get back to regular produtive life.— Mail and Empire.

Contentious Never Popular.

The wise man in Israel has truly said: "A fool's lips enter into contention," and the contentious fool is as common a nuisance today as he was no doubt in the olden ones. Usually in proportion to their lack of actual knowledge do such persons presume to set themselves up as dictators to others.—Exchange.

Natural Barometer.

One of the simplest of nature's barometers is a spider's web. When there is a prospect of wind or rain the spider shortens the filaments by which its web is sustained and leaves it in this state as long as the weather is variable. If it elongates its threads, it is a sign of fine, calm weather.

LIVING COSTS INCREASE

The Family Budget for November Average $14.27.

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—The Labor Gazette reports that in regard to prices, a downward movement in livestock and meats was offset by increases in dairy products, grain, fish, fruits and vegetables, miscellaneous foods, textiles, metals and lumber.

In retail prices the average cost of a family budget of staple foods in sixty cities was $14.27 at the middle of November as compared with $14.21 at the middle of October; and $7.96 in November, 1914.

Reeve John Greer of South Monaghan Is Retiring

On Monday night Mr. John Greer, reeve of South Monaghan, after the years' work had been concluded, entertained his Council and the officials of the township to a splendid Oyster Supper when a right good time was enjoyed and many expressions of apreciation extended to their host. Reeve Greer is retiring from the office to the regret of the township as he has made a very competent and courteous head of the Council.

SHOOTING WITH SILK.

Novel Use Made of "Floss" in the War.

During the war great quantities of waste silk—"floss" from the outside of cocoons, not available for spinning—were purchased by the United States Government in China.

The stuff was required for the making of bags to hold the smokeless-powder charges of big army and navy guns.

It is of utmost importance that when the powder charge of a big gun explodes the bag shall be instantaneously consumed. For the very large naval guns there may be half a dozen bags of powder to a single charge, several hundred pounds being required.

Every particle of the smokeless powder (which is as powerful as guncotton) is instantly converted into gas. There must be no smoldering residue of the bag tissue left in the powder chamber of the gun, else it might set fire to the next charge, causing a disastrous explosion. This might easily happen if cotton bags were used, but silk solves the problem.

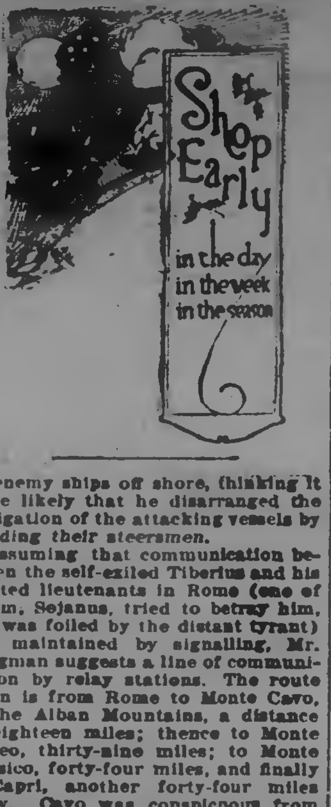
It is not explained why the navy gave up the plan, experimentally tried a while ago, of making powder bags themselves of smokeless powder. The latter was turned out in the form of thread, which, woven into fabric, had the appearance and texture of silk. It was in fact an artificial silk, white and so beautiful that any woman might have been tempted to make a dress of it. Of course, when used for powder bags it became practically part of the explosive charge.

Rome Had Her Own Wireless.

Did ancient Rome have a "wireless" station on the island of Capri? John A. Kingman, writing to the National Geographical Society, suggests that it had, that heliographing—signalling with mirrors—was the form of "wireless" employed, and that through this medium Tiberius Caesar, after his retirement to Capri, maintained that grasp on the empire's affairs which he held until his death.

The distance from Capri to Rome is 130 miles, which Mr. Kingman believes would have been too great for direct heliograph communication, although he cites the fact that the Greeks are known to have signalled from Mount Chagri to Mount Athos, a distance of 100 miles, and that communications by means of mirrors have been maintained in recent times over a distance of 160 miles. The Romans, he points out, had mirrors large enough to reflect the whole person, using tin to back them instead of quicksilver. Strikingly enough, however, Mr. Kingman doubts the story that Archimedes at Syracuse, by means of mirrors, burned enemy ships off shore, thinking it more likely that he disarranged the navigation of the attacking vessels by blinding their steersmen.

Assuming that communication between the self-exiled Tiberius and his trusted lieutenants in Rome (one of whom, Sejanus, tried to betray him, but was foiled by the distant tyrant) was maintained by signalling, Mr. Kingman suggests a line of communication by relay stations. The route given is from Rome to Monte Cavo, in the Alban Mountains, a distance of eighteen miles; thence to Monte Circeo, thirty-nine miles; to Monte Massico, forty-four miles, and finally to Capri, another forty-four miles away. Cavo was conspicuous from the Palatine Hill, he declares on the authority of an ancient fresco, and he suggests that "perhaps the Palatine was the 'sending station' in Rome."



Burmese Tree-Fellers.

Although the British have occupied that part of Burma from which some of the best teak is extracted for nearly a century, Burma tree-fellers still prefer their own axes to any of the various kinds which have been imported from time to time from Europe or America. This implement, called a pouksin in Burmese, is about an inch broad and ten or twelve inches in length. Fitted with a wooden handle cut from the neighboring jungle, the burman erects a scaffording of bamboo around the trunk of the tree to be felled, which may be twelve or fifteen feet in circumference, about five feet from the ground, manages to bring it down by his vigorous and repeated strokes within a few hours of commencing operations. The pinkado or iron wood tree produces harder wood than teak. It is largely used for railway sleepers and blunts their axes more than any other wood. Hence it is not popular to work.—Family Herald.

Why Lower Incisors Rarely Decay.

"The reason that the front lower teeth rarely decay and often last through life when all the other teeth have gone," said Dr. C. De Witt Henry, of New York, "is that they are always bathed in an alkaline solution.

"It is the acids of the mouth that make the teeth decay. The salivary glands in the cheeks pour out a slightly acid fluid, those situated under the tongue pour out an alkaline fluid. The back teeth are constantly bathed in an acid and therefore decay first. The lower front teeth are so situated that the alkaline secretion from under the tongue floods them and preserves them from decay."

His View of Home.

Little Jimmy went with his mother to stay with an aunt in the country, and his mother was very worried as to how he would behave. But to her surprise he was angelic during the whole visit—always did as he was told, and never misbehaved. As soon as he got home, however, he was his natural self again. "Oh, Jimmy," she said, "you were so good while you were away, why do you start behaving badly now?" "What's home for?" asked Jimmy in pained surprise.

Cornered Coppers.

The authorities of a small watering place in Wales once cornered all the coppers in the town. The object was to force the hand of visitors who stingily (as they thought) gave only one penny to the collection for the local band, and in it they were successful, for as change became scarcer so the receipts of that institution increased.

Emeralds of the Aztecs.

Among the Aztec treasures of Mexico, besides other precious stones, many exquisitely cut emeralds were found, and it is from this source that the magnificent emeralds now forming part of the royal collection of Spain were supposed to have come.

Furniture Polish.

This is a polish used by a cabinet maker who learned the trade: One-half pint raw linseed oil, three tablespoonfuls turpentine, two tablespoonfuls alcohol, three tablespoonfuls vinegar. Shake well before using.

Seems to Be General Opinion.

"Tell me what company you keep, and I will tell you what you are," is a proverb that is found in similar form among the French, Spanish, Italians, Dutch and others. Anything so widely accepted must be true.

Dead or Alive

◆

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Grimes stuffed the remnants of a sodden doughnut into his mouth and washed them down with the last of the hot coffee, which he had brewed himself, and which was more hot than it was coffee.

Tiptoeing to the bed, he touched his lips to the forehead of the wan, girlish face, and with glistening eyes, watched a shaft of early sunlight dart through the window and blend with the pure gold hair curled on the pillow.

"A ray of hope—mebbe," Grimes mused. He sighed slightly, and his firm, white upper teeth drew his lower lip beneath them and crushed the skin with a pain he did not notice. Turning from the bed, he reached toward the chair he had just vacated and struggled into a shiny brown coat that had been draped over its back. From a nail on the wall he took a gray-checkered cap with rain-ruined frontispiece and pushed it back over his contrary black locks.

Grimes paused with his hand on the knob of the door and looked back at the bed. The golden hair and the sunlight were vieing in a contest of brilliancy. Something like a smile, in which hope merged with pride, crept across his tanned young face, but it faded instantly, and his dark eyes glistened again when a hacking cough from the bed confirmed the tale told by a red spot on either cheek of the occupant.

He opened the door and stepped out on the board sidewalk just as a hell-diver swooped down from the blue and snatched a breakfast from placid Traverse bay. With a vigorous stride he started on his 20-minute walk to the exclusive Harbor Beach colony.

"I won't have her this time next year unless I get her out West by next fall," was the trend of Grimes' thought as he passed the slumbering castles in which the idle wealthy of the cities sought rustication. Lord knows driving Archibald's speed cruiser wouldn't bring enough coin in two years to do it."

As he skirted the cluster of trees that sheltered the clubhouse veranda from the complexion-ruining morning sun and came in sight of the Archibald palace, gazing down haughtily from a lofty bluff, he was so absorbed in cogitation he all but collided with a rugged, florid-visaged, pleasantly rotund little man attired in blue and wearing an official-looking cap on which a gold lighthouse gleamed.

"Ahoy!" called the lightkeeper. "Veer off or you'll hit this rock o' Gibraltar. What's the matter with yer compass, me boy?"

As they came to a halt Grimes was obliged to smile away his gloom as in reflection of the beaming, weather-cracked lines of the other's countenance.

"An' how's the wife this mornin'?" rattled on the guardian of the beacon in that genuinely hearty, sympathetic tone. "An' whyfor the big rush about beginnin' the daily labor? Sure, ol' man Archibald ain't gettin' up at no five o'clock for a pleasure spin—you can't tell me that."

"No better," was Grimes' rueful rejoinder to the first query. "I'm going to take a run out on the bay and see if I can't make the fourth cylinder hit as it ought to," he added. "The boss was talking of showing off the Lightning to some speed demon."

"Now, ain't that too bad about the wife," observed the lightkeeper, real commiseration in his voice. "I'll have me own woman run over to yer shack this afternoon an' see if she can chase some o' the gloom away. By the way, o' course you ain't heard the startlin' news from the Springs?"

"Thank you, captain; I hate to leave her there alone all the time. What startling news do you mean?"

"Mebbe you wouldn't call it startlin'," responded the captain, a broad grin manifesting his enjoyment of the role of a sensation monger. "It's jest the little matter o' $10,000 bein' stole from the First National last night or early this mornin'. The safe was blowed open in a reg'lar professional manner. I jest happened over to the Springs at an unusual hour and there's excitement galore. A thousand dollars reward has already been offered for the capture of the burglar, dead or alive!"

Grimes started.

"But don't worry, me boy," went on the captain. "The First National has plenty to make good all the savin's accounts, and the loss of $10,000 ain't goin' to start no run on the institution. They say it looks like a one-man job. You better look sharp on the bay. He might be stickin' around somewhere, though it ain't likely he tarried long in the vicinity. Well, I've gossiped long enough. Gotta be movin' on."

As the lightkeeper, with a wave of a hand, vanished behind the trees, Grimes hurried out on the Archibald dock, where the Lightning was moored. He drew the boat to the landing by means of the painter, leaped aboard, and, stooping, entered the little cabin that sheltered the engine and crew in stormy weather.

When he straightened up inside the cabin Grimes looked into the barrel of a revolver clutched in a huge, hairy hand. A giant of a man with bushy brown whiskers towered back of the weapon.

"Welcome, little stranger," said the man with the gun, champing viciously on a cud of tobacco.

Grimes grew white beneath the tan and braced himself along the wall of the cabin. Such a situation was enough to unnerve the most veteran soldier of misadventure.

"How long will it take to get this here little racer inter action?" inquired the master of ceremonies as he straddled a stool and waved the revolver in the direction of the six-cylinder motor. "Manhattan Landing will be our port of debarkation, an' we can't get there any too quick."

Grimes resorted to strategy—clumsy, as it proved—for a loophole of escape.

"I need gas before we can start," he said. "I can get some up at the cottage."

The big man grinned with savage sarcasm, displaying two rows of sharp, uneven yellow teeth.

"No, you don't do nothin' of the kind," he announced in tones that carried conviction. "I looked inter the little old tank, and there's enough to carry us to Manhattan, all right; an' the spark plugs is all o. k., and there's plenty of cylinder oil. When do we start?"

Abandoning for the present all attempts to evade the issue, Grimes switched on the spark, procured the crank and spun the motor. It started on the second trial, spluttering expostulation until the cylinders responded to the friction warmth and the gas began a steady flow. Grimes unleashed the Lightning from the dock and let in the clutch, under the wary eye of his captor. In a few moments the speeder was skimming past Sentinel light, plowing two ridges of foam.

"Say," suddenly remarked the uninvited passenger. "I been studying you and it seems I've known you. Your name don't happen to be Grimes?"

Grimes turned quickly, keeping one hand on the wheel, and as he looked closely at the bearded face of the other it seemed that there was something decidedly familiar about it.

"That's my name," he responded. "And you—why, you can't be Big Jim Cole!"

The giant laid down his weapon and made his way to where Grimes stood. The shifting of the tremendous weight caused the boat to rock eccentrically, but Grimes steadied it. The other seized him by the hand and fairly crushed it.

"You got it!" he said heartily. "You and me was pals back in Emeryville, and we used to go to school together. Well, of all the—Say," and his eyes took on a tender look, "whatever became of Emily Brewster?"

Grimes' face lighted up, and then clouded.

"I married her," he said simply. "Now she's got the T. B."

"You don't say!" ejaculated the giant, retiring to his former seat in order to better ballast the boat. "Why, do you know that girl—well, tell me about it."

Grimes did so, keeping the launch headed for Manhattan Landing. When he had finished his story the other sat silent for several minutes, looking out the cabin window, a strange, unfathomable expression on his face. Presently he turned, picked up the revolver and extended it, butt first, toward Grimes.

"Please make me your prisoner," he said. "I'm worth a thousand to you, and it will get her out West. Don't refuse. Do it for her sake. You saved my life once, and—and—well, you didn't know it, but I loved Emily, too."

Take Your Rations.

TO RELIEVE CONGESTION.

British Plans to Get People Back to Land.

Labor in the United Kingdom has been represented in some quarters as hostile to the settlement on organized lines of the people on the land. The statement, however, is not found to be supported by facts. The plans to place discharged soldiers and sailors on the land and to establish land banks in connection therewith, are being carried out with a full sense of the importance of the movement in relation to national welfare. That the solution of industrial unrest is intimately bound up with the scheme is shown in letters recently forwarded to Herbert E. Easton, the honorary secretary of the British Immigration League.

J. T. Clatworthy, the president of the Cardiff Coal Trimmers' Union, and member of the National Alliance of Employers and Employed, after declaring his "most hearty and cordial support to the movement in favor of the establishment of land banks," wrote that as a representative of labor, he regarded it as absolutely essential that it should be made as easy as possible for the people to be settled on the land. "The present position is," he continued, "that thousands come flocking into our great industrial centres, and this, in consequence, is one of the causes of industrial unrest. If we are to prosper as a nation, it seems to me that it is essential that the Government should offer every means possible, and certainly by the means indicated above, to provide opportunities for many of our discharged sailors and soldiers and others to settle upon the land."

Writing from the House of Lords, Lord Willoughby de Broke, who has prominently identified himself with the land back movement, and is a patron of the British Immigration League, declared that the strength of the British nation was its main power. It was surely the proper function of governments to equip the agricultural industry at home and beyond the seas in such a manner as to make it more attractive than it had been in the past, and capable of rearing a healthy race.

Viscount Templetown wrote: "If we are again to have industrial peace, and without it the fruits of our victory will pass away, the land must be used to relieve the congestion of the cities. Public opinion has justly condemned the profiteers, but if they will apply some of their gains in financing land settlement, they will at least have the satisfaction of knowing the money will be used for the common welfare."

Loyalty Well Rewarded.

A Parisian with a sense of humor bequeathed 300 francs to each relative who abstained from attending his funeral. One poor relative insisted on following the deceased to the grave; and her loyalty was rewarded, for by a codicil to his will the deceased left the residue of his large fortune to those relatives who were prepared to sacrifice the 300 francs.

The "White Feather."

The expression, "He showed the white feather," has its origin in reference to game cocks. Pure-bred game cocks have only red and black feathers, but crossbreeds have a white feather in the tail. The slightest impurity in strain is said to destroy the bird's pluck, hence the white feather is used to denote cowardice.

Wheat Berry Perfected.

Many of the present superior wheats produced in the United States were introduced into this country from Asia, Europe and South America, and acclimated to our country while undergoing the test. They have been bred and crossed until a berry has been secured which will adapt itself to the region requiring a wheat crop.

Baptized in a Balloon.

The child of a well-known member of the British parliament was recently christened in the crypt of the house of commons. This is, in a sense, a survival of the custom of bygone days, when christenings in crypts were by no means uncommon. In one recent case in California, for instance, the ceremony was performed in a diving bell at the bottom of the sea. In another case the proud parents of the new arrival persuaded a clergyman to baptize the child while up in a balloon.

The Cautious Elephant.

Ancient chronicles tell us that the Romans sometimes tested their military bridges by sending an elephant out on them and then watching to see whether the cautious beast would cross. Even to this day the natives in India set great store by the elephant's caution.

ROLE OF THE COSSACKS

PLAY IMPORTANT PART IN THE HISTORY OF RUSSIA.

This Historic Body of Fighting Men Stands for Law and Order—They Are Opposed to Bolshevism and May Help to Bring About the Regeneration of New Russia.

PRACTICALLY in every despatch from Russia, nowadays, one comes across the name "Cossack"—Cossacks from the Kuban and from the Don, and at an earlier period, the Cossacks from Orenburg, the Ural and Siberia were just as frequently mentioned.

It is therefore well timed at this moment to impart some general information about the Cossacks and to state some facts concerning their participation in the struggle with the Bolsheviki during the years of 1918 and 1919, writes Prof. N. A. Borodin in Struggling Russia.

The Cossacks are a fighting body of men, consisting principally of small farmers, fishermen and cattle raisers, who settled along the former frontiers of the Russian state and along the banks of the big rivers—the Don, the Kuban, the Terek, the Volga, the Ural, the Irtysh and the Amur. Over 300 years ago they settled in these localities with arms in their hands, and have served ever since as an armed guard against the raids of the nomads, the Kirgizis, the Kalmykis and other aborigines, upon the interior of Russia. This state of constant vigilance forced the Cossacks to carry weapons all the time, and thus they became a military class. After these regions were definitely conquered, the Cossacks began to occupy themselves with peaceful pursuits and apportioned a certain number of "hundreds" and regiments for guard duty.

As a reward for their services in guarding the frontiers of the empire and in recognition of the fact of their conquest of the lands where they settled, the Government gave to the Cossacks permanent grants of ownership of the soil and the right to enjoy unmolestedly all its wealth and appendages. They were given the right to co-ordinate their inner life in accordance with their own choice and will, but were required to furnish, in exchange, a certain number of armed men equipped at their own expense. In this manner were created the free Cossack communities of the Don, the Kuban, the Tersk, the Ural, the Orenburg and Siberia. The organization of their inner and military life was founded upon a genuinely democratic basis. The communities were ruled by elected elders (starshinis), with an elected Ataman at the head. The Ataman was the chief military commander and was elected by the "circle" (assembly) The economic life and the administration of the individual settlements was based on the same principles of democracy, with elected men at the head of each small self-governing unit. The Cossacks never knew the institution of serfdom, and the land was distributed in most of the Cossacks communities, among the members of the settlements, in quite a proportional and just manner. Strangers were admitted into the Cossack communities only by unanimous consent.

As for the national make-up of the Cossacks, the great majority of them are Great Russians (those of the Don, the Ural, the Orenburg, the Tersk and of Siberia), some are Little Russians (on the Kuban and part of the Don), some are Kalmykis (in the Astrakhan, and on the Don), some are Tartars (part of the Ural Cossacks) and some are Booriyats (in the Transbaikalia).

In wartime each Cossack force had to furnish a certain quota of armed regiments, the number depending upon the size of the population of the given force. The total Cossack population, numbering about five million, could summon under its colors an army of 180,000 men.

In the last European War there were on the western front a number of Cossack regiments from the Don, the Orenburg and the Ural, and a small number of Siberian and Transbaikalian Cossacks; the Cossacks from the Kuban and Tersk were largely on the Asia Minor front.

When the dissolution of the army set in, under the influence of propaganda and war weariness, the disease affected some Cossack regiments too, particularly those from the Don, and a part of them, garrisoned in Petrograd, went over to the Bolsheviki, and only later deserted them. The majority of the Cossacks came back to their settlements (stanitzis) from the front without weapons, having obeyed the order to disarm, but some parts did not surrender their arms and forced their way through to the homelands mounted and with arms in hand (the Ural, the Orenburg and parts of the Don and Kuban Cossacks). The Bolshevist malady did not fail to infect the settlements as well, to a certain extent; on the Don and in the Orenburg force some stanitzis became infested with Bolshevism, and they were pretty difficult to overcome. The most immune to Bolshevism among the European Cossacks were the men from the Ural and the Kuban.

It must be stated that even those Cossacks who became afflicted with Bolshevism were soon cured, thanks to the fact that the great majority of them stood firmly for order, statehood and against the Bolsheviki.

The Orenburg Cossacks, who at first fell under the influence of the Bolsheviki, later formed special self-defence detachments and drove the Bolsheviki beyond their borders. Their main city, Orenburg, and their settlements (stanitzis) changed hands frequently, but at present they are all again freed from the Bolsheviki.

LONDON POLICEWOMEN.

They Carry No Weapon and Depend on Moral Suasion.

The "policewoman" has become a permanent figure in London street life. The force is now full, with a waiting list of aspirants to the hard work and extremely unbecoming uniform its members are condemned to wear.

Their uniform consists of a round-topped hard felt hat, with a flat brim about four inches broad; a long coat of dingy black or blue, or perhaps it is intended to be grey; a loose skirt, well above the ankles, of the same material; grey cotton gloves and a narrow, blue-and-white armlet, on the right wrist.

They always work in couples. They have adopted the regular policeman's stride—long, slow, measured. They wear an air of extreme gravity as they march along the West End streets, oblivious to or unconcerned at the somewhat amused glances of the passersby.

All look wiry and muscular, and have learned to defend themselves by practicing jiu-jitsu tricks, as they carry no weapon, not even the abbreviated club of their male colleagues. Their work is moral suasion.

When they espy a girl who seems to be on the downward path talking to a man—they are especially alert if he is in uniform—they stand by, disconcerting onlookers, or try to dissuade the girl from listening to the supposed tempter's blandishments. Very often they shame the man away, and induce the girl to go home. If she is out of work they promise to see what they can do for her.

Their success is proved by the enlarging of the force by the very authorities that long frowned upon the feminine contingent as ridiculous, impracticable and useless. The women are not very young. Most of them have been in one of the war welfare organizations; others were policewomen in big munition works; still others were conductorettes of motor buses.

New Creatures at the London Zoo.

The Zoological Gardens have quickly resumed their normal appearance. An unusually beautiful floral display, much paint and regravelling, gifts and loans from the president's private collection at Woburn Abbey, and a fair number of arrivals from overseas have all contributed to a pleasant air of prosperity. The regular visitor and the sedulous zoologist will still see many gaps in the collection. It cannot be expected that these will be filled until the conditions of transport are more normal, and the desire to "profiteer" has disappeared from the tropical jungle. None the less there is now a good collection at Regent's Park, more representative and richer in rare animals than any other menagerie in Europe. Of special interest are a number of young animals.

The place of honor must be given to a young male African hippotamus, born in the Zoological Gardens at Amsterdam three years ago, and sold to the society at the same price as it would have fetched before the war. It came direct from Amsterdam to the Thames in charge of a keeper, Sergeant Bowman, who gained the military medal at Kemmel Hill. Bowman made friends with the new hippo on the journey. It now follows him like a dog, and is already at home in its new quarters, opening its mouth to beg for buns like an old inhabitant.

The Duke of Bedford has sent two adult and four yearling llamas from Woburn. They are being trained to pull children in governess-carts, the four yearlings to make a team. The latter disgraced themselves in the peace procession by refusing to keep their distance from the other animals, and ultimately lying down on the path.

Not Allowed to Shake Hands.

Although to-day we all shake hands on meeting as a matter of course, there was a time when purists held that friends of opposite sexes should not salute one another by shaking hands.

In 1828, Sir John Nicholl, giving judgment in an English divorce case, remarked that "conduct highly blameable and distressing to the feelings of a husband had been proved; but although thirty witnesses had been examined, no indecent familiarities beyond kissing had been proved. The shaking of hands when they met was now a practice so frequent between persons of different sexes however, opinions might differ as to its delicacy, that no unfavorable inference could be deduced thence."

Too Much Kindness.

The following story of the King of the Hedjaz and his court is vouched for by a subscriber. Only one British officer had at that time been received at the court, and the King ordered a feast in his honor. The table was spread, it was six yards wide, and long in proportion, whole sheep were served and the carver walked up and down upon the table attending to the wants of the guests.

When the hour for retiring came relays of musicians were told off to sing the Britisher to sleep, and throughout the entire night sweet melody "soothed" his slumbers. Versed in the ways of the East, he accepted this hospitality with composure. But on his return to his own camp he slept for twenty-four hours.

That Made Them Laugh.

A star combination of music-hall artistes was billed to appear at a small country town recently. On the opening night the "turns" appeared as advertised, but the audience failed to see anything funny in the show.

At last "the great negro comedian" came on, and commenced his performance with:

"Ha, ha! I am enjoying myself!"

This was too much for a grim-visaged Scot, seated in the body of the hall, who shouted, in a loud voice, plainly audible all over the building:

"Get oot, ye saftie! Ye're the only yin that is, then!"

Two Sarnia men, Messrs. Garvey and Parsons, were badly injured when the car they were in ran down an embankment and struck a tree.

SIGNED IN NIGHTGOWN.

How the War of 1871 Was Really Settled.

An interesting story is told in Munsey's Magazine in connection with the signing of the treaty of 1871. It reads:

Much has been said about the dramatic contrast between the Germans at Versailles in 1871 and the Germans at Versailles in 1919.

Negotiations had almost been broken off over the question of the German armies remaining in occupation of France. The French envoys were in despair, and Pouyer-Quertier had gone to bed in his hotel room, fearing for the worst. Before dawn there was a knock at his door, and the Frenchman got up in his nightgown, to find Bismarck, in full uniform, come to renew the discussion.

After a prolonged talk, saying that it was dry work, he stood up and rang for beer. After the beer had been brought, he rang again, asked for kirsch, and poured a quantity of it into the beer. Taking the poker, he made it red-hot in the fire, stirred the mixture of beer and kirsch and invited the Frenchman to drink. The Frenchman did so, saying:

"I think of my poor country as I drink."

Bismarck, clapping him on the shoulder, announced he was "a good fellow," and that evacuation of France should take place at once.

There and then the final article of thet reaty of Frankfort, putting an end to the Franco-Prussian War, was signed on that small table at the bedside of Pouyer-Quertier in a little hotel in Frankfort.

As a matter of fact, however, the Franco-Prussian War was not ended at Versailles. It was the treaty of Frankfort that marked the termination of that conflict, and it is not without interest to record that the Bismarck of the Wagner picture is a different being from the more human character who, at Frankfort, on May 10, 1871, signed this document with M. Pouyer-Quertier, finance minister of the French republic.

The Negroes of Africa.

Summing up seven years of travel in the interior of Africa, where the natives are "uncorrupted by alcohol, European morals, and the love of gain either by fair means or fraud, an Englishman, Mr. E. Torday, speaks very well indeed of the African negro. In two crossings of the Congo Free State he met no tribe that "was not naturally good-tempered, and, in most instances, hospitable and trustful." Customs of course are different in a land where one may know the tribe to which a man belongs by the design that has been painfully embossed on his skin. The traveller tells of tribes where all the women who would be in the fashion paint themselves red from top to toe, and are so fond of the color that if a gift is given them they immediately paint it red also. Cannibals he met, and people who live in houses the door of which looks like a window, and others, remote from the inventions of civilization, who transmit complicated messages over long distances by signals on a wooden gong. Odd human beings, as the rest of us hear of them: but the traveller left them with regret, looking down from his steamer on the crowd gathered when he was leaving the Congo, "among whom there was not one who was not my friend." "Deke" was his name among the natives, and as he steamed away, there stood his "dear black friends, waving their hands, cloth, branches, and anything that came to hand, and shouting in the native tongue, 'Good-bye, Deke; don't forget us.'"

Jaspar the Airedale.

Every one who has ever owned an Airedale, in that period of an Airedale's untrained youth, will have a sympathetic feeling for the owner of Jaspar, as told by Frances Lester Warner, in "Endicott and I."

"If Jaspar was a puppy, he was old for his age. He was approximately the size of a sheep, though more gaunt and rangy in build; and he had the easy gait of a zebra. His expression was worn and sapient. This aspect of advanced age was heightened by the brown wisps of beard that floated around his chin. He had an elderly mannerism of cocking one eyebrow and glancing about, sidelong, out of the corner of one cynical eye. He looked like an ancient dervish—shrewd and inscrutable.

"But however aged Jaspar looked, his stride was agile. 'Don't let the dog out,' shouted the family, in one breath, if any of us went to the door. We developed an elaborate technique of stage exit to get out of the house at all; first backing discreetly to the door, squeezing hastily through and finally stuffing back such portions of Jaspar's leaping frame as had managed to emerge."

The Unkind Printer.

Misprints are often a source of joy to all but editors. Few are more pleasing than those enshrined in the ancient yarn—probably concocted—of the public banquet at which a speaker, in proposing the toast of the army, coupled with it the name of the distinguished general, whom he described, according to the printed account of the proceedings, as a "bottle-scarred veteran." In the next issue of the paper in which the libel had appeared a note was inserted expressing regret for a typographical error, and explaining that the words should have been "battle-scared veteran."

No Comparison.

An excited season-ticket-holder managed to get an interview with a director of the railway he patronized.

"It's unbearable!" he finished.

"I know, I know!" said the railway-man soothingly. "They pack you in like sardines, don't they?"

"That simile won't do, my dear fellow!" retorted the victim. "When a box of sardines is full, it's full. They don't keep opening it up every minute or two to pack in a few more."

FORBID EXPORTS

Bavaria Will Not Allow Household Goods to Go Out.

Berlin, Dec. 19. — The Bavarian Government has established an embargo on the export of household goods, especially sewing machines, furniture, glassware and pottery. Increasing traffic in these commodities, which are finding their way abroad, will, it is expected, be checked in this way. Bavaria's action, which follows a similar move on the part of Baden, is contravention of the national constitution, but the Bavarian Government declares it will rescind the law as soon as the Legislature enacts statutes calculated to speedily end the process of "stripping Germany," which is now invading homes and firesides.

When Legislators "Pair."

When a legislator wishes to be absent at the time when an important vote is to be taken, he finds some member who intends to vote on the other side of the question and arranges a "pair" with him. That is, the second legislator agrees to refrain from voting, as an accommodation to the first. The net result when neither vote is cast is the same as if both had voted on opposite sides. Both legislators can then be absent if they wish without loss or gain to either side.

COL. SAM SHARPE PENNED HIS WILL JUST BEFORE GOING INTO ACTION

Out in Flanders two years ago, while waiting to take his battalion into action of Passchendaele Ridge the thoughts of Col. Sam Sharpe M.P., travelled back over the thousands of miles between to his home at Uxbridge and those he had left behind. In provision for their comfort, with the guns sounding in his ears, he sat down and penned a letter which was to form a codicil to his will. He came through the battle in safety, and later, at Buxton, endorsed the contents of the letter he had written for delivery in case he had fallen in battle. He died in Montreal on May 25th, 1918. The Appellate Division has now given judgment approving the judgment of the Supreme Court of Ontario which admitted the letter to probate as part of the will of "Samuel Simpson Sharpe, soldier and barrister."

The letter is a glorious monument to the memory of a galant Canadian soldier with a flaming passion for the principles upon which the British Empire has been founded. It is, in part, as follows:

"In the Field, France,
"Oct. 21, 1917.

"My Dearest Wife—

"We have been ordered up to the front area near Ypres, and the Canadian corps with other troops are to attack the Passchendaele ridge. Our battalion is going up in support to our brigade, which is to take the first objective. We have every little protection there and I may not pull through and am leaving instructions for this letter to be sent to you in case I should be killed. I could stay out, but as the whole Canadian corps is going in and as I have not missed any show in which our battalion has been in, I do not wish to remain out of this. I was going to take Harold up with me, but thought it safer to leave him out, so that in case a shell got our 'pill-box' both of us would not be snuffed out together.

"If it should be my fate to be among those who fall, I wish to say I have no regrets to offer. I have done my duty as I saw it and have fought in defence of those principles upon which our great Empire is founded, and I die without any fears as to the ultimate destiny of all that is immortal within me. I have forgotten all I left in my will, but I want you to return to Bert his gramophone case and also see that he and his family are well looked after. I have left lots for you and you will get a pension of $1,500 per year in case I am killed in service, and I want Bert's family well looked after so long as you have all you need.

"I think he should be assisted as well as you can afford out of my estate without depriving yourself of any benefits under my will.

"I want Martha also looked after and given any help she may need. She has been a second mother to me; also brother George's son, Sam. He should be educated at some good school and given every chance."

The letter closes with a tender tribute of affection meant only for the eyes of his wife, who "did so much to make my life happy and bright and so worth living."

"Do not grieve for me," he said, "we shall meet in the Great Beyond where forever more we shall dwell in love and happiness."

There was a postscript to the letter: "The boys are splendid and all face the issues of death with a calmness that is magnificent. I am proud of the boys."

NOT FOR WASHINGTON

Sir Robert Borden Will Not Be an Ambassador.

[illegible] (Staff Special).—[illegible] gossip which connects the name of Sir Robert Borden with the British Ambassadorship at Washington is not treated seriously here. If ill health forces the Premier to quit his present post the same reason would prevent him going to another where the work, though perhaps not so worrying, is rather strenuous. If he were able to go to Washington he would be able to stay here. It is well known that whatever movement there may have been in the direction of a Cabinet re-construction to include himself, his health alone is the only reason for his proposed retirement at this time anyway.

LARGE CONGREGATION AT MURRAY ST. ADDRESSED BY CHURCH LEADERS

Dr. Shields and Dr. MacNeill Deliver Weighty Messages on the Great Forward Movement of the Church—Great Spiritual Visitation is the Need.

One of the greatest meetings held in Peterborough in connection with the Forward Movement of the church was that at Murray Street Church last night, and addressed by Dr. J. J. Shields and Dr. MacNeill, eminent Toronto ministers. Mr. Albert Matthews, chairman of the Baptist Executive Committee, presided over the meeting.

Spiritual Movement.

In opening his address, Dr. Shields spoke of the work being done in the Eastern townships where the preparatory work was done by the pastor of the Murry Street Church.

He emphasized the fact that all should understand that the great Forward Movement was primarily a spiritual uplift of the people. It now appears that its influence will be wide and great because the spirit of the Lord is touching the hearts of the people throughout the land. It is easy to be lacking in nothing material, but be woefully lacking in that that is spiritual.

"And how shall we run if we have no tidings?" asked Dr. Shields. We believe that Jesus Christ, the Father and the Holy Spirit is one God. It matters not what we think of the form of God. Any true knowledge of God that man has is what God chooses to reveal to him.

Great is the mystery of God. He is before all things and by him all things exist. We cannot welcome anyone into Christian fellowship who questions the God-head of Christ. The essential thing is that Jesus Christ our God appeared unto all men. The belief is the essential Diety of Christ to be obeyed and worshipped is the need of today.

Captivity of Christ.

What is the extent of your liberty if you are a Christian? Like Paul, you must bring into captivity every thought to the Lord Jesus Christ. We should, like Paul, who was endowed with worldly wisdom and material things, cast all at the feet of our Lord and Master.

It matters not if there was a Jonah or whether there was a fish. But anything that is contrary to the authority of Jesus Christ can be afforded to be ignored. When we put Jesus Christ in the central place enthroned in glory there will be no difficulty about our attitude toward the battle.

Unless a man be born again he cannot enter the Kingdom of God. We must go back to the old truth that all men are lost without Christ.

There is a great moral influence in the atonement. It was the blood of the life of God that was flowing down. There was never a time when the world needed atonement more than when Jesus died for sinners.

What is the grace of God? Grace is all the power of the Diety in the benevolent exercise for the salvation of men. If you want to know if this gospel is true take the "Old Book" and look at it.

Our business today, declared Dr. Shields, is to make Jesus Lord, preach there is one one Lord of all and He is the King of Kings. We must make an effort to facilitate our Lord's return to His crown.

Let us dedicate ourselves and all we have to spread the doctrine that in all things Christ may have the pre-eminence.

Dr. MacNeill.

The other speaker of the meeting was Dr. MacNeill, of Toronto, chairman of the Baptist Forward Movement in Canada.

He emphasized the very serious crisis the Church of God has reached at the present time. It is a peculiar crises due to the peculiar conditions of the people. The Kingdom of Christ once turned on Peter's answer, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

All down during the history of the centuries when there are tremendous issues that seem to tremble in the balance, there is always some man or woman that answers as Peter did and forms the foundation for a Church of Christ against which all the powers of hell cannot prevail.

The challenge of the hour springs out of two facts—the evident spiritual neediness of divine representation, and the readiness of God to pour out his spirit upon all mankind.

We must face the fact that there are influences abroad working against the church. But everywhere there are found little bands of servants of the Lord standing, as it were with their backs to the wall, proclaiming the truth.

There is need of a great spiritual visitation. Even the editor of the greatest financial journal on the continent calls for a spiritual revival.

God is the great statagist of the centuries. And now when the heart of the world has been ploughed with grief and harrowed with sorrow it is time to unite our forces and route the great forces of evil.

Our world has yet to see what God can do with one body of people that surrender themselves totally to Him. The solemn thing is that the mind be listening at any time that through the spirit of God may shake the country from coast to coast.

Then there is the great missionary work to be done by the churches of Canada. There are thirty souls for whose salvation, humanly speaking, every Baptist is responsible. By clothing himself in Gideon God accomplished great and mighty deeds. God may not only demand your soul, but also your flesh and body. There is a great need for tendership. No greater distinction can come to any home than that God should choose one from it to bear his name.

God demands that he may have our treasure, our wealth and our possessions for the extension of His Kingdom.

Dried Vegetable Value.

It is by no means certain that dried vegetables possess the same nutriment value as vegetables that have not been dried. Prof. Philip B. Hawk of Jefferson Medical college, Philadelphia, notes in Science a phenomenon that was called to his attention by Charles Denby of the war trade board and Daniel Moreau Barringer, which suggests that some hitherto unsuspected structural change takes place in vegetables when they are dried.

It is well known that when dried vegetables are immersed in water for a few hours they assume a form closely resembling that of fresh vegetables. Yet if this swollen vegetable be left at room temperature for from 24 to 36 hours it returns to its dried state. In other words, a fresh vegetable holds its water much more tenaciously than does a dried vegetable that has been immersed in water.

Avarice.

Avarice begets more vices than Priam did children, and, like Priam survives them all. It starves its keeper to surfeit those who wish him dead and makes him submit to more mortifications to lose heaven than the martyr undergoes to gain it. Avarice is a passion full of paradox, a madness full of method; for although the miser is the most mercenary of all beings, yet he serves the worst master more faithfully than some Christians do the best and will take nothing for it. He falls down and worships the god of this world, but will have neither its pomps its vanities, nor its pleasure for his trouble. He begins to accumulate treasure as a means to happiness, and by a common but morbid association he continues to accumulate it as an end. He lives poor to die rich, and is the mere jailer of his house and the turnkey of his wealth.—C. C. Colton.

World's Seed Emporium.

The Ill-Starred Raven.

Tradition has it that all the calamities which dog the footsteps of the ill-fated Austrian royal family are foreshadowed by the appearance of a raven. When the Archduke Maximilian departed for Mexico—and execution—a raven followed him on the path; and when the archduchess left for her unhappy life in Spain a raven hovered over the carriage. A flight of ravens is said to have hovered over the crowning of the late Francis Joseph, and one of the ill-omened birds dashed a peach from the hand of the Empress Elizabeth the day before she was murdered at Geneva.

Blocked by Caterpillars.

A bug may hold up a locomotive. If, that is to say, there are enough of him. Caterpillars will sometimes swarm on railway tracks in such enormous numbers as to prevent the car wheels from going round. They just "slither" and the train is brought to a standstill.

The insects involved in this sort of mischief are most often the army worm, the cotton worm, the tent caterpillar and migratory locusts. Swarms of huge water beetles have been known to halt trains in this way.

Woman's Chance of Marriage.

A woman's chance of marriage is greatest between the ages of 20 and 25 years, when 52 per cent. of the marriages take place.

FINN WOMEN LIKE FRANCHISE.

More Women Than Men Voted in the Election of 1908.

It seems only natural that Finland, a land where women have had the vote for 13 years, and won it by their participation in quelling labor troubles, should be one of the first portions of the dismembered Russian Empire to set up a stable constitutional Government.

From an educational point of view the women in Finland have been very fortunate, as there are many excellent schools for girls and a number of co-educational schools throughout the country which prepare students for the university examinations. Girls were admitted to the university in 1878, and, until the war intervened, they not only attended lectures but took part in all branches of university life; they participated in all the celebrations and festivities and were members of the various clubs and student organizations, in which they were on a footing of perfect equality with the men and frequently were elected to various official positions. After they were graduated from one of the several high schools or from the university there were many branches of work open to them.

They became teachers even in the state schools for boys, cashiers or bookkeepers in banks, clerks in the state archives, and in many branches of the civic administration. There are really not enough educated men to meet the requirements of the country, and consequently the cooperation of the women is a matter of vital importance. It not infrequently happened, in normal times, that even married women in comparatively good circumstances sought employment outside their homes.

Having thus such an excellent foundation to build upon, it is small wonder that the woman's movement soon found many active supporters. In 1863 the Diet had accorded the municipal vote to women taxpayers living in the country, and in 1872 to women living in the towns, all of whom were also given the right to be elected members of certain local self-governing bodies. In 1900 the women Social Democrats included the suffrage in their program, but the special activity for the suffrage began only in the year 1904, although in 1897 a petition had been officially presented to the Diet, at the request of the "Finnish Woman's Association."

The reason why so little was done in direct furtherance of the cause of woman suffrage between the years 1897 and 1904 is that just at that time Finland was passing through a severe political crisis.

After the outbreak of the October revolution in Russia (1905), a sympathetic strike was declared in Finland and several of the members of the central committee elected by a mass meeting to manage the details of the strike were women.

The first action taken by the committee was to close all the liquor shops, saloons and barrooms, and to organize a volunteer police force to keep order. After the second day the markets were reopened and the strikers were not allowed to cut off the water supply. In short, the strike was managed in a most orderly and systematic way, and no outrages of any sort were committed.

During the course of the strike numerous deputations were sent with petitions to the Governor-General, and in each deputation there were women members. Thus, even in moments of grave political danger, and at times when the utmost moderation and foresight were needed, the Finns were not afraid to trust their women.

The very great interest that the women took in the elections may be gathered from the fact that in Helsingfors, the capital, at the time of the second election (in 1908), there were 19,640 women voters and 15,516 men voters registered. It is true that the majority of the women voted for men; as there were only 26 women elected in a House of 200, but one woman received a larger number of votes than was given to any of the men candidates of her party.

Seeds In Paleozic Rock.

The minuteness and perfect state of preservation of some of the remains found in the rocks of organisms which lived untold millions of years ago is beautifully shown by the researches of Prof. F. W. Oliver, on an archaic type of seed discovered in the lower coal measures of Lancashire. These seeds are only about one-fifth of an inch long and under the microscope their integument is seen to possess ten ribs, which project like little arms from the top of the nucleus. Many pollen cells are discovered, and these have been sectioned, and what appears to be fossil sperms, occurring in pairs in each pollen cell, have been detected. The plants that bore these seeds have not yet been traced, but since the discovery was made in Paleozic rocks, their era may be a thousand times as remote as the Mosaic date of Adam's birth.—Family Herald.

Careless Mamma.

Recently a little child five or six years old was seen walking back and forth in the corridor of the court house, rubbing his hands and with a look of great consternation on his face. The building was crowded with people. The child's attitude attracted the attention of two ladies, who went to him and sympathetically asked: "What's the matter, little boy, are you lost?" "No," answered the child with much concern, "but my mamma is."

Chinese Amazons.

China had women soldiers long before they were known in Russia. During the Tae Ping rebellion, 1850, women as well as men served in the ranks. In Nanking, in 1853, an army of 500,000 women was recruited. They were divided into brigades of 13,000 each and were commanded by women officers.

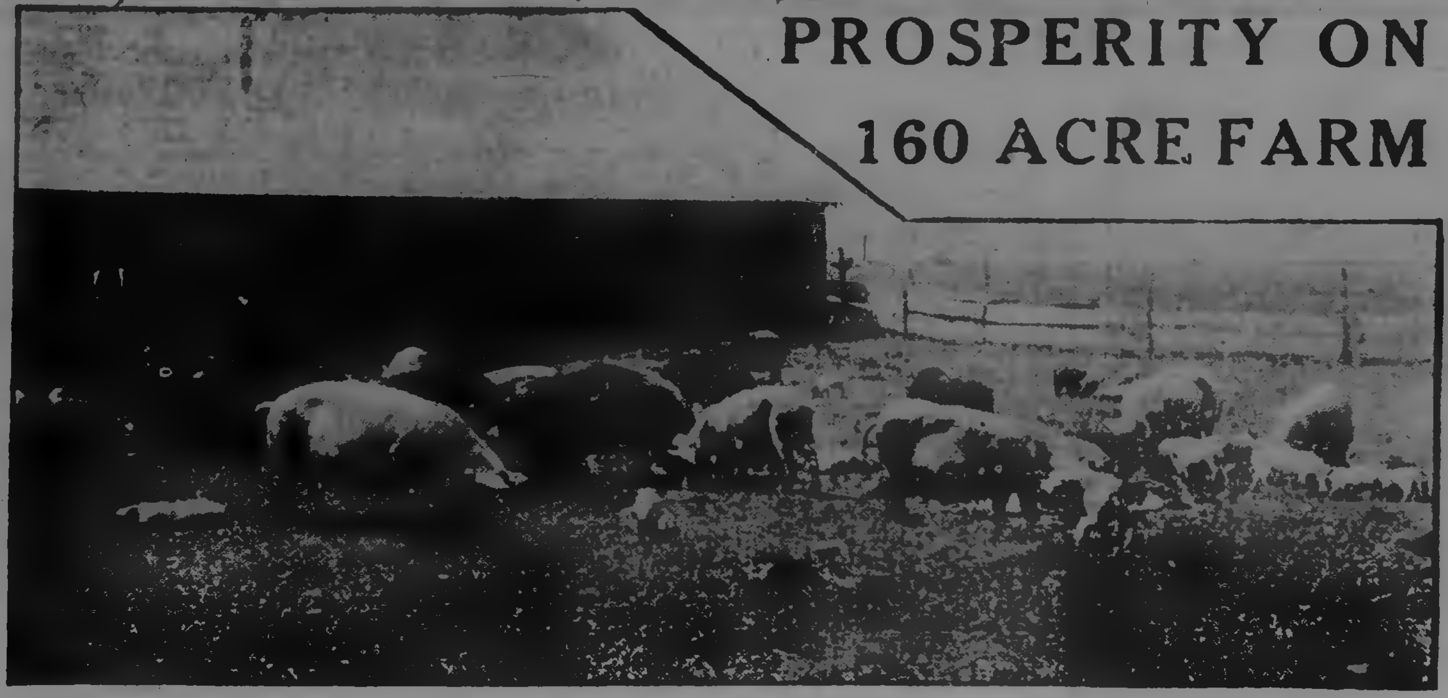
PROSPERITY ON 160 ACRE FARM



Raising Hogs On a Western Farm.

Can a man farm and make money on 160 acres of non-irrigated land in Western Canada? D. E. Baldwin, of Kingsland, answers "Yes," and he is speaking from experience. Before coming to Saskatchewan in 1906, and taking up his homestead in the Kingsland district, tributary to the thriving city of Saskatoon, he had pioneered in four states of the Union, his parents moving from Ohio, where he was born, to Iowa, when he was a small child. Later he homesteaded in Nebraska, near David City, and was a pioneer settler in the State of Kansas, where he lived sixteen years, and Oklahoma, where he homesteaded in 1896. After about ten years in Oklahoma, he came to the Canadian West and began again on a homestead in 1906.

Here he has prospered, though he has never farmed more than 160 acres of land, and he has constantly refused the advice of his neighbors to increase the size of his farm. He believes he can get more real living out of life on a smaller farm. His policy is "always to run his business, and not let it run him." He is finding the operation of what in Western Canada is called a small farm both a pleasure and a profit to him. Probably his previous pioneering experience helped him to form this opinion.

How he farms a quarter section and gets more money out of it than many a farmer with three or four times as large an acreage, he told a representative of the North-West Farmer, of Winnipeg, recently.

"I never went into grain farming, but made my money out of cattle, hogs, horses and potatoes. I follow the rotation of barley, wheat and oats without any summer fallow whatever. I fall plow for all my grain crops and plow it again in the spring which, in addition to plenty of manure, has made the summer fallow absolutely unnecessary for me to practice. Instead of sowing rye on a separate piece of land, I intend to henceforth sow it with the oat crop when the oats are two inches high. This, I understand, has been tried in Manitoba and has been successful in certain parts. All the grain is used for stock purposes, and it is from that source that my revenue must be made to come."

"The summer feed for my sixteen head of cattle is sixty acres of pasture, and in the fall they run on the stubble and winter rye, which is usually sown about the first of August. During the winter they run out in the day time and are stabled at night, feeding on straw, hay, sheaf oats and usually a few turnips. In the spring, winter rye offers early pasture, which they use until May 1st, at which time they are taken off and the rye allowed to ripen to be cut for crop.

"My hog proposition is operated on a ten-acre hog lot, surrounded by woven wire twenty-six inches high above which are three barb wires. I usually plan on raising two litters a year, one litter coming in April, and one in September, and find that ten acres of pasture for five Duroc sows and their litters is sufficient to make a great reduction in the cost of rearing hogs, in fact, furnishing all the pasture they want to eat. The pasture consists of brome grass, a little alfalfa, oats and wheat mixed and rape. I have tried barley, but find it kills out much easier than oats and wheat. The brome grass is good in the spring and the early fall. The rape is usually sown in April, and along with the grain pasture furnishes good summer feed. The hog proposition is a simple one. They get oats and barley chop with more barley than oats towards fattening time, and they run in this hog pasture, having access to whichever pasture they prefer, there being no cross fences. The housing is simple and cheap, but has proven better than any elaborate hog house I could put up. It consists of eight posts put in the ground to form a rectangle eight by eight feet with a frame arranged over the top and straw threshed over the entire frame work. A pig run three feet wide extends out a considerable distance from this pen, over which straw is also placed. This shelter will winter from thirty to sixty hogs. A short distance away I have a hog feeding house, twelve feet by twelve feet, in which the hogs are fed in winter."

He has a good income from potatoes. With this crop he has always been successful in obtaining large yields. He plants six acres to potatoes every season and he has always had a crop of from 300 to 525 bushels to the acre. For all of his surplus he has found a ready market at never less than sixty cents a bushel, while he has received as high as $2.50 a bushel.

His 160 acres are divided into sixty acres of pasture, ten acres of a pig lot, five acres for house, barn and hedges, and eighty-five acres in crops, consisting of thirty-five acres of oats, twenty-five acres of barley, nine acres of rye, and six of potatoes. Surrounding his buildings is quite an extensive hedge consisting of twenty rows of trees. The varieties are box elders, ash, cottonwood, willow, caragana and evergreens, planted four feet each way. With the exception of the evergreens, they are now from eight to twenty-four feet in height, forming a fine protection which the owner would not part with for a great deal of money.

It is not difficult to figure that Mr. Baldwin is deriving a very satisfactory income from his 160 acre farm. Since the day that he arrived in Saskatchewan, practically penniless, in 1906, he has broken the whole of his land, fenced his farm, built a $4,000 house and a substantial barn and has acquired a fine herd of cattle, besides horses, hogs, and poultry, and is considered among his neighbors as a prosperous farmer.

A Brave Australian.

The King has approved the award of the Victoria Cross to Corpl. Arthur Percy Sullivan, 45th Battalion Royal Fusiliers (Crystal Brook, South Australia), for most conspicuous bravery and devotion to duty on the 10th August, 1919, at the Sheika river, North Russia. The platoon to which he belonged, after fighting a rear-guard covering action, had to cross the river by means of a narrow plank, and during the passage an officer and three men fell into a deep pool. Without hesitation, under intense fire, Corpl. Sullivan jumped into the river and rescued all four, bringing them out singly. But for this gallant action his comrades would undoubtedly have been drowned. It was a splendid example of heroism, as all ranks were on the point of exhaustion, and the enemy less than 100 yards distant.

Perhaps They Did.

A sergeant was so much given to using bad language on the parade ground that some of the men complained, and the commanding officer interviewed him and told him not to let it happen again. The following morning the sergeant was in charge of a very ragged squad and after keeping silence for a considerable time he eventually burst out with: "Bless you, my pretty dears; you know what I mean."

Where Are They?

Where are the girls who were to return to the kitchens after the conclusion of the war work, as was predicted? Where are they? Not in the kitchens; and trades and professions utilizing female help are unable to locate them. Perhaps, like Francois Villon's girls, "The wind has blown them all away." They can't all be in the movies.

Balancing Trade.

Where one country exports extensively to another and buys nothing from it the checks and drafts given in payment do not balance and it becomes necessary to ship gold or otherwise readjust accounts. This is expensive and makes it necessary to pay a premium in exchange. This premium is virtually an addition to prices paid. When it becomes too high purchases will be made in other markets. Thus will trade be lost unless it is balanced.

Incompleteness

How universal is the sense of incompleteness in human experience! Youth, maturity and even old age are ever reaching for the something else which they crave for the hour, which seems to be the essential need of the year while we occasionally meet natures who are bending every force of their working years to the end of attaining some great ambition, falling in which, life to them is but a fraction.—Robert Carroll.

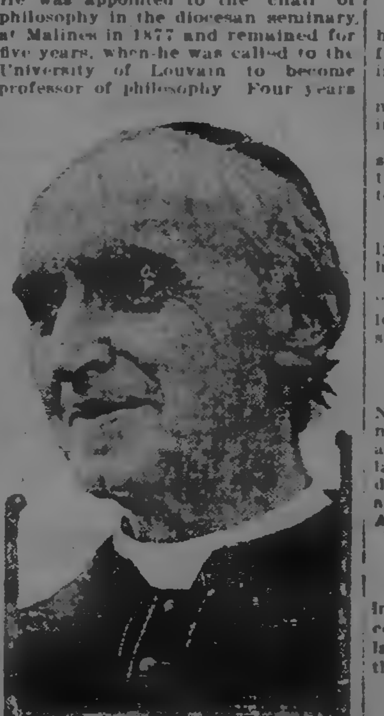
Cardinal Mercier More Than a Personality He Is an Institution

THE herd-priest, Cardinal Mercier of Malines, has returned to Belgium after his visit to this continent, which was in the nature of a tribute to America's relief work in Belgium, and will retrace the missionary journeys of his maternal uncle, the Very Rev. Adrian J. Croquet, who was one of the great pioneer missionaries who is remembered as the "Saint of Oregon."

Cardinal Mercier is more than a personality. He is an institution. When his people were crushed under the iron heel of German military rule, his voice was heard round the world in protest. His courage was compelling. It made of him a world figure.

Cardinal Desire Felicien Francois Joseph Mercier was educated at St. Rombault's College, Malines, preparing for the priesthood at the diocesan seminary there. He was ordained to the priesthood on April 4, 1874, but did not begin parish work at once, as he was admitted to the old University of Louvain for post-graduate work in theology. This course in a measure determined his career, for he decided that his call was to the teaching office rather than to the pastoral duties of a parish. He was appointed to the chair of philosophy in the diocesan seminary at Malines in 1877 and remained for five years, when he was called to the University of Louvain to become professor of philosophy. Four years later his work had attracted the attention of Pope Leo XIII., and he was rewarded with an appointment as domestic prelate, which gave to him the title of monsignor.



CARDINAL MERCIER.

In January, 1906, Cardinal Goossens, Archbishop of Malines, died. The panegyric was pronounced by Prof. Mercier. One of his colleagues, Prof. Joseph Sencie, was returning from the cathedral with Monsignor Mercier. He prophesied the elevation of Monsignor Mercier.

His prophecy was met with derision. Monsignor Mercier could not imagine his own selection, picturing himself merely as a hard-working professor, with little or no experience in administrative work. But a few weeks later, on February 21, the announcement was made that Monsignor Mercier had been designated.

He was called to be the spiritual head of an immense diocese. The latest available statistics — all, of course, of which will have to be revised on account of the ravages of war—showed 2,500,000 Roman Catholics and 800 parishes.

As he became better known to the humble people of his great archdiocese his personality, rather than his philosophy, began to stand out in traceable relief. He became known as a saint. He was untiring in his devotion to the needs of his people.

Among his messages to the Belgians during the war he said:

"If our ordeal is prolonged, it is because the design of Divine Love is not yet accomplished. The design of Providence is a design of love; doubt it not. It is carrying out for some a work of justice, for others a work of mercy; but for all it is, in the divine intention, a work of love. God will save Belgium, my brethren; you cannot doubt it. Nay, rather, He is saving her."

Mother Knew Her.

"Henry," said the wife of his bosom one night when he came home from business, "I've been dreadfully insulted by your mother!"

"But that's impossible!" cried the man. "My mother's miles away nursing poor Tom."

"It's true, though," the girl persisted. "It was in a letter that came this morning, and it was addressed to you, so, of course, I opened it."

"Of course!" said Henry drily.

Then his wife's composure suddenly broke down, and she told him amid her sobs:

"And the p-postscript said: 'D-dear Dora, p-please g-give th-this letter to H-Henry, as I w-want him to s-see it.'"

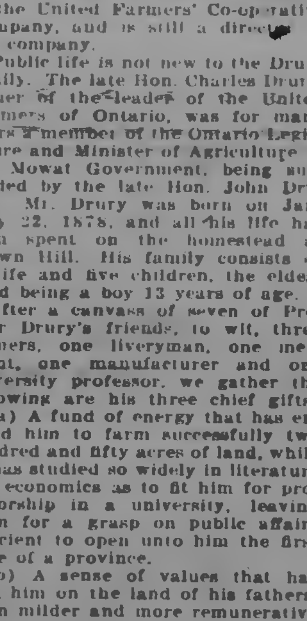
New Premier Has Had Training in Affairs Which Will be Useful in Public Life

IN selecting as their leader Mr. Ernest Charles Drury, of Crown Hill, near Barrie, in Simcoe County, the United Farmers of Ontario have shown sound judgment and great political wisdom. Their leader is a successful farmer, and his farm of 250 acres has been in the Drury family for over a century. He comes from a long line of farmers.

He is an educated man, a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College at Guelph, and he has had a long training in affairs that will be found very useful in public life. For three years he was Master of the Grange, a farmers' organization, and in 1910 he became the first secretary of the Canadian Council of Agriculture.

Mr. Drury was one of the organizers of the United Farmers of Ontario, in 1913, along with Secretary J. J. Morrison, W. C. Good and Col J. Fraser. He was the first president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, and is still a director of the company.



PREMIER DRURY.

Public life is not new to the Drury family. The late Hon. Charles Drury, father of the leader of the United Farmers of Ontario, was for many years a member of the Ontario Legislature and Minister of Agriculture in the Mowat Government, being succeeded by the late Hon. John Dryden. Mr. Drury was born on January 22, 1878, and all his life has been spent on the homestead at Crown Hill. His family consists of a wife and five children, the eldest child being a boy 13 years of age.

After a canvass of seven of Premier Drury's friends, to wit, three farmers, one liveryman, one merchant, one manufacturer and one university professor, we gather the following are his three chief gifts:

(a) A fund of energy that has enabled him to farm successfully two hundred and fifty acres of land, while he has studied so widely in literature and economics as to fit him for professorship in a university, leaving room for a grasp on public affairs sufficient to open unto him the first office of a province.

(b) A sense of values that has kept him on the land of his fathers, when milder and more remunerative callings were at his disposal.

(c) A religious spirit that has not only expressed itself in a Christian life, but which has given him a peculiar tenacity of belief and a security of opinion that is dreadful to the eyes of the political population of Ontario.

Cheating the Ex-Soldier.

Appearing before Medical Boards in 1916 and 1917, a private in the R.F.A.—a married man with four children, who had enlisted voluntarily in 1915—was each time "marked for discharge," although urged by his C.O. not to press for release, as he was "doing such good work in the army." Acceding to this request, he continued in khaki until, upon the formation of the Ministry of National Service, his good work was rewarded by an appointment as "Area Recorder" at a salary of £400 per annum. Still technically a soldier, he waited patiently for his discharge. He was disappointed to find that on the replacement of his army pay by a civil salary there were growing arrears of payment. To meet this it was arranged, under official sanction, that his C.O. should advance him certain sums of money for his immediate needs, and it was not until he had borrowed £35 in this way that the National Service authorities made the extraordinary announcement that his comfortable appointment was a "mistake" and must be cancelled—it having been discovered that the appointment was one for which "a serving soldier" was not technically eligible. In the circumstances, the very least these blundering bureaucrats should have done was to have paid the soldier's salary up to the date of the cancellation of his appointment—instead of which they actually ordered him to refund out of his own pocket the £35 advanced on their account. For downright injustice this is, as George Robey would say, "the uttermost extension of the outside edge."

The Lilac Tree.

The lilac is perhaps, all things considered, the most splendid of flowering trees. Everybody is familiar with its fragrance. The tree belongs to the olive family and is closely allied to the common privet, but it bears no fleshy fruit and is valueless except for the splendor of its blossoms.

The Eskimo's Smile.

The smile of the Eskimo is a continuous one. When he is hurt he smiles; when his kyack upsets and precipitates him into icy water he smiles; when he is friendly he smiles again, and when he is not friendly he smiles.

Too Hasty.

"Mr. Crowley, can you lend me"—"No, sir, I can't! And if I could I wouldn't. I have been lending you money for a year, and you make no effort to return it!" "But I would like to know if you wouldn't lend me—" "And I told you beforehand I won't." "Well, then, don't! I wanted to borrow your fountain pen to make out a check for what I owe you; but if you're in no hurry, I'm not!"

Suggestive Hint.

A certain eminent lawyer was appointed head of a government department, and he was anxious that all the members of the staff should work together in unison. He summoned the leading officials, and after delivering an address on the desirability of thorough co-operation, concluded by saying: "Gentlemen, in my profession when a jury disagrees it is discharged. I think I need say no more!"

Useful Asset.

Poet—"I sent you some verses about three weeks ago. What have you done with them?" Editor—"I'm holding them. Every little while lately I get thinking that we are not getting out as good a paper as we ought, and then I take those verses and see how much worse the sheet might be, and that makes me cheerful again!"

Irrigation Extends in the West

(1) Head Gates of C. P. R. Irrigation Canal near Calgary, Alta.

(2) Steps of an Irrigation Ditch near Gleichen, Alta.

The year 1919 stands out in the agricultural history of Alberta and Saskatchewan as having proved beyond all doubt the enormous benefits to be derived from farm irrigation, for in the drought which affected nearly the whole of these provinces, the south country within the irrigation belt not only produced excellent crops, but in many localities yields were harvested well in excess of the average of what are called good years.

On 145,500 acres in the Lethbridge District, 66,200 tons of fodder crops, and 3,775,000 bushels of grain have been grown to the total value of about $6,790,000. Wheat was the largest crop produced, there being well over two million bushels. Other crops harvested included more than a million bushels of oats, nearly 400,000 of barley, 26,000 of flax, and 66,000 tons of alfalfa. In addition vegetables were grown and sold from this area.

As another example of what phenomenal yields may be taken from irrigated land, the case of a farmer at Brooks may be cited who on his farm produced a $9,000 harvest of alfalfa seed. The yield was 14 bushels to the acre, which sold in the neighborhood at 80c. per lb. and netted him a return of $740 per acre.

In the large irrigation block of the Canadian Pacific Railway east of Calgary there are approximately 623,500 acres of irrigable land, and the amount in the Lethbridge district approximates 110,000 acres, making a total of 733,500 acres. Of this less than 20 per cent was in crop this year. On the basis of this year's average production on irrigated land this total area is capable of producing crops to the value of between thirty and thirty-five million dollars yearly with an average of over $40 per year for each acre of irrigated land.

With such examples as these of the fruits of irrigation it is little wonder that the farmers of the dry belts of Alberta and Saskatchewan are clamoring for extensions to the existing systems of irregation or the installation of new projects; or that the authorities should be devoting more time and attention to the furthering the schemes of irregation.

A new project is already under way in the south area of Alberta which will take in the land in the Raymond, Sterling and Magrath districts, and the commissioner of irrigation, with headquarters in Calgary, has recently returned from a reconnaisance trip in the Buffalo Lake country, where he has been gathering information as to the feasibility of another projected scheme. This provides for the diversion of the flood waters of the North Saskatchewan River to irrigate the lands lying to the east and south of Buffalo Lake, all the way to the area between Youngstown and Saskatoon. The scheme, in outline, is to tap the North Saskatchewan River, at, or near Rocky Mountain House, and by means of canals and ditches carry the water to lakes and depressions lying to the east, utilizing Buffalo Lake as the main reservoir.

The Alberta Provincial Government is also considering the establishment of an irrigation experimental farm at a point on the Saskatchewan River two miles north of Medicine Hat, covering a distance of twelve miles along the river adjoining the city. There are approximately 36,000 acres of land which can be brought under irrigation under this plan.

The finest feature of irrigated lands is that they can be trusted to produce at least good average crops every year, and indeed, so far from the quality of the land deteriorating, its tendency is to become more productive as the farmer learns by study and observation what quantities of water to use, and the best system of crop rotation.

Total Prohibition For Natives in Transvaal.

A Big Illicit Traffic

THOMAS SEARLE, president of the South African Temperance Alliance, contributes an interesting article on the prohibition movement in South Africa in the International Record. Affairs in South Africa, he states, have taken a decided turn in favor of prohibition. In recent years the evils associated with the drink traffic—especially in the wine and brandy farming districts, where the Dutch Reformed Church, on account of the support it derived from the industry, was inclined to stand aloof—have become so great that the church has been obliged to take action.

In the course of his article, Mr. Searle says: "During the last session of the South African Parliament, in 1918, two select committees were appointed by that body. One to enquire into the drunkenness prevalent in the western districts (the wine and brandy districts), and the other to enquire into the working of the Transvaal liquor laws. Under the Act of Union, by which, in 1910, the four provinces of Cape Colony, Orange Free State, Transvaal, and Natal, became the Union of South Africa, provision was made that until the Union Parliament passed consolidating laws the laws in force in each of the provinces should continue to be the law in those provinces. Thus it is that in each of these four provinces there is a different liquor law. In the Transvaal there are the gold mines, the chief labor of which is drawn from the native races, and there are about a quarter of a million of these people working there. The law of the province is total prohibition for all colored and native people. But a large illicit liquor traffic is carried on, and many of the poorer classes of Europeans, chiefly Dutch, have taken to this nefarious business. The result is that very drastic laws have been passed against the traffic, but so remunerative is it, that notwithstanding heavy fines and long terms of imprisonment, the traffic still flourishes.

"It was to inquire into this matter that the select committee referred to was appointed. The chairman of the committee was Mr. Rooth, a prominent supporter of the South African Political Party, which now holds the reins of government. This select committee reported, by a majority of one, that, as total prohibition for natives in the Transvaal had broken down (so it said), as was shown by the large number of convictions for illicit sale, it would be better for the Government itself to open canteens for the sale of European beer and wines of 'approved alcoholic strength' to these people.

"The state of affairs in the mines before the total prohibition law was enacted was terrible, and drunken orgies, and consequent crime, were a very great evil. It has been proved that natives, as a rule, cannot drink in moderation, and they very soon get a craving for strong spirituous liquors. Knowing this, and the terrible state of affairs that existed before total prohibition to these people was enacted, the report of the committee above referred to—known as the 'Rooth Committee'—thoroughly roused the temperance people, and a large section of other people not actively engaged in temperance work, and made them raise their voices in protest against the dangerous proposition. Public meetings were held throughout the length and breadth of the Union. The Dutch Reformed Church, too, took action—and practically unanimously at the meetings of the presbyteries passed resolutions condemning the proposal. Nothing had ever so consolidated the temperance forces.

"Notwithstanding these protests and the very clear expression of opinion by the public, Mr. Rooth in the session of Parliament, proposed that the recommendation of his committee should be adopted. The Ministry in power, themselves, were divided on the subject, and it was made known that the matter would not be made a party issue. Thus in all the political parties there were those in favor of, and those against the proposals. It soon became apparent, however, that the proposals, if the matter came to a vote, would not get the majority support, although the issue would be fairly close. The result is that the debate has been adjourned from time to time, and no vote is likely ever to be taken.

"The reports of the committee proving so conclusively the hopelessness of trying to deal with the liquor evil by merely partial restrictive measures, has convinced a large body of people outside of those usually known as temperance reformers of the necessity for total prohibition, and they are prepared to support it. The Dutch Reformed Church of the Transvaal has definitely declared that it looks upon total prohibition as the ideal at which they should aim, and they have appointed a committee to inquire into the effects of prohibition in America and elsewhere, and to act as a vigilance committee on behalf of the church. It is hoped that the synods of the church in other provinces will take similar action. When once the Dutch Reformed Church will unitedly and actively take up the cudgels on behalf of prohibition we may then consider the matter as practically settled."—Christian Science Monitor.

Mentioning the Unmentionable.

A millionaire jam manufacturer, married to an earl's daughter, was ashamed of the trade whereby he had piled up his fortune.

One day he wrote to a neighbor an impudent letter complaining of the way in which the other's servants were trespassing on his grounds.

The neighbor wrote back:

Dear Sir,—I am very sorry to hear that my servants have been poaching on your preserves.

"P.S.—Excuse my mentioning your preserves."—London Tit-Bits.

A Capital Tax.

The demand for a capital tax on excessive profits made during the war is growing every day. It was first put prominently forward in the London Daily Express, a paper which has recently been showing fresh enterprise and energy. The Times has blessed it, and Lord Rothermere, who during the past two years has been one of the great hidden powers in administration of affairs of state, is strongly calling for it. The old aristocracy would look on such a move with sympathy. Even those who criticize the old British nobility most cannot deny that in the war they gave and did not take. They gave their finer folk, the peers of England losing more members of their families in proportion to their numbers than any other section of the community, and they gave their wealth. To-day they are finding their old homes bought up by the new rich profiteers, the army contractors and the ship owners, by the little manufacturers grown suddenly wealthy and the like. The new men are trying to hustle the old off the scene and the old do not like it. The soldier back from the war, offered his old job at very little over the old pay, feels much the same.

One has to recognize, however, the possibility that the Government, hard pushed for money will decide to raise a capital levy not merely on war profits, but on all capital. The profiteers will probably try to arrange that. Germany raised her great capital levy just before the outbreak of war in 1914 to have funds in hand for the coming campaign. Britain will raise her capital levy to pay the bill.

Had to Keep Him.

It was a typical West of Ireland estate, and the Sassenach landlord was just driving his newly-arrived English guest through the lodge gates when a bullet zipped by his ear. "Good heavens!" exclaimed the guest. "What was that?" "Oh, only one of my men having a pot shot at me," replied the landlord. "I rather fancy it was my lodge keeper." "Great Scott!" again ejaculated the guest. "What will you do with the fellow—have him arrested for attempted murder?" "Do with him!" repeated the landlord. "Nothing, of course." "Not even discharge him?" persisted the guest. "Good gracious, no!" replied the landlord. "Why, I wouldn't lose the fellow for a fortune. He's one of the worst shots I've ever had on the estate."

Scarcity and Its Cause.

High prices are, in the first place, the result of scarcity. There is scarcity because for five years a large proportion of the manhood of the civilized world was withdrawn from production. War brings about a vast dissipation of wealth. Economically it destroys everything it touches. It creates only to destroy. Concurrently every belligerent country has expanded its credit enormously. The media of exchange have vastly increased, while commodities have decreased. There is a consequent inflation of prices.

War Criticisms Based on Hindsight

NOTWITHSTANDING the many naval engagements, the large number of ships that took part in these battles and the terrible havoc wrought to participants on both sides, the late war instead of definitely settling new naval types may be said to have merely unsettled old ones without destroying them and to have indicated new ones without thoroughly demonstrating their superiority. This was largely due to the fact that the British did not have a secure naval base in the North Sea at the beginning where the Grand Fleet could lie in safety, and where carefully planned expeditions could be initiated at once. The Germans may have been invulnerable in Heligoland, but it is doubtful, and this was the time to have found out. Similarly, both Admiral Jellicoe and Admiral von Tirpitz think that this was the time the Germans should have tried their luck, but the German Government was probably afraid of the moral effect of a defeat on the German people. The lesson of speedy attack that the Japanese taught at Port Arthur was lost by both sides.

The battle of the Dogger Bank taught little, as it was inconclusive because the Germans retreated, says a correspondent in the New York Herald. The battle of the Pacific taught nothing, as the German fleet was a little newer and superior in strength. The battle of the Falkland Islands taught nothing either. The Germans found the British in the bay and promptly fled. They were pursued by the British, and, as the latter had the greater speed, thicker armor and heavier guns, they were disposed of with apparently little effort. It is now the opinion of competent officers that the Germans should either have entered the bay or have awaited the British fleet outside. The German guns were of lesser calibre, but more rapid fire, and ample for penetrating their opponent's armor at short range, and the difference of ship speed would have been neutralized. The battle of Jutland was the most instructive, although it also was inconclusive. There will always be a controversy as to whether Admiral Jellicoe should have deployed to the right or the left in the afternoon, or tried to intercept the Germans in the morning. It appeared that the Germans possessed the best system of gun sighting and of searchlights and a better armor-piercing projectile; but the most important lesson taught was the necessity of thicker deck armor.

Submarines appear to have been very little used in sea battles, though early in the war they were quite efficient against single fighting ships, but it was only a matter of time before the particular conditions under which they were dangerous began to be understood, and during the latter part of the war they were seldom successful. The destroyer screens about the battleships were always ample for their protection. But for attacking commerce, Admiral Sims, in his article in World Work, holds that Germany might have won the war before the end of 1917 had it been able to keep up the increasing rate of sinking of April, May and June of that year. In due time the submarine danger to shipping was met in a large degree by troop and freight ships in groups and escorting them through the danger zone by destroyers.

Airplanes were not used in sea battles except to a small degree as scouts, but Admiral Jellicoe planned a much larger use for these machines had the war continued. The airplane moves so fast that it is difficult to hit with anti-aircraft guns; on the other hand, owing to its speed, it is not accurate in its bomb dropping. Airplanes cannot move slowly, because, being heavier than air, they must keep up their momentum to keep from falling. Accuracy in bomb-dropping, even with speed, can be much improved with suitable methods of sighting and experience. Admiral Fiske of the United States navy has avoided the difficulty in his torpedo plane, by which a locomotive torpedo is dropped into the water from an airplane, near a ship and has proved the most reliable attack from the air.

History shows that the fleets of fighting ships developed from the necessity of convoying merchant ships to protect them from the attack of pirates and freebooters. The attacker has now become the submarine and the defender the destroyer. The old fighting ships have developed into modern dreadnoughts and armored cruisers for sea battles and for blockading and bombarding coast cities. But coast defence guns and mines, assisted by submarines and aircraft, have rendered these blockades and bombardments impossible. In the sea battles of the future, the air fleets will likely take contact before the sea fleets, with the possibility that the winning air fleet will attack the enemy sea fleet, which in its turn will meet the menace from the air with a much greater number of anti-aircraft guns than have yet been mounted. Submarines will largely be met as at present, by minute hull subdivision and anti-submarine guns and depth bombs and by the supporting destroyers.

Pivot Spotlights Against the Law.

An increasing number of automobiles using pivot spotlights are seen every day, despite the fact that it is against the law. Many motorists who have their cars equipped with this accessory believe that so long as they do not use them as headlights they are not violating traffic regulations. Such is not the case, however, according to the Motor Vehicles Act, which states that no car shall be equipped with pivot, or movable, spotlights.

The Queen's Pilgrimage.

Holland, in governmental circles, is said to be more or less contemplating a royal progress of Queen Wilhelmina to visit her loving subjects in the Dutch East Indies. But the project is a little perplexing. Holland is a democratic sort of kingdom, far away from the East Indian possessions that she has ruled, with a short interruption in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth century, for about 300 years; and to the natives of the Dutch East Indies their overlord beside the Zuyder Zee stands for the pomp and glory of a long period of history. A simple, democratic sort of royal progress, such as would be natural to modern Dutch royalty, and comfortably within the appropriation that the modern Dutch Government would feel happily justified in making, would hardly meet the expectations of Java, Sumatra, the Celebes and the Moluccas; so at least it is felt by these who know the islands. Majesty, to be impressive, must come with pomp and circumstance; and a royal progress conducted with the oriental idea of magnificence is an expensive thing to stage-manage.

Woman Lieutenant.

Flora Sandes, the British nurse who became a sergeant-major in the Serbian army, has now accepted an honorary commission.

Miss Sandes attained her romantic position simply because during the great retreat of 1915 she saw no reason why she should not handle a rifle in one of the fierce rearguard actions among the snows. She handled her rifle so well that her admission to the regiment naturally followed. She was thrice wounded in action, and her promotion was rapid. And a gallant warrior she made.

I saw her once striding down a street in Salonika, her close-cropped head crowned with the rakish Serbian kepi. The workmanlike uniform, the jack-boots, and the riding switch completed the picture of the Mrs. Christian Davis of the Napoleonic war. Mrs. Davis, who fought with the Greys during the Peninsular War, cannot have made a more dashing soldier than Miss Sandes.

It Was His Mother-in-Law.

"Gentlemen of the jury," the eminent counsel wound up his eloquent oration, "I leave the rest to you. You are Britons; you come of a valorous race. As men, you would scorn to insult a woman—to ill-treat one—to say aught which is unbecoming or unmannerly to one of the gentler sex—"

He paused, with an angry glance at the back of the court, where there was a sudden disturbance. Then he shrank back as a stern-looking woman faced him coldly.

"And only this morning," she said loudly, "that man called me a meddlesome old cat!"

Ancient Indian Shrine in U. S.

An entire stone Brahmin temple, which served as a place of worship in India for hundreds of years, will be installed in the massive rotunda of Memorial Hall at Philadelphia. Every stone in the structure was boxed and shipped in a sailing vessel, which made the trip around Cape Horn. The temple is said to be of Dravidian architecture, which would mean that it was built prior to the tenth century, the stone is in such fine condition that it looks less than 300 years old.

SHARING OF PROFITS.

Capital and Labor Should Become Loyal Partners.

Speaking at Dockhead Workingmen's Association, Bermondsey, England, on lessons from the recent strike, Lord Morris, former Prime Minister of Newfoundland, said that it was a mistake to imagine that because Great Britain had overcome the present industrial difficulty, there would be an end to industrial strife. In his judgment, the labor war had only just begun, and it would be unwise to be lulled into a false security because matters at the moment had assumed normal conditions. At the same time, comfort might be gained from the fact that both sides in the recent industrial war felt they had won, and therefore no bad feeling had been left behind.

The recent strike was more than an ordinary labor trouble; it was the beginning of war, not merely on account of industrial unrest, but against the social and economic conditions generally affecting the working man. The strike had been made to appear as if it was a wilful war against the public; in fact it had been so described, an attempt to win rights by public menace, and an attempt, by threatening supplies, to hold up the public, and in that way increase wages. The methods adopted by some might give justification for such a conclusion, but in his judgment he believed the working men of the country did not intend to gain their objective point by any such policy.

As a body they were in the hands of the leaders of their unions, and they said in effect: "We follow these men blindly, we leave it to them to steer our course and we think rightly so, as all that we have gained in the past in wages, hours, improvement of surroundings, has been won for us by them at the point of the bayonet." When the working men of the country spoke like that they were not speaking of what occurred during the years of war, in which conditions had ceased to be normal, but they contrasted the condition of the workingman twenty-five years ago and his condition the year before the war.

"Even to-day," continued Lord Morris, "with all the unrest and all the agitation and bad feeling, if the whole question could be placed before a permanent, independent tribunal in which the laboring man had confidence, we would, I believe, see the ghost of industrial strife laid to rest forever. Once we can convince the laboring man that he is getting out of the concern in which he works all that it can legitimately bear, he will not alone be satisfied, but become a loyal partner in the work. All the evidence around by which the working man arrives at a conclusion on the point of his share is all of a character to convince him that he is not getting his share. He argues that in the production of wealth, labor is as essential as capital. Money and bare-armed labor are both required to produce wealth, whether it be on the land or sea, the factory or the mine, whether it be wheat or fish, manufactures or minerals, and consequently the division of profits should at least be equitable and not, as it too often happens, all the profit on one side and mere starvation wage on the other."

In conclusion, Lord Morris said that he did not despair of the future of the industrial world, but they, the Dockhead Working Men's Association, were handicapped by excessive taxation, arising out of the great war, and unless a policy not alone of national, but of individual retrenchment, were adopted they might find the words of their public men of to-day foretelling national bankruptcy realized in their own time.

HAD JOKE ON PATTI.

Not Welcomed as a Guest, But Got Free Publicity.

Stories are still being told about Adelina Patti, whose recent death recalled many brilliant musical memories. Here are some new and characteristic personal anecdotes concerning the most famous singer the world has ever known.

Unlike most opera singers, Patti rarely sang for charity. This and her habit of insisting on being paid for everything she did, by getting every dollar in advance, naturally gave her the reputation of being "hard," and there are many stories which reflect on that side of her character.

One time Armand Barili, the son of her half-brother, Ettore Barili, who was living in Philadelphia in rather straightened circumstances, wrote to her to send his child a Christmas present, adding that "even a faded flower would be appreciated if it came from her." Patti, it is said, took her relative at his word and at the next Christmas time a tiny silver box arrived in which was a small faded violet.

Patti rarely invited any one to visit her at her castle in Wales, but she often used to express the hope that she might meet her friends again while they were visiting in that out-of-the-way part of the world.

Marshall P. Wilder, the little deformed humorist, received such an "invitation"—they were fellow-passengers on an ocean liner—and he accordingly put in an appearance at her castle. He was invited to remain overnight, but it was made plain to him that he was expected to move along in the morning. In order to make the most of his brief visit, Wilder sat up all night writing letters on Patti's stationery to the dramatic editors of newspapers all over the world, informing them that he was visiting at Patti's castle. He reaped a lot of publicity as a result of it.

Although she lost her glorious voice in her later years, she made a few phonograph records of simple melodies like "Home, Sweet Home," and she used to entertain her guests at her castle by playing these records.

Madame Patti was a great eater. She was particularly fond of chicken, and it was not unusual for her to have chicken three times a day. She was not a high liver during the early years of her career, but after she retired from the stage and concert platform she indulged herself in all the good things of life. Her table at "Craig-y-Nois," where she had a huge retinue of servants, creaked and groaned with the fat of the land. One of her favorite maxims was, "True happiness comes from the inside."

MEXICO SAYS RELEASE OF CONSULAR AGENT CLEARS THE SITUATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Dec. 18.—The Mexican reply to the note sent by the United States Government regarding the imprisonment of Consular Agent Jenkins was received this morning. The official text is said to differ only slightly from that contained in despatches from Mexico City in which it was stated that his release had removed all motive for misunderstanding between the two governments. It is officialy intimated that at the first reading the communication had not made a favorable impression.

SCOTTISH EDUCATION ACT

Status of Gaelic in the Scottish Schools.

Light is being thrown upon the genesis of that remarkable amendment to Scottish Education Act, of last year, which gives to Gaelic a less ambiguous position than formerly in the schools of Gaelic-speaking Scotland. Prof. W. J. Watson, who holds the Celtic chair at Edinburgh University, has been reading a paper to the members of An Comunn Gaidhealach on the teaching of Gaelic in those schools. In the course of his address, Prof. Watson said that the official attitude to Gaelic in Scotland had been substantially the same ever since the Education Act of 1872 was passed.

The policy had been to ignore the claims of Gaelic to be taught as an ordinary school subject in Gaelic-speaking districts, and to have children whose mother tongue was Gaelic, and who thought in Gaelic and continued to think in Gaelic all through their lives, taught in precisely the same way as children whose language was English. The results of that policy had been that very many children had grown up illiterate in respect both of Gaelic and English. The smattering of English which they acquired in school gave them no power to appreciate English literature; their English was the stock phrase of the market and the shop.

The latest census report stated that 73 per cent. of the children of the Isles entered school without any knowledge of English. For the great majority of these Gaelic remained the language of thought and of ordinary intercourse, but they could not write a Gaelic letter, and if some of them were able to read the Bible in their native language that was not due to their school system but in spite of it. It became exceedingly clear to himself and others that there was little, if any, hope for Gaelic in their schools as long as the matter was a question of administration.

When, therefore, a new education bill for Scotland was brought forward, they saw that the time had come to secure for Gaelic a statutory position which would remove it from the chances of administrative apathy. The Gaelic people were appealed to, and gave their voice with considerable emphasis in a petition.

That expression of opinion backed by the strong demand of Presbyterian Churches and by An Comunn Gaidhealach, resulted in the unanimous adoption of an amendment to the bill making it compulsory on education authorities to provide facilities for the teaching of Gaelic in the Gaelic-speaking areas. They were entitled to assume that the new education authorities would discharge their statutory obligation in regard to Gaelic in an intelligent and sympathetic spirit, and they must in fairness recollect that they had to do with a difficult situation for which they were not responsible.

Denatured Alcohol Best Anti-Freeze.

That denatured alcohol is the most practical anti-freeze solution, is the opinion of Robert Gray, president of one of the big motor companies.

"The price of glycerine makes its use almost prohibitive. The amount of glycerine required to protect a three-gallon cooling system at zero would cost $6.45.

"For a temperature of 13 deg. F., a three-gallon cooling system requires about 2½ quarts of alcohol. For zero, the same system requires one gallon of alcohol; 10 degrees below, 1¼ gallons, 20 degrees below, about 1¼ gallons, and 35 degrees below requires 1½ gallons.

"These solutions should not be followed too accurately, for the alcohol evaporates more or less all the time, so that if after a few weeks the temperature should suddenly drop to the limit of resistance, the radiator would probably freeze. If you would preclude all possibility of frozen or cracked tubes, add half water and half alcohol when replenishing the system."

What Is a Poltergeist.

The kind of spirit which is supposed to trouble the peace of a household is known as a Poltergeist to experts in occultism. Mediaeval witchcraft literature is full of accounts of this domestic bogey's manifestations. The theory was, and is, that the Poltergeist begins throwing crocks and fire-irons about when annoyed by rebuilding operations. It is thought to be a domesticated variety of the "elemental" or earthspirit which appears in the vicinity of extensive excavations, assuming the aspect of a very tall, lean man, with a small head, all eyes, and pointed chin.

Placing the Blame.

A well-known novelist was cornered at an afternoon party by an inquisitive lady.

"Are you a bachelor from choice?" she asked severely.

"Yes!" came the prompt answer.

"But isn't that—er—rather ungracious and ungallant?" protested she.

"You must ask the ladies," he suggested gently; "it was their choice, not mine."

Whitby Jet Again.

A local industry has picked up in Whitby, "quaint little old-world town," as a traveller calls it, on the east coast of England. Whitby makes ornaments of jet, and before the war "Whitby jet" was the word of excellence. But the war reduced and practically eliminated the demand for jet ornaments, mining for the petrified wood, which looks like a poor quality of coal until the jet worker has cut and polished it, practically ceased; and the younger men who had been working in the red-tiled stone houses of Whitby laid down their tools and went to the trenches. Whitby was left a town of men, trained to a temporarily useless craft, with one absorbing local topic of conversation, the discovery that the makers of imitation jet who had got into the town and had come near to doing lasting injury to its reputation had been incidentally financed by German money. But now the demand for jet is greater than Whitby can produce. Few of the younger men are coming back, for some cannot and others are finding the world wide and attractive outside of Whitby, and the older men have resumed their tools, and are trying both to meet the demand and restore the town to its old-time reputation.

BENNY LEONARD REIGNS SUPREME AT TOP OF LIGHTWEIGHT DIVISION

Joe Benjamin Only Other of His Clan to Show Much Form and He is Uunder Same Management—Tendler Will Not Go Over the 133 Pound Mark.

Whether Lightweight Champion Benny Leonard is the best man that has held that title is merely a matter of opinion, since there is no way of proving it, but certain it is that no other title holder ever dominated the situation as Leonard does at the present time.

When Welsh held the title there were a dozen other men, worthy of a match with him, and several of them beat him in no decision affairs. Ritchie had plenty of opponents who could extend him to the limit. So did Wolgast, who was twice beaten by Knockout Brown in no decision bouts. Nelson had Wolgast, Gans, Britt, Moran, Herrera and Hyland for opponents and plenty of other good ones as well.

Joe Gans was the nearest to Leonard in the matter of lack of opponents, so that he was very often forced to go out of his class to get action. But even Gans had several lightweight opponents who could make him go at top speed. Among them were Frank Erne, Dal Hawkins, "Elbows" McFadden, Willie Fitzgerald and Jack Blackburn.

Frank Erne had Gans, Lavigne, McGovern, Dixon, McFadden, McPartland and many others. Lavigne had Walcott, who trained down and met him at the lightweight limit. Erne, McFadden, Hawkins, Flaherty and others of that caliber. McAuliffe, although he retired unbeaten according to the records, had his Young Griffo and one or two others who are said to have beaten him, although they did not get the official decision.

Leonard, for his part, is practically without opposition. He outclasses the rest of the lightweights so far that he never has been called upon to defend his title in a regular championship match. So far as can be seen, he is without a weakness. In boxing skill he compares with the best in ring history, and in hitting ability he is scarcely inferior to Gans, who topped them all at that department of the game. At one time it was suspected that Leonard would lose form under punishment, but as he never has to take punishment that is a minor matter. Besides, he probably has outgrown the fault.

Benjamin Shows Promise.

At the present time there are only half a dozen good lightweights. They are Leonard, Benjamin, Tendler, Dundee, Jackson and Welling.

Just now Joe Benjamin is the most prominent among the contenders, partly because he is a new development, but also because he has demonstrated first class form. Benjamin has the ideal build for a fighting man. He is tall and rangy for his weight, and he possesses a well developed back and shoulders.

Benjamin has the knack of hitting short, snappy blows that carry knockout force. Both hands are equally good, and he has a nimble pair of legs that he uses to good advantage. Benjamin, in fact, resembles Leonard a great deal in action. There is no chance of a match between the two at present, as Benjamin is under the same management as the champion, who is coaching him.

Benjamin is being groomed to take over the lightweight title as soon as Leonard either retires or steps into the welter class. The Californian's rise has been rapid, a good indication that he is a natural fighting machine. A few months ago he was a four-rounder on the Pacific coast and was unheard of in the east until Leonard made a trip to California.

Benjamin was one of Leonard's opponents, and he made such a good showing that Billy Gibson saw at once that the youngster was bound to cut a big figure in the lightweight division. Since arriving in the east Benjamin has decisively outpointed Joe Welling and stopped Tommy Tuohey, and now is matched with Willie Jackson.

Before Benjamin made his appearance Lew Tendler, the Quaker lightweight, was generally regarded as Leonard's most probable successor. Tendler is one of the few good lightweights that Leonard has not met in the ring. Many promoters have tried to sign them for a battle, but Tendler always refused to accept because Leonard refused to make 133 pounds, ringside.

Tendler is a southpaw who stands with a wrong hand and wrong foot foremost. He is easily the cleverest of all the men of that style that have come to the front in years, although that is not saying much, since left-handers for some reason or other seldom are anything but the crudest kind of sluggers.

Tendler is not merely a left hand swinger like Knockout Brown and Al McCoy, the two most prominent men of his type. The Quaker uses his right hand with as much skill as any high class boxer does his left. Tendler probably owes most of his success to his awkward way of standing. He is not a great fighter, and it is not likely that he ever will win the title. His chief fault is inability to take punishment.

Opening of Panama Canal.

In 1914, on August 15, the Panama canal was formally opened to the world. The canal had been nine years in building. The total cost of construction, exclusive of fortifications, civil government and payments to the republic of Panama, was approximately $357,000,000. The first passage after the formal opening of the canal was made by the steamship Ancon, Colonel Goethals, governor of the canal zone, was on board. The passage from Cristobal to Balboa was accomplished in nine hours.

Professional Enemies of Crocodile.

There are men whose business it is to catch crocodiles and who earn their living by that means. And whenever a human being has fallen a victim a professional crocodile catcher is asked to help to destroy the murderer, and a large reward offered him. The majority of natives will not interfere with the reptiles, or take any part in their capture, probably fearing if they do anything of the kind they themselves may some time or other suffer for it by being attacked by a crocodile.

ENGLISH ARE REAL SQUARE SPORTSMEN

YANKS ARE SO PARTIZAN THEY CAN'T BELIEVE OTHERS DO THINGS RIGHT

Even the veteran sport writers of the United States, who ought to know better, are showing an utter lack of knowledge of boxing affairs in England. Joe Vila, of the New York Sun, one of the oldest of the Yankee writers, urges Jack Dempsey to hold out for an American battleground for his bout with Georges Carpentier, because "he would have to knock out the Frenchman in order to get a decision from an English or French referee." He declares that if Carpentier managed to go the full distance with the world's title-holder, the decision would be given against Dempsey.

The attitude of the Yankees—writers and all—towards English sportsmen is absolutely shameful. There isn't a squarer people on the face of the earth than old countrymen. And that's a lot more than can be said about the Yanks. United States writers see through local glasses only, and just because they are so partizan they believe that others are equally as bad. It's high time that these "wise fellows" learned that they are the laughing-stock of the sporting world. There isn't a doubt in the minds of sportsmen who know anything at all about sporting events conducted in England that the spirit of fair play is much more evident than in Uncle Sam's country. Dempsey would get a far better chance in the National Sporting club, London, England, or from any other English organization than Carpentier would in America. The English policy always has been "May the best man win," be he English, American, Swede or colored.

It's one thing that England can be proud of. And we Canadians ought to emulate the English example.

The great ovation given Carpentier when he knocked out Joe Beckett, the English heavyweight hope, was conclusive proof that the English folks are not biased. Certainly they wanted to see Beckett do well—win the world's honors, if possible—but they didn't allow their feeling to prevent them from recognizing Carpentier's ability.

Oh, those chesty, partizan Yanks! They make sportsmen hot under the collar.

Whither We Are Flying.

The point in space toward which the sun with its planets is voyaging at the rate of a million miles a day now lies directly overhead early in the evening. The exact location of this point has not been finally determined, but it lies somewhere in the neighborhood of the brilliant star Vega. Do you feel that you are shooting upward, head first, about 25 times as fast as a cannonball?

Leonardo's Handwriting.

In one account of the life of Leonardo da Vinci we read a curious story about the great man's handwriting. It seems that it resembled characters in Hebrew or Arabic, for he used his left hand and wrote from right to left of the page, instead of from left to right, as we do today. One of Da Vinci's letters could, therefore, only be read by holding it up before a mirror.

Belgian Patriotism Now Is Penalized

AMONG the many queer and unjust consequences of war conditions, and trading rules now, that of the Belgian manufacturer and merchant who refused to assist the Germans is very pitiable. The manufacturer who refused to work for the Germans, in their four years of occupation, saw his factory destroyed and his machinery carried off to Germany. Nothing remains but what Germany owes him by way of reparation, and Germany is in too precarious a condition at present to give him much assurance respecting reparation. Under the Peace Treaty, all machinery and supplies taken from Belgium and France must be restored, but even the work of collecting part of this has been slow and difficult, and it may be several years before the restoration can be called fairly complete. So the Belgian manufacturer must wait until there is an indemnity from Germany before he can open his factory or mill. His neighbor, who made soap, glycerine, and other materials used in the manufacture of explosives, and gave them to the Germans, has plenty of money and can buy immediately from the British manufacturer, who demands cash down, or notes almost backed by gold.

The semi-traitors have the advantage, as so often happens. The Belgian workingmen who consented to labor for the Germans got good food, good pay, and were well treated. They were protected from loss or injury, and to-day—though despised by their neighbors—form the most prosperous section of the Belgian people. The patriots suffered then severely, but what is the more strange, they are still suffering most, even from their friends of the allied countries. During the war Germans had to be used to run the Belgian railways because Belgian railwaymen refused to give this service. These railwaymen were denied food, imprisoned on the slightest pretext, sometimes deported to Germany, and otherwise made to pay dearly for their patriotism. Now, when Belgium is endeavoring to get back into business harness again, they find that their livelihood is made precarious by the niggardliness of allied business men refusing to help re-create Belgian industry and traffic except on a cash basis. Throughout all Belgium the working classes hate the German, and will not buy German goods if it can be helped, though German goods are much cheaper. They make their purchases in England whenever possible, because England is the only allied and European source of manufactures that can be imported.

Recently it has been discovered that some British dealers have not been above buying cheap German wares and trying to palm them off on the Belgians. Recently some umbrellas were purchased by Belgian importers in England at $5 a piece. On examining them, the Belgian buyer found they were of German make, and knew the maker. He enquired in Germany regarding the price of these umbrellas, and found it was 15 marks, at the normal rate of exchange, or only six marks at the actual rate. That is, the British dealer was trying to get $5 for the identical article that could be bought from the German direct for about $1.50.

To make good losses on machinery taken by the Germans, the British manufacturer is asking for one-third cash on giving of the order, and two-thirds on delivery. This is utterly impossible to many manufacturers whose general credit has always been of the soundest. The British Government has tried to help Belgium by advances to cover supplies forwarded, by leaving British money on deposit in Belgian banks in order that exchange may not be made worse by withdrawal of it, and by general co-operation. But it has not done for Belgium, apparently, what it has done for many of the Baltic peoples, providing a large sum to pay for orders given by these peoples when the orders are accompanied by good securities. These credits have enabled the placing of a lot of special business with British industry, yet the Belgian manufatcurer who wants to get back on his own productive footing does not get any special help. If business is business, of course, the British would prefer to keep the European markets dependent on them as much as possible. Before the war, Belgian competition was a severe thorn in the flesh of British manufacturing. But even if it is better business not to assist the Belgian people to get back quickly to a productive footing—so that British industry can get the cream of the after war market—the injustice of so heavily penalising the patriotism of the anti-German Belgians is manifest. They are entitled to prompt help, insofar as it can be given, not to treatment worthy of a Bolshevik people.

Watering House Plants.

Plants should be watered with a spray, not with a cup or a glass. Those that can be moved should be placed where the water will not damage carpets or floors; those that cannot—such as large ferns or palms—should have something spread on the floor beneath them to catch the water as it drips. The water must be sprayed from above so that all the leaves receive it; this carries off the dust and is the only natural way for a plant to receive water.

An Indispensable.

Some years ago, in a certain flagship, the commander had occasion to find fault with the admiral's cook, and awarded him three days of the punishment known at that period as Ten A. The admiral heard of the affair, and sent for the commander on the quarterdeck. "What do you mean by it?" stormed the incensed admiral. "Please to understand that I can get a hundred commanders like you, but only one cook like him!"

Absconding Bank Clerk Spent Over $10,000 In Three Months

Had $2 Left Out of Money Stolen From Employers When He Finally Fell Into Hands of Police.

New York, Dec. 19.—When Guillermo Ehrman, nineteen years old, formerly a registered mail clerk in the National City Bank, turned out his pocket before William J. Leahy, Second Deputy Commissioner of Police, he had $2. Ehrman had spent $10,998 in a ninety days in a tour that began at Atlantic City on August 16.

Ehrman was arrested by August Mayor and Grover C. Brown, of Commissioner Leahy's financial district squad at Cook's Hotel Eighth avenue and Thirty-ninth street, on an warrant charging grand larceny in stealing two registered mail packages, one of which contained $10,000 and the other $1,000 in currency from the National City Bank. After examination by Commissioner Leahy it was announced that Ehrman had signed a statement admitting the theft, and telling in detail the steps which led from cheap "movies" and their fiction stories of the glamour of Broadway to real Broadway and its "gold diggers."

Ehrman was born in Panama, and was brought by his family to New York several years ago. On December 10, 1918, he obtained employment at the National City Bank. At that time he lived with his mother in West Seventy-fourth street. Ehrman spent his evenings at motion picture theatres, according to the story he told detectives, and the stories of the Great White Way and its lure as told in the flickering flashes tempted him to see Broadway himself.

He began in a modest fashion with the pocket money he could spare from his salary and met "Helen" and "Peggy," whose last names the police refuse to divulge. They believe they may recover some of the money from "Helen" because Ehrman naively told the detectives that he believes Helen had switched $1 bills for $100 bills in his bankroll, and had "nicked" him for about $5,000.

A registered package arrived at the bank August 4, and Ehrman signed for it. He put it in his pocket, it was said, and when he was sent out of the bank on errands in the financial district, examined the contents in No. 61 Wall street; $10,000 in bills, denominations of $10, $20 and $100 tumbled out of the wrapping. The enormity of his first theft stunned the clerk for a moment, it was said, but he resolutely tucked the money back in his pocket and returned to the bank. There the statement said, he made a false entry in the book of registered packages received by entering another package twice.

Ehrman, it is said, hid the money in the padding of a sofa at his home that night. For a week he continued his modest entertainment of "Helen" and "Peggy," taking only a few dollars from the bundle of currency each night. On August 16 he took another registered package, it was said, but it contained only $1,000. Then, according to his story to detectives, he communicated with "Helen" and "Peggy" and a man met them at the Pennsylvania station and bought tickets for Atlantic City.

He had placed the bundle of money in his trunk, he had said, but when the baggage department informed him he could obtain insurance of only $400 on one trunk, no matter what its contents, he took the currency out and gave it to "Helen," who carried it in her handbag.

The four stopped in Atlantic City ten days. There, Ehrman told detectives, they enjoyed everything money could buy. He noticed, however, when they returned to New York, and "Helen" and "Peggy" had gone presumably to their apartment in Cathedral parkway, that where there had been $10, $20 and $100 bills there were there a lot of $1 and $2 bills. The package was just as fat, but not nearly so valuable, Ehrman said.

Ehrman said he then began travelling by himself, and went to Toronto, Montreal and other cities. His mother removed from Seventy-fourth street and detectives began to watch her mail. They noticed several letters with a return card of Cook's Hotel on them, although they were mailed at distant points. The letters were signed "William G. Thompson." A watch was put on Cook's Hotel, and when Ehrman registered as Thompson yesterday he was placed under arrest.

Ehrman resigned at the National City Bank after taking the second package, telling the bank that he wanted a vacation. It was not until October that the losses were traced and the false entries discovered. Alfred Tyrill, manager of the National Surety Company, who had insured the National City bank against losses consulted with Richard C. Murphy, Assistant District Attorney, and the October Grand Jury returned an indictment and a warrant was issued on October 9.

NO MILLIONS EARNED BY CANTEEN PROFITS

OFFICIALS AT OTTAWA BRAND AS FAIRY TALE REPORT FROM CAPITAL

Ottawa, Dec. 19.—An unqualified denial of a newspaper item to the effect that the sum of $35,000,000 had been brought to Canada as this country's share in the profits of the British Expeditionary Force Canteen system, was given high officials of both the Militia Department and the Department of Overseas Military Forces of Canada. Officials of the latter department characterized the article as a "fairy tale," and said that "Evidently some one in Ottawa was having a joke at the expense of the public."

Although no definite statement is forthcoming as to what Canada will receive as her proportion of the profits of the British Canteen System, it is understood that the amount will be but a small fraction of that mentioned in the story. It is also believed that no allocation has yet been made of these funds and that they are still under the control of the Navy and Army Canteen Board.

LOCAL COUNCIL WOMEN ENDORSE MRS. MORRIS FOR SCHOOL BOARD

Every Member is Now Ready to Support Her at the Polls—Routine Business Transacted at Regular Meeting Yesterday.

The regular monthly meeting of the Local Council of Women was held on Thursday, Dec. 18th, in the Y.W.C.A., at 3.30 p.m., the president, Mrs. Harstone, in the chair.

Routine business was covered, including reports of committees, and correspondence.

An outline of the proposed baby welfare week was received from the Provincial Bureau of Child Welfare. Details are not yet complete, nor is the date set.

Miss Halton reported that the matter of films in the schools for educational purposes was under debate by the Department of Publicity of the Bureau of Trade and Commerce.

Mrs. Harstone referred briefly to the first meeting of the Provincial Executive Committee of the National Council of Women. This committee deals with matters that are purely provincial, and only such provincial questions as have previously been endorsed by the L.C.W.

It was announced that the Allen Theatre would show a special film for children after the New Year and support of this was urged.

Mrs. Mowat reported for the Playgrounds Committee of the L.C.W., the result of the paper and rag collection in October, and asked that the hearty thanks of the L.C.W. be tendered to the Turnbull Co., Cressman's, Richard Hall & Son, and the Bonner-Worth, for substantial donations of baled paper. A resolution to this effect was unanimously carried, also one thanking Mrs. Mowat and Mrs. Morris for strenuous work in this semi-annual collection of paper and rags.

A resolution was received from the Home and School Association of Queen Mary's School asking that the L.C.W. re-affirm its stand on the principle of women on the School Board, and also endorse the woman candidate standing.

Mrs. Medd, president of Queen Mary's Home and School Association, spoke to the motion. It was made clear that in endorsing a woman candidate for the Board of Education the members are not entering politics. The woman school trustee movement is in the interest of women and children. The L.C.W. reaffirmed its belief in the usefulness of women on Boards of Education, and endorsed Mrs. Morris, regretting that, so far, a second woman candidate had not been found.

The president pointed out that, having endorsed Mrs. Moris, the vote and influence of the members should be used in her support.

Progress in the Baby Clinic was reported, and accomplishment expected early in the New Year.

COMING YEAR WILL SEE MANY CHANGES

SEVERAL MEMBERS OF MUNICIPAL COUNCIL IN THIS DISTRICT RETIRING

Millbrook, Dec. 19.— Monday was the closing meeting day for Municipal Councils the usual grist of accounts and school orders being the chief business.

Reeves Henderson of Cavan and Burnham of Millbrook are stepping down and out and expressed the feeling and appreciative terms to their Councils their farewell sentiments. Reeve Greer, of South Monaghan, who is also retiring, speeded his parting co-workers in a more substantial manner. So the decks are clean for another contest. Deputy Reeve Baptie will come up for reeve in Cavan and Councillor J. L. McCamus for deputy. Mr. Fred Clarke has decided to quit, as he cannot leave home for the Counties' Council work, but may be prevailed upon to remain in the Council. Councillor Wood is out for Reeve in Millbrook. These men are each and all worthy of promotion both from experience in the Council, and from ability to carry on. The money reward for municipal service is nothing but the advancement that the capable public servant seeks or deserves is natural and worthy of recognition. We have heard nothing definite from Manvers. Monday, December 29th is nominating day and in the meantime the public will have time to consider the situation. There is unrest and an effort being made by the surface element to disturb all public machinery, taxes are high and living also, yet the township rate in Cavan is lower than it has been for years, even before the war. The duty is that 1920 shall have for Municipal Councils as far as possible the best men, broad minded men, men who will not shrink to forget self interests and strive to pilot their municipalities through the rapids of socialistic tendencies and disrupting teachings until the stiller waters of reconstruction are reached.

VETERANS OF FENIAN RAID

ENJOYABLE REUNION OF THE MILITARY HEROES OF THAT PERIOD HELD LAST NIGHT

A very enjoyable reunion of the old men of '66 was held in the armories last evening.

Out of a membership of over seventy some, twelve or fourteen is all that are able to answer the roll today, as the ranks get depleted from year to year. The good fellowship that has always been manifested grows stronger with the few who are left and these reunions of the old comrades of '66 are very much enjoyed.

The members present were: Col J. W. Milles, president; R. Tive, J D. Collins, H. Rush, W. C. Bourn, J. McComb, P. Thompson, G. Stenton and R. Sanderson.

The following gentlemen were guests of the evening: Rev. Canon (Maj.) Davidson, Col. Young, Mr Everett of the G.W.V.A., and Mr. F. Pratt. The veterans feel greatly indebted to those gentlemen who entertained them during the evening with speech and song.

The veterans and their guests formed a happy group around the board and did justice to the good things provided by Mr. T. Hooper. Col Miller was in his usual happy mood and gave an excellent address. Smokes and social chats were indulged in.

The singing of the National Anthem brought to a close one of the many reunions enjoyed by the veterans of '66.

COAL CONSERVATION.

Economical Use of Bituminous Coal, Slack and Colliery Waste.

The benefits of technical research are being once more illustrated in England, where a committee appointed by the Institute of Petroleum Technologists has been investigating methods for the economical use of bituminous coals, slack, colliery waste, etc., more particularly with reference to the production of byproducts and the generation of power. The technical advisers of the committee have carefully studied various types of retorts and producers, the supply of retortable material the output of the collieries, the possibility of using seams now unworked, the market for products, etc., etc., and have assembled an immense amount of valuable data.

A company has now been formed with a capital of $500,000, to produce oil from bituminous coal, to prepare fuel—e.g., gas, coke and briquettes—for domestic and industrial purposes, and to extract various byproducts in the process of manufacture. These will probably include ammonium sulphate or crude ammonia, and coal tar with its derivatives, which are so important in the manufacture of aniline dyes and numerous drugs and explosives.

A site for an experimental research station has been acquired in the centre of the Midland coalfield, with good railway connections and adjacent to three shafts which are now bringing up a true cannel, an inferior cannel, and a soft caking coal. It is not only intended to test material for the particular company concerned, but to co-operate with colliery owners in any part of the world in promoting more efficient utilization of coal resources. The company is receiving no Government assistance, nor is it in any way interested in any particular type of retort or process.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Queen Elizabeth's Ring.

Every day in these changeful times the news comes of new men succeeding to old acres, and, coincidentally, the stream of old art treasures flows into the market. The demands of the death duties and the mandates of taxation are invaluable. Shortly the Earl of Home's collections of old silver furniture and objects d'art, including Queen Elizabeth's mother-o'-pearl ring (with enameled portrait of herself and her mother, Anne Boleyn, in the bezel of it), will be sold at Christie's; the Scottish castles of Bothwell and Douglas, and of the Hirsel at Coldstream having been stripped of these noble heirlooms. The Home family first received their grant of lands from William the Lion before 1214. The first Lord was Ambassador to England in Henry VI.'s time. The third led the van at Flodden, and afterwards embraced the English interest. The fifth fought Bothwell and protected James I. in his youth, coming with that monarch to England in 1603 as a Privy Councillor, and being created an earl in 1605.

Rich and rare as the Home silver trophies will prove to be, popular interest will be centred in Queen Elizabeth's ring, which, it is highly probable, entered the family possession through James I.'s henchman and protector, the first earl. This mother-o'-pearl hoop is overlaid on the shoulders with bands of gold set with rubies. The gold bezel has six table diamonds forming the initial E, with a pearl and rubies. This bezel opens, and shows minutely chased and enameled portraits of the Queen and her ill-fated mother. A diamond and ruby mark their costumes. On the inner side of the loop is a tiny gold plaque, delicately enameled with Queen Elizabeth's badge—a phoenix—and with a crown in translucent colors. The chasing of the portraits was probably executed by that Italian artist who worked the historic ring which the Queen gave to the unfortunate Earl of Essex.

To Clean Diamonds.

Diamond dust is a fine dust produced from cutting diamonds. It is extensively used by jewelers, chiefly for cleaning diamonds. It may be procured in any jewelry store, together with instructions for its use. Another quite satisfactory way to clean diamonds is to make a lather of soap, add a little ammonia and apply this cleansing preparation to the stones with a tooth brush.

Territory Taken From Spain.

At the close of the war with Spain the American government obtained possession of Porto Rico, Guam and the Philippines, agreeing to pay Spain $20,000,000 and give Spanish ships special trading privileges in the Philippines for ten years. Neither statehood nor citizenship was promised to any of the islands taken over and they are governed as territorial possessions.

The Crow Family.

The crow family is placed by ornithologists at the head of the bird world as being more highly organized than any other. Linnaeus gave the post of honor to the eagles, because of their kingly quality of rapacity, but two great authorities, Professor Parker and Professor Newton, agreed in assigning the highest place to the corvidae.

"Poor Man's Weather Glass."

The figures of which the leaves of the horse-chestnut are made up keep flat and fanlike so long as the fine weather is likely to continue. With the coming of rain, however, they droop, as if to offer less resistance to the weather. The scarlet pimpernel is known in England as the poor man's weather-glass, and opens its flowers only when the weather is fair.

Sought Trees for Protection.

Tree-dwellers are found among savages in various parts of the world. According to the scientists the first habitations of mankind were in the trees as the most adequate protection against the many enemies of the early type of man. It was only in the later period of man's evolution that he was strong enough to hold his own on the ground.

OBITUARY

CHARLES McNEILL

The death of Mr. Charles McNeil, at the age of seventy-two years, removes one of the most prominent men of the township of Cavan, and in fact of the United Counties. Deceased was born in the township, the old homestead being still occupied by his brother, Mr. John McNeil on the 7th. Concession, and lived there until some two years ago when he and his now bereaved widow removed to Millbrook. Successful in his affair on the farm, the departed citizen was just as fortunate in all his public offices. Twelve years ago, in December 1907, he laid aside the Warden's gown and vacated the chair of office in the Counties' Council chambers, Cobourg, with all the dignity and unsullied reputation that ever distinguished an occupant of any office under the gift of his fellowmen or his King. He served well municipally and equally wise and disinterested as President of the Agricultural Society, and also of the Liberal-Conservative Association. Mr. McNeil's schooling was mostly in the sterner class room of the field and flock, but his clear and retentive mind added to his activity and ambition made him a self-made man indeed yet one who was in all things true to his home and country, and may we further and faithful to his God and King. About ten years ago he was united in mariage to Miss Noble of Cobourg and their married life has been happy indeed, although the shadow of the impending break has darkened Mrs. McNeil's pathway for some months, and every sympathy will be tendered her by all.

There was a large family, all of whom have crossed beyond, except one brother, John, and a sister, Mrs. Fraser, of Whitewood, Man., The brothers were all Saul's in stature, seven of them it is said weighing in their prime over a ton. Charles McNeil has gone, but his fine sonorous voice, his excellent example and worthe citizenship cannot be obliterated while memory lasts or tongues continue to voice their approbations.

Beautiful and massive wreaths were placed on the casket by the bereaved widow, Mr. John McNeil and family, the Agricultural Society, Cavan Council and the Masonic Lodge.

The funeral was under the direction of J. B. Hall Lodge A.F. & A.M to which he was affiliated.

A GIFT OF FURNITURE! WHAT COULD BE MORE PRACTICAL?

A graceful gift for a young woman is a Writing Desk. The housewife will be glad of a Tea Wagon or Sewing Table. Any man who smokes will be glad of a Smoker's Stand; anybody who reads for a Bookcase.

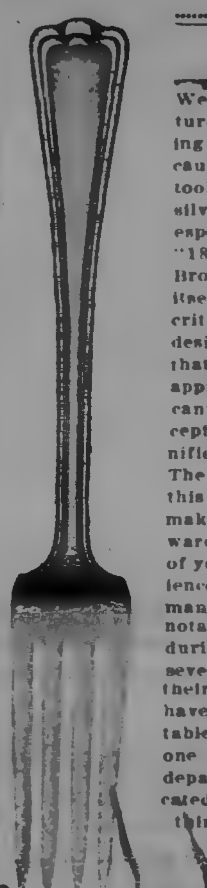
But the supreme furniture gift, the kind one gives to one's father or mother is a great big Easy Chair to soften the effect of advancing years.

There is something very natural and real and beautiful in giving a gift of that kind. It is the acting out of the finest promptings of nature.

Rockers, Easy Chairs and such are being much given this Christmas and that is something very good to see.

It would be hard to see such another assortment of this class of furniture as we have. At least there is none hereabout. The fact is, furniture is a fine thing to give and this is surely the place to come for it—a fact which people seem to realize.

"1847 ROGERS BROS." SILVERWARE



We cannot picture anyone being ill-pleased because their gift took the form of silverware and especially if it is "1847 Rogers Bros." The plate itself is above criticism and the designs are such that anyone who appreciates art cannot take exception the dignified patterns. The efficiency of this company in making silverware is the result of years of experience and on many of the most notable occasions during the last seventy years their products have graced the tables. This is one of our new departments located on the third floor.

WOMEN FROM FARM AND CITY WILL UNITE TO FIGHT HIGH COST OF LIVIN

Lady Members of U. F. O. and National Council of Wome Form an Alliance---Will Probe Cost of Products of Farm

Toronto, Dec 19.—The first rung in the ladder the H. C. of L. was mounted by the co-operation of the U.F.W.O., now convening in Toronto and the National Council of Women. These two organizations have expressed their keennesses to get together in eliminating the present "misunderstandings" now existing between the farm and city folk on the high cost of living. Other important items of the session were discussed in many resolutions, which were eventually passed. Most important of these was one dealing with the natuarlization of all women domiciled in Canada. The U.F.W.O. request that the laws be changed so that any woman, by personal application may become a naturalized citizen of Canada. Mrs. George Brodie was elected president for the coming year.

Speaking of the resolution Mrs. W. H. Becker, representative of the National Council of Women, also the Local Council of Women, said: "We have a Provincial committee of the National Council of which Dr. A. Stowe Gullen is president. I think it would be in order for this question to be taken up by the local as well as the Provincial body. It might be well for this body to get in shape a list of country prices and present them at the meeting of the Council to be held the third Tuesday in January. We may be able to do something definite then. We should find out what difference there is in the prices of sugar, butter, eggs etc., and find out what profit is being made on food from the time it leaves the producer until it reaches the consumer." I am sure all of us realize that at the present exorbitant price of milk our children as well as the men and women in our cities are not getting as much as they need. I feel this body can do a great deal in uniting the National Council with you, if something can be done to reduce the H. C. of L. If you accomplish nothing else you will justify your existence."

Miss E. Griesback, secretary; "What do you pay for a quart of milk in the city"

"I paid 16 cents a quart this morning," replied a voice from the audience.

Milk at 8 Cents a Quart

Miss Griesback: "My nephew sells milk in Collingwood at eight cents a quart. He raises his own cattle, feeds and cares for them and says he makes a fair profit."

Mrs. Alex. Wallace, Simcoe: "Ladies I don't think this is fair. We are slamming the middlemen, and they must have a living. They are in their place and there honestly."

Mrs. Wm. Glenn, of Henshall: "We would be glad to have the middlemen come to the farm to make their living. At the present time half the farmers in the country are overworked through lack of labour. We will give them all the cordial welcome and then reduce the cost of food by having it go direct from the producer to the consumer."

It was decided by the convention to meet with the local as well as Provincial body as early as possible in the New Year.

Mrs E. A. Kantel, president of the new women's organization, "The Daughters of Canada," spoke for the society and asked for the co-operation of the farm women.

Resolutions were brought forward and passed. They included, "That women domiciled in Canada be given personal naturalization without regard to the nationality of the father or mother. "When a Canadian woman maries a foreigner she is called a foreigner, and vice versa. This, of course, should not be," said one woman in the discussion which followed.

Another resolution asked for extension of co-operative or [illegible] munity work for the relief of [illegible] domestic help situation and for [illegible] help in particular. "This is the [illegible] [illegible] overwork [illegible] the farm," said one of the [illegible] in comment.

Expressions of appreciation [illegible] given Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary [illegible] the U. F. O., for the splendid [illegible] rendered and the following [illegible] tion was passed unanimously: "Th[illegible] the convention forward to the U.F.[illegible] convention the suggestion that M[illegible] and Mrs. Morrison be granted a [illegible] of absence in the coming year for [illegible] month or longer to take a [illegible] needed rest, and that the joint [illegible] ciations furnish the funds for [illegible] same."

"The children of this country should be taught the pioneer history of our country," said Mrs. H. L. Laws, preliminary to a [illegible] concerning the elimination of [illegible] in the entrance examination subjects, and that graded readers in [illegible] tory and geography be prepared [illegible] use in elementary schools in [illegible] the pioneer history of the country be given due prominence. This [illegible] lution was passed.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN

sideration they have represented to him most earnestly their view that his retirement at this juncture would be highly prejudicial to the public interest, and they have very strongly urged him to postpone any further action until after a complete rest of such duration as might enable him to resume his duties. Similar appeals have come to him from many sources outside of the Cabinet.

Can't Disregard Colleagues

"Sir Robert Borden is naturally reluctant either to continue duties for which the condition of his health unfits him, or to retain his position as head of the Government while absenting himself for a considerable period from his post. On the other hand, the views of his colleagues have been urged with such force and unanimity that he finds himself unable to disregard them. He has therefore concluded at their request to take such rest from active work as may prove necessary, during which period effective arrangements will be made for the discharge of the duties which would otherwise be incumbent upon him. The period of the absence from duty will necessarily depend upon his progress toward recovery; and in the end the condition of his health will determine his resumption of official duties or his retierement there from.

To Have a Caucus.

"Sir Robert Borden desires that the situations here outlined shall be placed before his supporters in Parliament, and he considers it essential that they should aprrove o fthe arrangement which his colleagues have urged and which he has accepted.

"It was the purpose of the Prime Minister to have set forth to the country during the recent session the policies for which the Government would stand during the life of the present Parliament. During his illness, and just before his departure, he embodied his proposals in written form, and on the 2nd of October, the day before he left Ottawa, he submitted them to a gathering of Government supporters. It was his desire that these proposals should be taken into consideration by those present, and that at a further gathtering the suggestions of Senators and members should be placed before him, after which he intended to formulate these policies from his place in Parliament as controlling the action of the Government during the period mentioned.

Present the Policies.

"Some of the proposals thus presented have since been carried out by action taken during the recent session. Sir Robert Borden desires that after due consideration of the advice and suggestions of the supporters of the Government in Parliament, the policies as finally accepted shall be presented to Parliament and to the people.

"The Prime Minister expresses his most grateful appreciation of the extremely generous and considerate attitude of all his colleagues in the difficult situation with which he has been confronted. He sends als his warm thanks to many friends throughout the country who have conveyed to him their sympathy and regret."

The White Rose Prince.

September, a hundred and seventy-four years ago, saw the coming of the White Rose Prince, one of the most picturesque, fascinating and beloved figures that ever flitted across the pages of history. In Scotland, to this day, people talk of Prince Charlie as if they themselves had seen him riding down the High street to Holyrood, who strewed the ground with a carpet of white roses and waved their white-cockaded bonnets in an ecstasy of devotion. It all reads like a fairy tale—those brief weeks of happiness and gaiety under James the VIII., who cared no more than his White Rose Court that Edinburgh Castle was held against him, and that under its sheltering guns good Mr. Macvicar of the West Kirk prayed — "for the young man who comes seeking an earthly crown, may Heaven speedily send a heavenly one." A Fairy Tale Court and a Fairy Tale Prince Charming, and then out went the candles and the singing, and the laughter died, and there was only Black Culloden to remember and—"the brave, the noble that have died in vain for me."

The Egg Question.

What is a new laid egg? That is the question which the Royal Agricultural Society, unable to answer it, has voted to refer to the World's Poultry Congress to be held in The Hague next September. Recently there has been much discussion of eggs, fresh and otherwise. Many persons agree with the well-known English comedian who placed the "hen fruit" in three classes — new laid, fresh and just egg. In 1913 it was estimated that ten million hens were laying for Londoners, thousands of them in remote parts of the globe. In that year the average consumption was 120 per person. In 1918 it had sunk to 70, principally because of lack of transport, shortage of eggs and the high prices. The egg deficiency in 1918 was 362,550,000, or more than 25,000 tons.

Chivalrous Private.

The wife of a wounded soldier was given a permit to France, to see him before he died, says the London (England) Morning Post. The funeral was on a wet, cold day. At the graveside the chaplain whispered to the woman "Now I am going to offer up a prayer." "Then I must kneel," she said. "No, never mind kneeling; just stand," he whispered again. But a Tommy understood her distress, slipped off his coat, rolled it pillow-fashion, and laid it for her on the sodden ground, so she knelt and was comforted.

The father then promised to bring him back a bicycle if he stayed at home and was a good boy. Harry pondered this for a moment and replied: "No, I'll go along and ride it back."

The Trouble With Tommy

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

The trouble with Tommy Ellis showed itself from the first day he went to school. It was a little school, and there were just fifty hooks on the walls of the boys' cloak room, with fifty-one boys to hang their hats on them. Half a dozen of the new boys were younger and smaller than Tommy, who had reached the ripe age of seven; but Tommy it was who had to lay his cap on the floor in the corner because he let the other fellows grab while he held back. Tommy didn't like having to put his cap on the floor any better than the other boys. But somebody's had to go there, and so it was Tommy's.

It wasn't because he was slow or stupid that Tommy, from that time on, took the dust of his schoolmates and later on the choice of whatever was being given out in the way of favors or jobs or opportunities. On the contrary, Tommy was brighter and quicker and naturally more skillful and clever than the majority of boys. But he was utterly lacking in self-assertiveness.

The only occasion on which Tommy's hand went up in time to be recognized by the teacher, when she was showing off her pupils to visiting parents or committeemen, was when he was the only child in the room who knew the answer to the question. If one or two or a dozen of the others were prepared with the desired information they were all sure to beat Tommy to it.

There was a little girl whom Tommy worshiped in his secret soul. One day her hat blew off. She was the school beauty, so five boys put chase after the hat. Tommy, as usual, got started last, having been bumped out of his stride by another boy. It was a freak wind and of a sudden the hat shifted its course and came straight at Tommy and a mud puddle. Tommy headed it off and, all blushes, took a single step toward his inamorata. Then another boy grabbed the hat away from Tommy and himself bestowed it upon its owner, with the air of one having rescued it from the puddle instead of purloining it from the abashed Tommy's worshipful hand. The little girl, whose name was Annabelle Hester, smiled benignantly upon the other boy, whose name was Floyd Cushman, and never even gave Tommy a glance.

And so it was. At twenty Tommy was holding down the worst possible job in the gift of the superintendent of the one-horse interurban trolley company, a job which no one else would take, and which necessitated his getting up at an unconscionable hour in the morning, and walking a mile after taking the last car into the barn at night, with all his leisure time in the middle of the day—and what use can a young fellow make of the hours from ten till three?

The use that Tommy made of them was to think, hopelessly and with a sinking heart, about that same Annabelle Hester whose hat he saved from being muddied when he was a little boy. Annabelle was a stenographer in town now, but she still lived in the suburban village, and very often rode out on the car on which Tommy collected the fares.

She was always friendly and nice to Tommy, and now and then he ventured to talk to her a little, but only now and then, because Tommy fancied Annabelle seemed a little nervous and ill at ease at such times, perhaps as though she didn't just care about getting too intimate with a conductor. Another reason was that Floyd Cushman, who was in college now, and going to be a lawyer, rode out with Annabelle whenever he came back to the village, which was pretty often, and quite took possession of her. Yes, Tommy felt altogether "out of it" with Annabelle.

Then the war came. Tommy went as a buck private and came back as one. He wasn't, it appeared, of non com material, though an intelligent, studious and conscientious soldier. Floyd Cushman, jamming his way in the attention of his superiors at Plattsburg and later in France, attained to a captaincy before he met his finish above Verdun.

When Tommy was demobilized they gave him back his old run, and it was the third evening that he saw Annabelle Hester. The girl had climbed to the platform of the car and was on the point of entering when she glanced up and saw Tommy. She went white, then rosy. "Why, Tommy—Tommy Ellis!" she exclaimed. "When on earth did you get back? I didn't—I never heard—" Annabelle was becoming inarticulate.

Tommy Ellis had been through what no man can go through and still be quite as he was before. Much of his old self-consciousness was gone.

"Annabelle," he said in a manly, direct way, "I'm dreadfully sorry about Floyd. I'm the only one you know who was there when it happened. All the way back I was thinking you'd want to know, and that the first thing I'd do would be to tell you. If you'll let me know when, I'll get off and come over to your house and tell you."

"Do, Tommy; come tomorrow in your off-time. I'm going to be home. And I do want to hear—everything." Tommy didn't notice the odd, studying look the girl gave him. But he promised to go; and next day he went.

Tommy told Annabelle about the speed and rush of the great movement when the Americans cleaned out the Verdun salient: how most of the doughboys were racing to get in touch with the enemy, but now and then coming unexpectedly on the deadly machine gun nests of the rear guard: how Captain Cushman, commanding Tommy's own platoon because of a shortage of lieutenants, had stormed one of these enemy positions and had been shot leading his men across an open field. "He died bravely, Miss Annabelle," said Tommy, in conclusion. "I wish he could have lived to come back." And then, after a little, the new Tommy asserted himself enough to venture—"to you."

Annabelle looked straight at Tommy. "As a soldier," she asked, "do you think it was necessary for Captain Cushman to lose his life at that time and place? Do you think those Huns could have been driven out without a frontal attack? Was it good leadership to do what he did?"

"Why, Miss Annabelle," exclaimed Tommy, taken wholly by surprise by this questioning, "what—what makes you doubt it?"

"Because," replied the girl, "I know all about it. You are not the only person I have seen who was there. Sergeant Fanton of your squad is my cousin. He told me about it. It was a mad, blundering, headstrong piece of thoughtless bravado, and it cost many lives besides his, Tommy Ellis. I know something else. I know you didn't like Floyd Cushman. I know he always treated you contemptuously. Then why did you, when he was struck down, leave the cover Fanton had ordered you to take, and go out there into that rain of bullets in a dear, wonderful, foolish, crazy attempt to save him and bring him back to the rocks? I know all about it, I tell you! But why did you do it—what made you?"

"Why—why—why, Annabelle. There wasn't anything else to do—when I thought of you, waiting for him to come back."

"But, Tommy! I wasn't waiting for Floyd to come back. You dear, self-effacing, modest, morbid old Tommy—I was waiting for you. And I've always been waiting for you all my mortal life. Tommy Ellis, are you going to live the rest of your existence in the old way, letting everything go for want of enough cruelty or wickedness or—gumption—or whatever it is to reach out and grab? Or are you going to grab—me?" Annabelle was laughing and crying at once. But she cried altogether, and shuddered as she sobbed: "And you almost threw your life away!"

The war helped some. Annabelle helped a great deal more. Tommy got a better run next day. Last month he beat out three candidates for assistant division superintendent. If you push Tommy now you'll get pushed back.

Fish Plentiful in Chile.

Along the coast of Chile, many sections of which are practically uninhabited at present, graves of the aborigines are found in great numbers, and they invariably contain implements for sea fishing. From prehistoric times the coast of Chile has been noted for its diverse and extensive fisheries. The fishes are so plentiful that sea birds by the millions, feeding on them, are found along the coast, and the numerous guano islands indicate the great length of time the birds frequented these waters. With methods similar to those used in other countries, the fishing industry could be revolutionized and established on a very large scale. The present methods in Chile are no more advanced than they were thousands of years ago. The need is felt by the Chileans themselves. The lack of sea food was recently the subject of a demand from the laborers to the government.

Growth of Canning Industry.

The canning industry has within a few years grown to colossal proportions. It is an art that dates back a little more than 100 years. We owe this art of preserving foods through rendering them sterile by means of heat and maintaining them in that condition in hermetically sealed containers, to a Frenchman, Nicholas Appere, who began his experiments in canning in 1795 at Chalmons sur Marne. He worked and experimented for 15 years and in 1810 had practically perfected his system.

The first canning in the United States was for the preservation of sea foods. It was not until the decade following the Civil war that the superiority of canned foods over those which were preserved by salting, drying and pickling became recognized. Today the United States is the largest producer and consumer of canned foods.

Unneccessary Noise.

A man reports that he has succeeded inventing a noiseless typewriting machine. If the report be true, let us rejoice. It is a great stride forward. Any invention that stops or lessens any of the noises of this noisy world is distinctly an achievement.

We suppose that street cars, for instance, will one day become obsolete, but the chances are that they will last for some time yet. And this being the case, why is it that some genius does not invent a way to muffle the infernal, nerve-wracking and diabolical noise that a street car makes? They crash and hammer their way over our streets, and when they round a curve they emit a wail like the wail of a lost soul.—Los Angeles Times.

British General in Siberia Who Warned Government Of the Perilous Situation

MAJ.-GEN. SIR ALFRED KNOX, K.C.B., who is chief of the British military mission in Siberia, is a Protestant Irishman. Descended from an ancient race of soldiers, in becoming a general he has only followed in the steps of his forefathers.

He has seen service on the Indian frontier, and also acted as aide-de-camp to Lord Curzon when the latter was Viceroy of India. For the last eight years his work has almost entirely been connected with Russia, throughout which country he has travelled extensively. As British military attache to the court of the Romanoffs he was intimately connected with Russian affairs for some years prior to the war. Throughout the great war up to January, 1918, he held this position, acting as the chief liaison between the two countries. Although devoted to Russia, he has never deceived either himself or the British Government in his opinion concerning the failings of the Russian people. For two days only did he hope that the first revolution might really tend to a more energetic prosecution of the war by Russia. He was soon disillusioned by the feebleness of Kerensky, and realizing the extreme danger of the situation, he urged that foreign troops be sent to Russia to stiffen the fading morale of the Russians. This being impossible, Gen. Knox did his utmost to warn the Government of the situation.

After the Bolshevist coup d'etat he was to be seen urging the release of the members of the Women's Battalion, with whom Kerensky had garrisoned the Winter Palace. When Kerensky had fled and the palace had been taken, many of these women were imprisoned, but were soon released, owing to the demands of the British military attache.

In January, 1918, conditions necessitated the departure of the British Embassy. From that date on to the day when Gen. Knox sailed to take up his duties in Siberia, he spent hsi time agitating and begging for allied intervention.

As a happy omen for the future, on the day he landed in Vladivostok the news came that the railway was clear from Vladivostok to Samara, and ever since that day the general has been begging for a definite allied policy.

During the last year the staff of the British military mission has been much enlarged. Numerous officers have arrived to help train the new Russian army, while the quartermaster department has distributed some 200,000 complete sets of equipment besides rifles, guns, and an enormous quantity of ammunition.

Every rifle bullet fired since January, 1919, was manufactured in England, and the Russian General Staff admit that if it had not been for the British help Siberia would again have come under Bolshevist control. It is only necessary to mention the name, Gen. Knox, to obtain a passport to every door. Three times already has the general completed a return journey from Vladivostok to as far west as conditions allowed, and just recently he has started on his fourth trip.

A tall, big, frank-looking man physically, Gen. Knox reflects his character. Decided and determined, he is completely indifferent to outside opinions. He is often accused of reactionary tendencies, but these accusations are as false as they are numerous. Having an object in view, namely, the training of the new Russian army, he is determined to effect this in so far as he is able. To enumerate the difficulties and obstacles put in his way would be tedious, but not the smallest are the extraordinary laziness and conceit of the Russian officers, and the pursuance of a directly contrary policy by other allied representatives.

The Mechanical "Katie."

"Katie," one of the most wonderful inventions exhibited at the recent shipping engineering exhibition in London, is likely to prove the most valuable aid to sea captains and navigators yet discovered. "Katie" is the name given to the invention of an engineer, by which he makes water talk.

It is an automatic float, with a sensitive depth-finding mechanism connected telephonically, and is placed on the surface of the water. Another delicate instrument rests on the bottom with a wire connection. When an engineer wants to know the depth of water at a particular spot he rings up "Katie" on the 'phone and she tells him the exact depth.

She speaks in soft, jerky buzzes in the manner of the Morse code, and when she gets out of her depth she stutters. If the current is too strong she becomes speechless. "Katie" will also warn a captain how much water has got into the hold or the engine-room after a collision.

A Small Shillingsworth.

There is no doubt that the Post Office takes care of its pennies and its shillings. A man leaving Blackpool wished an expected telegram to be re-wired to him at Manchester, and paid 1s. When it arrived at Manchester another 1s. 1½d. was demanded. The official explanation was that the second sum was for sending the telegram over the wire, while the first shilling was "recording the instructions." It seems a lot of money for entering a name and address in a book.

Black and Green Tea.

The sole difference between black and green tea is one of preparation; both kinds can be made from the leaves of the same plant.

Plane Shapes Confusing.

American battleplanes are now beginning to make their appearance on the western front, according to the Scientific American, and it is of interest to note the changes undergone by well-known types of domestic machines. Certain of our machines have taken on characteristics of German battleplanes, such as the tapered front, propeller pot and fishlike fuselage, while others have taken on the characteristics of the French Spad and the British Sopwith fighter. The American machines in several instances are inclosing the V-shape engines, leaving only the exhaust pipes showing, and these are grouped into one pipe on either side, which leads back and ends in a perforated taper. One well-known type of American airplane has been so materially changed of late that it is at first confounded with the French Spad: the engine is entirely inclosed; the wing arrangement is similar to the Spad; and the strut arrangement is identical to the French machine.

Awkward For His Wife.

A good story was told recently by Sir Charles Parsons, of turbine fame, concerning a certain learned professor who shall be nameless.

He was, explained Sir Charles, very absent-minded. One day he saw that his wife had placed a fine bouquet of freshly-cut flowers on his desk.

"What does this mean, dear?" he asked.

"Why, don't you know!" she exclaimed. "This is the anniversary of our wedding-day."

"Ah, is it, indeed?" he answered politely. "Kindly let me know when yours comes round and I will reciprocate."

So Stupid!

She was one of the war-products. With "goo-goo" eyes, a sweet smile, and very little knowledge of her work, she called herself a typist. She had learned her job in a Government office, but now she was out in the cold, hard world.

One day the manager called her into his office.

"Surely, Miss Greene, 'incum' is a new way of spelling 'income,' isn't it?" he asked mildly.

She fluffed her hair with one dainty finger for a moment in thought. Then her famous smile came into play.

"Oh, I'm sorry!" she gurgled. "How stupid of me to forget the B!"

Women are now admitted to membership in the Hamburg Stock Exchange.

DEFENDANTS GIVE

single man unless she were encouraging him toward marriage?"

"I don't know. I guess I did it."

"How much did you get for your car from Mr. Vass?"

"$200 and a $50 Victory Bond."

"How much of that is left?"

"The $50 Victory Bond."

Then Mr. Gordon went into a lengthy examination in an endeavor to find out where this $250 had been spent. He found some difficulty in obtaining definite answers from the witness, but the judge insisted on the answers being given.

He discovered from the witness that she had gone to Toronto on September 1st (after the writ against her had been issued). While there she spent $20 for a dress, $25 for a set of furs, $10 for boots, $4 or $5 for a sweater and about $15 for various little necessities. She had spent some money at home since; $15 for a coat for her little girl and about $10 for a doctor bill.

"Did you see Bowler before you sold the car?"

"I did."

"Did you say anything about selling the car to him?"

"No, I did not."

"Why?"

"I thought it was mine and it was not necessary."

Mr. Hatton: "Did Bowler ever ask you if you were married?"

"No."

"Did you and Mr. Vass keep gardens during the war to speed up production?"

"Yes, we did."

Albert Vass.

Then the other defendant, Mr. Albert Vass, was called into the witness box.

Witness swore that he was sure he had never joked with Mrs. Redman about getting Bowler's money.

He told of the wedding dance at the home of Mr. Blodgett where he first met Bowler. When they went to leave for home late that night there was a stick in the hind wheel and something broke when the car started.

"Was there anything said about engagement to be married between Bowler and Mrs. Redman by anyone to you?"

"No, nothing was said of it."

Witness swore that it was Bowler who first mentioned the idea of giving Mrs. Redman the car. He also swore that it was Bowler who first mentioned going to a lawyer's office to get the matter settled.

"Did you accompany Bowler and Mrs. Redman to the lawyer's office when the bill of sale was drawn up?"

"No."

"Did you advise Mrs. Redman to get Bowler's money out of the Bank of Commerce?"

"No, I did not know he had any money in the bank until after Mrs. Redman got it."

"Did you have any interest in the Ford car or the money in the bank or the assigned pay?"

"No, I had no interest in it whatever."

Mr. Vass swore that he did not know the car was claimed by anyone until he got a letter from Mr. Gordon. The first he heard about the marriage was in the writ and statement of claim of the plaintiff.

"What did you do after you received the letter from Gordon & O'Brien?"

"I went to see Mr. Gordon and he told me that he had 300 Veterans behind him and I had better see a lawyer pretty quick."

The cross-examination of this witness was postponed until this afternoon.

FINED DOCTOR $30 AND COSTS

DR. HEGGIGE OF BRAMPTON IS CONVICTED OF RECKLESS CAR DRIVING

MR. J. NORTHEY WAS HIS VICTIM

FOOT BADLY INJURED WHEN DOCTOR'S AUTOMOBILE PASSED OVER IT

A penalty of $30.00 and costs, amounting to $44.00 was imposed by Magistrate Dumble on Dr. D. Haggie, of Brampton, Ont., this morning. The charge was reckless driving of an automobile under the Motor Vehicles Act.

Mr. J. O'Brien appeared for the defense, and Mr. McElderry for the prosecution. The charge was read to the defendant who pleaded "not guilty." The first witness for the prosecution, Mr. W. J. Northey, was called.

Mr. Northey testified that the morning of Nov. 14th while driving a Ford car on the Lakefield road on the way to Peterborough, he noticed that the hood of his engine was undone. Drawing to one side of the road, he got out, fixed the hood, went round to the other side of the car to see if it was all right and then went back to the right side of his car preparatory of getting into it. As he came round the front of his car, with his hand on the fender, he heard a scream. He took a step forward, and as he did so, a car rushed by, the wheel of the car going over his foot. Mr. Northey stated that he was over on the right side far enough to give any car plenty of room to pass either way.

Magistrate: "Did you receive no warning of any kind that the car was so close to you?"

"None except that the ladies in the car with me—my wife, daughter and her friend—screamed."

Mr. Northey then went on to state that the car was travelling about 12 miles per hour. The car, in running over his foot, broke two bones and also struck his shin. A doctor set his foot in plaster of Paris.

The occupants of the car slowed down a little but did not stop. Mr. Northey got into his own car, and on overtaking the car in front, told the occupants that he had their number. He was told he could keep it. In tracing the car number, it was found to belong to Dr. D. Heggie, of Brampton.

The witness's statement was corroborated by his wife, Mrs. Jane Northey, and his daughter, Mrs. Gertrude McConkey, in every detail.

Mr. O'Brien then moved for a non-suit.

"I won't give it to you," replied Magistrate Dumble.

Dr. Heggie then took the witness box. He stated that he was a resident of Brampton and had practised medicine for thirty years and had driven his own car for eight years. He said that on the morning in question he approached this car on the road and blew his horn twice at a distance of 50 feet from the car. He would be travelling at about 15 to 18 miles per hour. He admitted under cross-examination that he could have turned out farther than he did, but though the car was just left at the side of he road abandoned. He admitted not stopping but claimed that he was unaware that he had run over anyone. He saw a man come round the end of the car, but too late to turn out any more for him. He saw the car a hundred yards away and admitted to the prosecution that he could have turned out a good deal farther than he did.

Mr. W. C. H. Swinburne, a solicitor and barrister practising in Brampton, was the next witness for the defense. He was in the car with Dr. Heggie when the occurrence took place. His evidence was much the same as the defendant's.

Mr. O'Brien then submitted the case for the defense. He claimed there was no evidence to prove either recklessness or negligence on the part of the defendant and that defendant was not travelling at a rate of speed dangerous to the public. In approaching the car, he blew his horn twice and saw no sign of anyone around it until Mr. Northey deliberately stepped in front of his oncoming car. The Dr. did all that could be reasonably required of him, he claimed. Also he claimed that Mr. Northey's car, situated as it was, was an obstruction to the highway and that he (Northey) took no precautions whatever.

In submitting the case for the prosecution, Mr. McElderry said that it was broad daylight, and the car was in sight for 100 yards. The Dr. had plenty of room to turn out much farther than he had done, and also that instead of blowing his horn twice at 50 feet distance he should have sounded a warning farther away and repeated it oftener. The doctor was not entitled to take it for granted that no one was in the car, as he claimed he had done.

The magistrate then summed up the evidence submitted. He said that any person should have assumed for safety's sake that the car was occupied and if only for that reason to have given the car as much room as possible in case its occupants suddenly stepped out onto the road. He also made a few cutting remarks about people who wilfully perform acts of criminal negligence with automobiles. He said that in his opinion the foot and a half space between the cars when they passed was very insufficient. He then imposed a fine of $30.00 and costs on Dr. D. H. Heggie, the sum total being $44.10.

MAIN POWER SUPPLY.

An Immense Source of Energy Is So Far Inaccessible.

As a feature of the centenary celebration in commemoration of James Watt, inventor of the steam engine, Sir Oliver Lodge made a broad prediction that radium would some day be the principal motive power for all machinery.

"If James Watt were living to-day he would be directing his attention to discovering whether there are other stores of energy at present almost unsuspected," Sir Oliver said. "The fact is that contained in the properties of matter there is an immense source of energy so far inaccessible, but which I see no reason why the progress of discovery should not make available."

He referred to atomic energy which, if it could be utilized on an extensive scale, would, he believed, greatly ameliorate the conditions of factory life. There would be no smoke, he said, due to imperfect combustion and no dirt due to the transit of coal and ashes, while the power would be very compact and clean. Possibly there might occasionally be explosions due to the liberation of power more quickly than it was wanted but in general he presumed that the conditions of utilization would be good.

Sir Oliver explained that the secret of this power began to be given away when radio-activity was discovered, and said that at present we were hardly at the beginning of its utilization. The discovery of radium, which soon followed, excited universal interest and aroused great surprise, because radium appeared to give off energy continually without being consumed.

"The truth is," he said, "that it did disappear as it gave off its energy, but the disappearance was so slow and the energy given off so remarkable that it is not surprising that one is noticed before the other. The energy of radium, however, is not under control, and it emits energy at its own proper rate without regard to accidental circumstances. What happens is that every now and then a particle is projected. The energy stored in an atom is something enormous, and if we could make atoms fly off when we wanted there would be available a source of energy which would put everything else into the background. This energy is contained in all forms of matter and is not confined to radio-active substances. If a stimulus could be found the utilization of this source of energy would be possible.

"If you were able to use mechanically the energy contained in an ounce of matter and you reckon the foot tons thereby obtained, you will find enough energy to raise the German navy and pile it on top of a Scottish mountain." Perhaps it was a good thing, Sir Oliver concluded, that a nation such as the allies had had to deal with during the past five years had not made the discovery, and he hoped the human race as a whole would be equally unsuccessful until it had brains and morality enough to use it properly, for if such a discovery were made before its time and by the wrong people the very planet would be unsafe.

In Curious Contrast.

In an English morning paper were two advertisements, one directly under the other. The first said the City of London Union required attendants upon Male Lunatics, experience in managing and nursing the insane essential; salary, £30 per annum. The other announced that Wandsworth Union needed housemaids; salary, £39 16s. As the girls are donning the breeches, it seems time for men to put on skirts and take the softer job for the more money.

MRS. MORRIS EXPLAINS

Editor Review: The inference may be drawn from an editorial in Wednesday's paper that the three ladies who addressed the Labor Council on Tuesday evening were a deputation from the Women Voters' League.

This was not the case. We appeared as citizens seeking endorsation of a principle, which, judging from the press reports of the Labor Council's discussion, was heartily accorded.

D'Annunzio's Home.

"I am an Abruzzese of Pescara," wrote Gabriel d'Annunzio at the age of 16 to the literary critic Chiarni when sending him the first volume of his poems. To-day Pescara is little more than a fishing village, though at the time of the Romans, under the name Aterno, on the Vallerian Way, it was a place of no small military importance. Renamed Pescara by the conquering Lombards, it retained its huge fortress and heavy ramparts and here as late as the nineteenth century were herded the political prisoners of the Bourbons, weighted with chains, because they had dared to think for themselves. Though to-day empty of galleys, the fortress still towers over the little village clustering about the water's edge. The traveller reaches Pescara from the busy town of Chieti, which commands the whole of the central Apennines, revealing the great Majella group and the Gran Sasso Range. From Chieti there rolls away to the distant blue of the Adriatic a wide plain intersected by a slim silver ribbon; it is the Pescara river, on its way to the little wooden houses which cluster about the tiny bay, the boyhood home of d'Annunzio. Here at sunset out of the golden base of the horizon, rise what appear in the distance to be huge birds with brilliant colored wings, blue and amber, red and green. They are the fishing boats of the village with their widespread sails, coming home laden with silver cargo. Pescara, "fra la montagna e il mare" ('twixt mountain and sea), in the words of its famous son, has recently collected what is for it a very large sum, to send across the water, to the poet turned soldier at Fiume.

Words!

The engineer, says an exchange, had become tired of the boastful talk he heard from the other engine-drivers at his board-house. One evening he began: "This morning I went over to see a new machine we've got at our place, and it's astonishing how it works." "And how does it work?" asked one. "Well," was the reply, "by means of a pedal attachment a fulcrumed lever converts a vertical reciprocating motion into a circular movement. The principal part of the machine is a huge disk that revolves in a vertical plane. Power is applied through the axis of the disk, and work is done on the periphery, and the hardest steel by mere contact may be reduced to any shape." "What is this wonderful machine?" was asked. "A grindstone," was the reply.

Lloyd George's Reward.

A country yokel dropped in at an English tavern and overheard some conversation which led him to remark to the landlord, "So this is St. George's day, be it?"

"Yes," said the landlord, "and every Englishman should know it."

"Well, I be English, but blowed if I knowed they'd made 'im a saint," cackled the old gaffer, raising his glass. "'Ere's to you, David!"

Are We Downhearted? No.

While the issue of a war for life or death rung in the balance we had to concentrate on war. Clearly, however, we were thus forced into expedients and experiments full of peril for the times of peace. Are we to lose the peace? Not on your life! This country of ours, and the rest of Europe, has been in even worse case. Yet Europe survived, with a few breakages, and we grew up to win the greatest war of history. We have now to win and establish the greatest peace on the ancient basis of liberty and law. It would be folly to pretend that the difficulties and dangers are not great. They are. But they are not greater than those we conquered in the war, and we shall only go wretchedly to wrack and ruin if we persuade ourselves that this is inevitable. Not a bit of it. Buck up!—London Express.

NEW CITIZEN MAKES GOOD

Heintzman Hall, Royal Bank Building, Hunter street, local branch of Ye Olde Firme of Heintzman & Co., Ltd., manufacturers of the famous Heintzman Grand and Upright Pianos, and the faithful reproducing phonograph "The Sonora," will close this year 1919, with a substantial balance on the right side of the ledger. This is specially gratifying to Mr. F. Lawson, the manager, who succeeded Mr. Brittain, and who assumed his duties early last spring with the handicap of being a stranger in this city. However, Mr. Lawson applied himself with commendable business energy to his new charge and has attracted to his house a substantial and ever-increasing patronage, and is able to report, even so far, the biggest December business in the firm's local history. With the advent of his first Christmas at Heintzman Hall, Mr. Lawson takes this opportunity of extending his hearty appreciation of past and present business favors, and of wishing everybody a merry Yuletide and a prosperous New Year.

SIXTEEN KILLED IN C.P.R. WRECK

EVIDENCE IS CONCLUDED IN CASE OF BOWLER VS. VASS AND REDMAN

Vass Sticks to His Story Under Cross-Examination But Evidence is Contradictory on Some Questions Lawyers Argue Case.

The cross-examination of Albert Vass, defendant in the alleged conspiracy case, by Mr. Gordon, continued yesterday afternoon.

Receipts were produced for about $108 worth of repairs that had been done on the plaintiff's Ford car and were paid for by Mr. Vass. Only one receipt of $20 for painting the car was produced in Mrs. Redman's name.

The witness swore that the payment that he had made was by the the instructions of Mrs. Redman and paid for with her money.

Vass swore that although the Ford car had been used, some. it was not used for rough work to save his own Maxwell car.

"Did you ever tell Bowler that the car would be safe with Mrs. Redman.

"No, I never mentioned it to him."

Vass told of receiving offers for the Ford car other than the one by Mr. Gillespie. The highest of these was $250 and as he wanted a new car himself, he decided to buy Mrs. Redman's car and trade it.

"Was there a bill of sale drawn up at that time."

"No, we had enough trouble over the other one."

"In what way?"

"Everybody was throwing it at me seeming to think we robbed the plaintiff or something!"

"It was kind of a hard deal wasn't it?"

"I think it would have turned out all right if Bowler had been left alone."

Mr. Gordon—"You think it would be all right for this unfortunate man to lose all his money?"

The witness stated that he received $750 for the old Maxwell car in the trade. This car was purchased three years previous for $550, stated Vass, and $300 was the amount allowed for the Ford car.

"Did you ever tell the plaintiff that when a woman was married and separated from her husband for eight years she could marry again "

"No, I did not."

"Did you ever tell Bowler that Mrs. Edith Redman was a married woman?"

"No!"

Regarding the trip to Mr. O'Brien's office, the witness stated that he with Mrs. Redman, Mrs. Vass and Bowler, had gone there one evening after returning from a trip to Buckhorn. On the following morning he mained at home and was not present when the bill of sale was drawn up.

Vass swore positively that Mrs. Vass was, as the Judge termed it, the banker of the home. Mr. Vass and his boys, on receiving their pay turned their money over to her and any expenses that were paid were drawn from this common treasury. This was the way the note of $350 to Mr. Gillespie. for the balance on the new car was met.

Mr. J. O'Brien

After Harry Castle had given evidence to the effect that James Blodgett had expressed considerable ill-feeling toward the Vass's at the time Bowler went overseas, Mr. J. O'Brien, of Gordon, & O'Brien. solicitors, was summoned.

Mr. O'Brien stated that to the best of his recollection only one man came into his office on the evening before the bill of sale was drawn up.

The next morning, Bowler, Mrs. Redman and a third party who, he felt convinced, was Vass, came to the office as previously arranged.

While they were there, Mr. O'Brien was called into another office and on his return the third party had left. Bowler and Mrs. Redman had been left alone during some of this time.

When asked his business Bowler stated that he wanted to give the car to Edith Redman. O'Brien told Bowler that after the bill had been drawn up "he would have no more strings on the car."

"When I asked Mrs. Redman how I would classify her," stated the witness," she instructed me to call her a widow."

"Who mentioned the transfer of the money in the Bank of Commerce?"

"Someone besides Bowler, I think it was Mrs. Redman."

The witness then told of going over to the bank and having a cheque for the full amount drawn up in Mrs. Redman's name.

"How much money was transferred

"All the money of Bowler's except $7 that went to me for my services."

"Was there any mention of marriage in your office?"

"No, there was not."

Mrs. Vass.

Mrs. Vass, wife of the defendant told the same story of the party at Blodgett's house at which Bowler and Mrs. Redman both were present. She thought they had met one Sunday some time before that at the same place.

When asked about the payment of the $350 not of Mr. Gillespie's fo. the balance of the price of the car, Mrs. Vass replied that that part of the business was carried out by Mr. Vass and she knew nothing of it."

"Did you ever hear any suggestion of marriage between Mrs. Redman and Bowler?"

"No."

"Did Bowler know Edith Redman was a married woman "

"I don't know, but I suppose he did."

"Do you think it was proper for Mrs. Redman to sign. "sweetheart," to her letters to Bowler," asked Mr Gordon, but the Judge ruled that he would decide on that matter and not the witness.

This concluded the evidence in the case and the lawyers proceeded with their argument.

Mr. Hall thought that the evidence against his client, Albert Vass. was not sufficient to warrant an argument but the Judge gave him warning that there was one portion of the evidence that was very much against him unless his solicitor could throw new light upon the situation.

CASHED CHEQUE WITH NO FUNDS IN THE BANK

STANLEY CLYDSDALE PLACED UNDER ARREST AND REMANDED ON CHARGE

Stanley Clydsdale was placed under arrest this morning on a charge in which it is alleged he gave a cheque for which there were no funds upon which to draw.

The accused, it is stated, entered Smith's second hand store on Aylmer street and bought a sweater for $5. For this he gave a cheque for $10 and received $5 in change. Mr. Smith being somewhat skeptical about the matter took the cheque to the bank almost immediately and finding no account there put the matter in the hands of the police with a description of the man.

The ultimate result was that the accused was rounded up and will now reside in the county jail on remand until Monday when he will be brought up for a hearing.

CANADIAN PLAN FOR THE IRISH

NEW HOME RULE BILL TO BE TAKEN UP IN HOUSE MONDAY

TWO PARLIAMENTS TO MEET

FACTIONS CAN UNITE ANY TIME THEY AGREE TO DO SO. BILL SAYS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 20.— The Proposed Irish Bill which Lloyd George will outline in the Commons on Monday, will, it is believed, forecast a Government for Ireland analogous to the Provincial Government system in Canada. It is understood to provide for separate Parliaments for Ulster and Southern Ireland respectively. with a superior body chosen by both sections, all of the bodies to be responsible regarding imperial affairs to the British Parliament to which Irish representatives would be elected as the provinces elect members to the Dominion House of Commons.

It is expected that the Premier's announcement will be conciliatory and comprehensive in outlining what he hopes will be an acceptable plan. The idea will be to give a large amount of autonomy to each section of Ireland with thoroughly easy machinery providing for their combination as soon as they desire to unite. the bill being intended to pave the road for the elimination of the idea of the partition of Ireland.

Both cars drove away under their own power.

HOW THE FORTY MILLION DOLLAR FUND IS TO BE DISBURSED AMONG VETERANS

Secretary of Local Patriotic Fund, the Members of Which Will Handle the Money, Gives Details as to Proposed Plans.

(By Secretary Patriotic Fund.)

It will be of interest to know that the operation of what is known as the distribution of the "Federal Emergency Appropritaion for exMembers of the Forces," will be in order for early next week. So soon as a supply of the forms needed in the work come to hand, and these are expected by Saturday night, applications can be received.

Patriotic Fund Selected.

It also may be on interest to the public to know of the circumstances under which the emergency appropriation will operate. Having decided to allot a part of the $41,000,000 vote than had been made by Parliament, to be used in cases of unemployment, partial unemployment and in exceptional cases of real need of dependents. the Cabinet sought for a means of distribution. It unanimously turned to the Canadian Patriotic Fund, as a National Organization, incorporated and responsible and the only one in the Dominion having an intimate knowledge of circumstances individuals and peoples from actual contact and servie during the war years.

The Patriotic Fund had some hesitation in accepting the trust and responsibility, pointing out that many branches especially in the larger centres would require to be [illegible]ened, and that it was uncertain that while hundreds of groups of citizens who had loyally and helpfully given admirable service, unpaid and in many cases unappreciated, these would in turn take up the new duty. The Cabinet was unwilling to try and organize an entirely new service. The immediate need was apparent. the time short. After several conferences the Patriotic Fund appealed to the major branches through the Dominion, in the purview of which branches the largest numbers of men returned from service are found. The response was loyal and helpful. It was agreed to assume the work and the Cabinet gladly consented to meet any reasonable conditions that might be put forward. The Cabinet expressed its confidence that the one was organization that had been steadily on the job, with change of personnel, and in which the people had unbounded confidence should handle the work.

Gen. Ross at The Head.

At the request of the Patriotic Fund Executive, Brig.-General A. E. Ross, M. P. P., of Kingston. was selected as military administrator of the Unemployment Fund, and the Patriotic Fund is. under his direction assuming all details and work. It is being kept entirely apart from the operations of the Fund proper, but all the resources of the branches are at service, and the accounting and auditing staffs of the Fund contribute the service without additional remuneration, so far as the Head Office is concerned.

The Object in View.

Accuracy and fidelity, the objects sought to be attained are presented as being highly desirable and to be striven for. The detail and organization is sufficiently elastic to permit of assistance being allotted with fair discriminination and that full justice will be done in all situations. The facts are to be taken as the basis. And if substantiated assistance will at once follow.

To assist in determining the situation in all individual cases, the Department has assured the assistance of the Information and Service Branch of the Soldier's Civil Re-establishment. The procedure of application is as follows:

The applicant presents himself to the management of the Information and Service Branch, (Ontario Un-Employment Bureau, in this city, where a representative of the Dominion Service is now stationed,) and enters his application, supplying needed particulars, which are entered on a form supplied. The records of the Bureau are also consulted to verify the statements of the applicant

THIRTY SEAMEN LOST WHEN THEIR SHIP FOUNDERS ON SUNKEN REEF

Only Two Men are Known to Have Been Saved—Life Boat Capsized While Attempting to Land and Ten or Twelve are Drowned.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Bandon, Oregon. Dec. 20.—At least thirty lives were lost when the oil tanker, J. A. Chansler, bound in ballast from Portland, Oregon, to San Francisco, was wrecked off Cape Blanco, Thursday night according to reports of Earl Dooley, a member of the crew, who was washed ashore from one of the Chansler lifeboats Dooley another unidentified man was saved.

According to Dooley, the ship struck a reef at 6:15 o'clock Thursday night and broke in two, a few minutes afterwards, the after part of the vessel sinking and taking thirty men down with it. A score of the crew of fifty-one were still unaccounted for today. After the vessel broke in tow, according to Dooley's account, ten or twelve of the survivers succeeded in manning the lifeboats, Captain A Sawyer being among them. They drifted about all Thursday night and most of yesterday picking up a seaman who appeared insane when taken from the water. Shortly afterward, in attempting to land, Dooley said the boat capsized and he and an unidentified man were the only ones known to have reached the shore.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 20, 1919.

THE FIRST CHRISTMAS ANTHEM.

And suddenly there was with the angel a multitude of the heavenly host praising God and saying:

Glory to God in the highest, and on earth peace and good will toward men.

THAT WAS the message that two thousand years ago came to the lowly shepherds as they watched their flocks on the Judean hillside. A miraculous light shone round about them and a white-robed celestial choir sang the chorus, the theme of which was redemption for the world. Earth was filled with the music that heralded the birth of Him Who was to save the people from their sins.

Every church in Peterborough tomorrow will ring with choral adoration for that Babe Who was born in a stable and cradled in a manger, but Who nevertheless rules the civilized world today. He is the central figure in history, the Great Teacher Whose precepts have stood the test of twenty centuries, Whose words of wisdom, unlike those of mortal Solon, have not perished with the occasion that called them forth, but are as potent today, as fitting of application to the affairs of man, as they were when they were first uttered. Saints and skeptics alike acknowledge something more than mortal in the character of Him in the celebration of Whose birth half the world takes part with one accord. But the influence of that unselfish life and sacrificial death has not yet attained the full measure of its power. Even in our own land tomorrow, while the churches worship either by praise or prayer, there will be outsiders platting the crown of thorns and looking for the reed that is the symbol of derision.

THE FAULTY SYSTEM OF NOMINATIONS.

JUDGING FROM the civic record of recent years, it is safe to predict that not more than sixty per cent. of the voters of Peterborough will turn out at the approaching civic election. There must be some valid reason for tis apathy on the part of the people whose highest interests are involved in the result.

Ask any stay-at-home at a venture why he does not go to the polls, and nine times out of ten the answer will be that the candidates in the runnng are not representatve of all the people, that they have been chosen by factions and cliques sitting in secret. And is the contention not justified?

The weakest point in the elective system is the method of selecting candidates. They are chosen, not by the masses, but by committees, as a rule. If there is any mistake made, any failure to select the best available material, it is invariably made at the beginning, when the election machinery is first set in motion. In nearly all American cities today the primary election has been tried out with general satisfaction. Candidates are chosen by ballot of the masses, selected by the people, who will have another chance to confirm their choice.

Give the voters an opportunity to nominate the candidates and they are sure to have sufficient interest in their own work to take an active part in their election. This has never failed to work out in actual practice. Let a coterie of citizens, lacking popular mandate frame a slate, and the majority of the voters are likely to refuse to become a party to such methods. There is one representative body in this city, an organization composed of duly accredited delegates, who will have a ticket in the field. Every delegate, every member of the organization which deputizes that delegate to act on behalf of the others, feels a personal enthusiasm and will not only vote but will perform volunteer service to secure the election of the ticket.

A citizens' committee is as a rule made up of members who are unselfishly interested in promoting the welfare of the city. The one outstanding weakness of such a committee, however, is their lack of a mandate to represent the majority of the voters. By what authority are they assuming to act? This question is invariably asked, and suspicion is at once aroused that the members, individually or collectively, have some axe to grind. What on the face of it appears like an arrogant assumption of authority is always resented by those on the outside.

The citizens' committee, of which so much has been heard, but of whose real work so little is actually known, have held meeting after meeting. The members are influential and substantial citizens, but they seem as far today as they were at the start from achieving any real purpose. Their primary object seems to have been to put up a list of candidates of their own selecting, to make the mayoralty race easy for their choice for that position, and then choose for aldermen men who would in the Council stand behind the new mayor on all public questions of importance. They have apparently failed to clear the mayoralty field of what they regard as interlopers, and the aldermanic slate is not completed, either. But even if they had succeeded in attaining their every object, the popular objection to their work would still remain.

The Board of Trade is designed—if it is not actually—to be the most representative body in the city. If there is any class or interest that has no place in it, the fault lies with the unrepresented themselves, for the membership is open to all, either indivdually or collectively. There can be no class control in such a body of citizens, in spite of any popular prejudice to the contrary that may exist.

The primary purpose of the Board of Trade is to advance the interests of the city as a whole. Prosperity for one class means prosperity for all, no matter what the malecontents may hold to the contrary. It is difficult to understand why such a body of representative citizens should decree to hold themselves aloof from political action. How, other than by taking such action, can the organization hope to accomplish anything? There should be nothing of politics, as that term is generally understood, in the management of civic affairs. A citizens' ticket is the solution of all civic administrative problems. A city council based on the same general principles as the Board of Trade would be the highest ideal of civic government. It would remove class jealousy and rivalry for all time and it would revive the interest of the voters as a whole.

If the citizens' committee had decided to call a mass meeting of the electors instead of holding star chamber sessions they might easily have attained the success that they aimed at from the beginning.

CARING FOR THE AGED.

LEGAL RECORDS show that when the British code was adopted by Canada in 1791 there was a statute which provided that grown-up children of means should support indigent parents. That statute was adopted in England during the reign of Queen Elizabeth. Lawyers in Canada now say that the Act referred to has been repealed in this country, but the exact date of the abrogation is not given.

This looks like a serious defect in the laws. Parents are compelled to take proper care of their children during the minority of the latter. If they fail in this duty while able to discharge it there is a heavy penalty for their dereliction. The reasons are just as valid why children who have been fitted by the exertions of their parents—exertions that often meant self-denial and sacrifice—for the struggle for existence, should be compelled to take care of those parents who, through no fault of their own, may be overwhelmed by misfortune in the latter years of their lives. No worse phase of human nature can be exhibited than the willingness of some children to permit their helpless parents to accept charity or end their days in the poorhouse while their offspring are enjoying a prosperity that was made possible by the care which these parents exercised in the training of their ungrateful and unfilial progeny.

MR. CRERAR AND THE TARIFF.

HON. T. A. CRERAR, addressing the U.F.O. convention in Toronto the other day, gave a clear explanation of the views of the western farmers on the tariff issue. They are not, he claims, in favor of absolute free trade. What they want is an immediate reduction of the customs duty, the deficit thus created in the revenue receipts to be made up by a system of direct taxation. There must, however, be absolute free trade with England from the start in order to satisfy the farmers. Reciprocity with the United States in natural products is also to be insisted upon.

If Canada is to admit the manufactured goods of Europe duty free, how can Mr. Crerar expect to make terms with the United States so long as there is tariff discrimination by this country against American finished products? It has always been the policy of Congress to retaliate against any country that adopts such one-sided measures.

Mr. Crerar's policy is sectional in its scope and would serve only the selfish interests of the people of the western provinces. It was the protective tariff that built up the manufactories of the East, and as the manufacturers prospered so did the workingmen and the farmers, the latter by reason of the home market that was built up at their very doors. The protective tariff will be needed to develop the West, by encouraging industry. There will be less heard in that section of the foreign market when a sale of products is possible at home, when the farmers out there devote their energies to mixed agriculture instead of raising wheat alone.

Under a tariff of protection, the man who chooses to import goods not made in this country pays the tax. Mr. Crerar would reduce this charge and make up the difference by levying a direct tax upon all the people. With such a system in operation, the Canadian who elected to wear clothing made from the products of European mills would have part of the expense borne by the public at large. The idea is false in principle. It would be a parallel to a move to carry passengers on the street cars for one cent and have the deficit in operating expenses that would be certain to result made up by a general tax. The man who never rode on the cars would thus be required to help pay the fares of those who patronized them.

It is evident that the great issue before the people today is the tariff. The West plans a fiscal revolution which, while it would not fail to work ruin in the East, would bring nothing in the way of industrial progress to the section of the Dominion where it was hatched.

Reminiscences of an Editor

(By A. McG.)

A newspaper man is like any other individual in that his permanent opinions are almost invariably formed by his early training and environments. Perhaps any mortal who has seen about every phase of human life, who has a fair idea of how one-half of the human race exist and the other half live, is apt to acquire what others may regard as prejudices. For instance, any one who has witnessed an execution, who has seen the victim of his own misdeeds kicking and struggling at the end of a rope, is likely to have set convictions on the question of capital punishment, those convictions to be strengthened every time the memory of the horrible scene ever comes to him, whether working or in his dreams. Newspaper associations will decide the trend of a man's mind not only in politics but with regard to equal suffrage, prohibition, and kindred subjects.

It was in 1886 that I was first assigned to report a meeting of women who were out after the franchise. I was at that time on the staff of the Detroit Tribune. The proprietor, who was a Republican leader in Michigan, seldom interfered with the reporters on the paper, but in this case he made an exception, and, calling me into his private office, loaded me down with instructions. I was not to treat the matter in any sense as a joke. The paper favored the movement both as a matter of principle and as a business proposition. The agitation was gathering strength every day and the cause was bound to win out in the end. Furthermore, it was one of the leading planks in the platform of the State Republican party.

Up to this time my ideas of woman's suffrage had been based almost entirely upon a perusal of the works of Artemus Ward, who polliried any woman who loked for franchise on the shafts of his sarcastic wit. Somehow or other I had concluded in my own mind that an equal suffragist was in the nature of a freak, that she wore spectacles invariably, had a lofty disregard for feminine fashions, and had been disappointed either in business or matrimony. I had the awakening of my life when I attended that meeting. Probably there were one thousand women in the hall, and among them were many of the social leaders of the city. Shimmering evening gowns and blazing jewels were much in evidence and all the audience were intensely in earnest. One of the leading lawyers of the city dealt with the legal features of the problem, and a Labor leader, who at the time was a candidate for Congress, on the strength of a nomination by the workingmen and endorsation by the Republican party, was also a speaker. I for the first time heard a woman make a set speech, and was innocently surprised that she could do so without developing a fit of hysterics.

In 1888 the women of Michigan were given the right to vote for members of the boards of education and to sit as members of such bodies themselves. In the spring election of 1889 the first woman was elected to the Detroit board of education, and my recollection is that she held her own with the dozen or more practical business men with whom she found herself officially associated.

In 1890 the Michigan Legislature gave women the franchise on the same terms as men, with the single reservation that every woman voter should be able to read and write. That provision killed the bill when it came up for review before the State Supreme Court, that august body ruling that it was class legislation and therefore not permissible under the Constitution. To make one set of conditions for men voters and another for women was deemed sufficient ground for calling off the new law. The right of women to vote at school elections, however, remained.

Prohibition agitation in the United States antedates that in Canada by several decades. Any State that adopted it wrote it into the Constitution, thereby making it permanent. I have never known a public man of note or an American newspaper of standing that dared tempt the fates by openly opposing temperance legislation. All of the leading Republican papers supported it, some of them, perhaps, not very enthusiastically, but making a virtue of a political necessity, as the Republican party in those days sponsored the cause of the prohibitionists. In 1887 the State of Michigan submitted a constitutional amendment providing for absolute prohibition. The measure carried in the rural districts and in the smaller towns and cities, but the majority rolled up in Detroit, then, as now, the metropolis of the State, was sufficient to defeat it. For this reverse the prohibitionists were in a measure responsible, because they had cut loose from their old allies, the Republicans, and put up a State ticket of their own, thus wrecking the chances of both and putting in jeopardy the cause that was so dear to themselves.

At the next meeting of the Michigan Legislature the Republicans still in control and still faithful to their campaign professions, passed a temperance law providing for prohibition in any county that declared for it by a majority vote. In less than three months after that law became effective seventy-five per cent. of the counties of Michigan were under local option, the city vote of the remainder being sufficient to regulate the issue.

Then there came another bolt from the political blue. The liquor men carried the matter into court, claiming that the law was unconstitutional. The Supreme Court sustained the contention as it was found that the law as engrossed by the clerk of the Legislature differed in some points from the copy that was adopted by the vote of the members. Perhaps it was a mere clerical error which the jurists had to recognize as fatal to the Act. Then again it may have been, as was more than suspected at the time, a dirty piece of manipulation by some one opposed to temperance. The responsibility for the error—or crime—was never fixed and the state that had been washed almost totally clean, took another plunge into the slough.

Information has been received at Grand Trank headquarters that Canada will have next year a summer resort hotel that will surpass in size any similar enterprise previously created in the Dominion. This hotel will be in "The Lake of Bays" district of the "Highlands of Ontario." and will be known as the "Bigwin Inn." Construction work has been completed and the hotel will be opened during the coming summer. It will have accommodation for six hundred guests. Railroad authorities state that the opening of the Bigwin Inn will mark a notable step in the development of Canadian summer resorts.

Mainly About People

A successful organ-maker, insurance salesman and real estate dealer, R. W. E. Burnaby, still in his thirties, comes to head the United Farmers of Ontario. For the past six years only has he been able to call himself a farmer, but in that time he has won the title of the "Holstein King."

Born in New Brunswick some thirty-five or thirty-six years ago, he stayed on the home farm until he was eighteen years of age. Then for six months he attended business college at Belleville. After being employed for two years in an organ factory, he was appointed manager, but seeing riches in the insurance business became an insurance salesman. For nine years he sold insurance for three different companies and stayed with each company three years. He made a wonderful record and for several years was a member of the $500,000 Club. As an insurance salesman, he laid the basis of a considerable fortune, and then entered the real estate business on his own to pile up the ducats still faster.

Six or seven years ago he answered the call and went back to "the quiet life." Seventeen miles from Toronto, facing on a sideroad leading off Yonge street, you will find his farm, 300 acres of it. At times Mr. Burnaby has been known to farm as many as 700 acres by leasing land around him, and off the extra acres he grew hay for his wonderful herd of purebred Holsteins. On the farm is a small picturesque lake.

At first a power in his local club, it was not long until the head office of the U. F. O. heard more of him. Two years ago he was made President of the Co-operative Company. He has organized scores of clubs throughout the Province, and it is whispered that when the North York Farmers select a man to oppose Hon. William Lyon Mackenzie King, R. W. E. Burnaby will be the man chosen.

Teach the Children to Save
Habits are acquired early in life. Children, who are taught the value of money and the habit of saving, grow up into good business men and capable women.
The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar to make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.

THE CIVIC DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION TO CO-OPERATE FOR MORE PUBLICITY

Will Support City Council in Connection With Riverside Park Bylaw.

The new Civic Development Commission that was recently appointed by the mayor to act as an advisory committee to the City Council and to promote all things in the interests of the public held its first meeting in the council committee room last evening.

At the request of the mayor Mr. Ryerson Ritchie acted as convener of the commission and all the members were present. The object of calling last night's meeting was to organize and discuss problems that will occupy the attention of the commission in the future.

The principal topic for consideration was the appropriation by the city of the property east of the river and south of the bridge for park purposes. The commission supports the resolution of the council and will co-operate with the council to make the people of the city fully acquainted with the entire project. Publicity and every other means possible will be adopted in this campaign.

City Engineer Parsons has undertaken to prepare sketches and pictures which will probably be shown upon the screens of the motion picture houses of the city during the last week of the year. The object of all this publicity is to show the public exactly what is proposed in the by-law to be voted on on Jan. 1st.

Mr. Parsons will have the active and sympathetic intrest of Mr. W. H. Barry in preparing these pictures.

Friend Husband.

Mrs. Myles: "And is her husband kind to her?"

Mrs. Styles: "Oh, very. Why, he's more like a friend than a husband."

WIT AND WISDOM

An Expert Witness.

"You swear that this man is no chicken stealer" demanded the judge.

"Yessur," replied Rastus Rashle. Da's whut Ah said, suh."

"What do you know about the facts in this case?"

"Ah, isn' s'posed to know nuffin bout de facks in de case, suh. As is an expert witness foh de defence."

That Went Double.

His gay young wife showed him the pictured advertisement of a very short and very skimpy bath-suit. "You might let me have the money, John," she said.

"I can't consistently, my dear," said he.

"Why not?"

"I'm a man of modest means."

Excuse Enough.

"The reason you don't like Wagnerian music is that you don't understand."

"Well," replied the matter-of-fact person, "isn't the fact that I don't understand it a pretty good excuse for not enjoying it?"

Delightful Neighbors.

"Do you think those new people will make good neighbors?"

"Oh, delightful! Why, I can see already that they're going to do enough scandalous things to keep us in gossip all the winter."

Danger in Raw Milk
Use "Safety First" Quality
The fact that there are impurities in all milk in its raw state as it leaves the dairy is being pointed out by pure milk authorities. Udder inflamation is common in practically every dairy herd, and to this is traceable, not infrequently, epidemics of various diseases.
Impurities cannot be eliminated from milk by ordinary straining, but clarifying and pasteurizing gives absolute cleanliness and purity, and to accomplish this our machinery is the last word in efficiency.

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

WINDOW CHARTS HELP CUSTOMERS DECIDE

The Paul H. Krauss Co., of Indianapolis, like other dealers in men's clothing, believes that price tags on clothing shown in its windows detract somewhat from the merits of the display, adding a touch which might cause a seeker of high-grade garments to pass by.

Nevertheless, the company realises that there is a certain advantage to the price tag, which tells the prospective buyer just how much he has to pay and enables him to avoid the embarrassment of looking at a $60 suit, when he has just $40 in his pocket. The average man, the company believes, doesn't like to "shop," as many women do, but goes into a store to buy. If he finds that the clothing he has his eye on costs more than he expected, he is unpleasantly surprised and usually leaves rather awkwardly, probably not to return.

The Krauss company finally has decided on a compromise between two methods. Its windows are still guiltless of price tags, but the man on the floor usually near the entrance so he can direct patrons to the proper department of the men's wear establishment, has near at hand a chart of each window showing the position of every garment displayed and its price.

If a man points to a suit or an overcoat and asks the price, the floorman is able to tell him on a moment's notice by simple reference to the chart, which is made by the window trimmers every time the display in the window is changed.

CHINESE DEATH RATE BOOSTS HAIR NETS

Add to the list of famines that of hair nets. Stores handling this feminine necessity are almost down to the last net, and there's no relief in sight.

According to wholesalers, the shortage is caused by the decline in the death rate in China. Nets sold in America are virtually made from Chinese hair, the bulk of which is obtained from the heads of dead Chinese. The big shortage is in dark brown and black nets. Women have been forced to buy white or gray hair nets and dye them.

"COURTESY," SAYS JONES, "PAYS BIG DIVIDENDS"

Courtesy costs less than anything else in L. C. Jone's clothing store in Ottawa, Kan. There is a sign over the desk which reads:

"I am busy today, but no matter who you are or what your business is, I have time to talk to you."

This sign "goes" for traveling men as well as anybody else.

Mr. Jones, who is probably selling as much clothing as any other clothier in Kansas located in a town of 10,000 inhabitants, believes in instructing his salesmen and frequently gives them a lesson in the art of selling goods, making friends and putting the store ahead. Here is a summary of some of Jones's business-getting advice and suggestions:

"The first lesson my salesmen get in salesmanship is to learn to smile. The man who can't smile can't work for me.

"Know your stock and its chief selling points.

"Spread more merchandise on the counter and less on yourself.

"Approach the customer instead of having the customer approach the salesman.

"A customer is our guest and must be treated as such."

About advertising, Mr. Jones says:

"I do not spend my money for space in a telephone directory, hotel register, church cook book, menu card or any other advertising graft. I am a firm believer in newspaper advertising, personal letters, good window displays and personal attention to my customers."

REST ROOM BRINGS WOMEN INTO HARDWARE STORE

Realization that women are the largest buyers, even of hardware, has made many thousands of dollars for the Powell Hardware Co. of El Dorado, Kan.

When J. C. Powell planned a new store building a year or ago he made provision for a woman's rest room. It was finished and furnished comfortably with wicker chairs and couches upholstered in tapestry. There was a phonograph for entertainment if the visitors desired, for Powell handles phonographs and records, so this room makes an ideal salesroom as well as rest room.

When ready Powell began to invite the women of the town and surrounding territory to make this rest room their meeting place down town. He played it up as the best place to have a comfortable visit, and the women accepted his invitation.

Now nearly every day this rest room is the place women name when arranging to meet their friends. It opens on a prominent street, so that a visitor can watch for friends in cars. But best of all from the merchant's standpoint, the room is directly opposite his rather unique display of household utensils. It is the most natural thing in the world for a woman waiting to stroll through the aisles separating these racks and pick out something she needs. Powell says the rest room has been a tremendous drawing card to bring women to his store. Once they are in the habit of coming he gets their business.

THE QUESTION IS— WHICH SIGN WAS TRUE?

There is a yarn going the rounds in London regarding a certain retail grocer of profiteering tendencies who fired an assistant one day when he caught him winking at the local village belle instead of getting on with the window trim. This employe went into the signwriting game and a few moons later got the job of fixing up his former employer's business.

Among other things the grocer wanted the following notice printed on slips and pasted on his store window:

FOR THE PRESENT
WE ARE RELUCTANTLY COMPELLED TO
INCREASE THE PRICE OF CERTAIN ARTICLES
WE SHALL ENDEAVOR TO SELL THEM AT A LOWER PRICE
AS SOON AS POSSIBLE

The notice was done in strips and pasted up in due course. Very soon after there was such a hulabaloo outside the store that the grocer guy thought his place must be on fire. He rushed out to find a huge crowd preparing to bombard his home with old cans, bricks and dirt.

"Whatinel," he began. Then stopped.

"You miserable mattress-faced leech," yelled the crowd. "What do you mean by that?" And it waved divers fingers at the grocer's new notice. The grocer's eyes goggled as he read:

WE SHALL ENDEAVOR TO INCREASE THE PRICE OF CERTAIN ARTICLES
AS SOON AS POSSIBLE
FOR THE PRESENT
WE ARE RELUCTANTLY COMPELLED TO SELL THEM AT A LOWER PRICE

A Matter of Tradition

✤

By DORA MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Alicia jammed her wide-brimmed shade hat an inch farther down on her well-shaped head and toiled on through the blistering sun, up the grass-grown lane and through the knee-deep sorrel and daisies. It was with a sigh of grateful relief that she gained the shade of the pillared porch of the old Caverly house. The door stood ajar.

Opening it, she peeped into the deserted mansion and was lured by its cool shadows. Picking her way carefully over the uneven flooring, she passed through the stately colonial entrance into a wide hall, thence up the somewhat rickety but beautiful staircase and into a great empty front chamber.

Here, on a built-in seat by one of the many-paned windows, from which the glass had long ago fallen, Alicia seated herself, removed the wide shade hat and laid it on the window sill. A cool breeze from the water ruffled her fine brown hair. There was no sound but the drowsy hum of an occasional bee and the soft swish-swash of tiny wavelets on the beach below.

There is a certain sleep-inducing quality in the early afternoon air of a midsummer day that is difficult to resist when one is alone and fairy breezes caress one's eyes. Alicia didn't try very hard.

Presently she was thinking in a confused, half-conscious way of the things that must have happened in this old house, abandoned now, she had been told, for twenty-five years. This old front chamber—how many lives had it welcomed into the world; how many ushered out? How many young brides had looked out of this very window down onto the sparkling ocean?

Alicia's eyes were closed now; she didn't trouble to open them to see just how that sparkling ocean must have looked to the young brides. The hot midday air was an easy victor.

The soft purring of the waves on the pebbly beach became more insistent; the tide was rising. With it came a stronger breeze.

It lifted Alicia's shade hat and wafted it gently down to a resting place amid the sorrel and daisies. Several bees investigated its wreath of gay-colored flowers with disappointing results—and flew away, moralizing, no doubt, on their particular version of the aphorism "All is not gold," etc. Alicia slept on.

Somewhere in the direction of the very rough road from which branched the grassy lane a new sound originated. It was an alien, mechanical sound. If the sleeper had awakened she would have identified it and wondered a little, perhaps.

A powerful car was passing over—or, rather, through—the abandoned thoroughfare. A quarter of a mile from the house it gave up the undertaking and the driver picked his way up the lane like one unfamiliar with his surroundings yet not unprepared for them.

Gaining the level plateau where an unobstructed view of the old mansion could be had the young man paused, and with folded arms stood deep in the sorrel and daisies. Through wide-set, humorous gray eyes he took in the scene before him. "Poor Dad!" he sighed at last, and made his way toward the house.

"Why, even some of the poppies still growing in front of the house!" he exclaimed. Alicia's hat played its practical joke for the second time. But not with such disappointing results this time to the be-fooled. For Pliny Caverly the fourth decided instantly that he would like a girl who wore a hat like that—and there might be reasons why it was important that he should.

Holding the hat gingerly in his hand Pliny stood still and studied his ancestral home at close range. The windows over the porch would be in that front chamber where he was born and where—but somebody was sitting near one of them. Just a glimpse of fine brown hair and a broad forehead, that was all; but it was rather tantalizing to Pliny—for the reason.

Could it be the girl of the poppy hat, sitting up there in that historic front chamber where dad had first seen his mother, when she had come from boarding school with dad's sister for a vacation, the chamber that had been a sort of upstairs sitting room in those days? He'd see, would Pliny, right away; it was important he should know. He thought he liked the soft brown hair and it certainly was a well-modeled forehead, but he knew he liked the hat and what the hat whispered of its owner.

It was very still, that well-shaped head of which he could get but a glimpse. Evidently its owner hadn't noticed his approach. Would it be possible to gain that room unheard? he wondered.

Surely it would be no trespass—it was his house, at all events. Pliny tried it, and succeeded. He reached the doorway on tiptoe, the shade hat still in his hand. There the intruder stood motionless, drinking in the picture before him, the slender girl in a frock of delicate green, the girl with fine brown hair blown lightly about by the ocean zephyrs.

The girl of the poppy hat, indubitably. The right girl, the right girl of all girls. And sleeping quietly on the window seat.

So moveless she seemed, so very still, that suddenly a panic fear smote Pliny. He took a hurried step forward, and Alicia opened her eyes. They looked, first, straight into Pliny's, and then dazedly about the old, dismantled room. "I was thinking of the people who must have lived and died here; and of the brides—why, I must have fallen asleep! You?—"

"Yes," interrupted Caverly, "I found your hat on the grass. And I was thinking of brides, too. Brides—and this room. You see"—Pliny went on like a race horse, giving the girl of the poppy hat no chance to speak—"there is a tradition in the Caverly family that the eldest son always meets his bride for the first time in this room. It held true for three generations."

The girl raised her right hand to her cheek and deliberately pinched it so hard that the red mark, staining the fair skin, was visible to the young man across the room.

Quickly he crossed and sat down beside her. Boldly he did the presumptuous thing of grasping, quite gently, the hand responsible for the blemish. "Why did you do that?" he demanded sternly.

"To make sure I was not dreaming," answered Alicia, drawing away her hand. "Who, pray, are you—who walk into the Caverly mansion, spying on sleeping girls and talking about the traditions of the place?"

Pliny arose and bowed low before Alicia. "I am Pliny Caverly the fourth," he said, "and at your service, fair lady, forever. I was born in this room and on the same day my young mother died. The next week my dad took me away and I've never seen the place till now. Poor dad! He never could bear to come back.

"But I'm here at last, and just in time to find you here. So the tradition is fulfilled for the fourth time. Let's put the house in order and live happily ever after. What do you say?"

Alicia gave the fourth Caverly just one instant's glance, and there was the faintest, tiniest, remotest suggestion of the shadow of a smile at one corner of her mouth. But she looked hurriedly at her watch, jumped to her feet and replied:

"I say that I'm due at a garden party at five and it's half after four now. It's very interesting nonsense you talk, but I can't stay to listen."

"Oh, you don't have to," briskly answered Pliny. "I'll just go along with you. You see I'm going to always go along with you, through life. The Caverly traditions, you know, always come true."

Just taking things by and large, what, think you, were Pliny's chances?

SOME EXCUSE FOR FAILURE

But Civil Service Candidate Who Could Not Place Goofusburg Did Not Pass His Examination.

Now that the government departments have begun to cut down their forces, examinations are the order of the day. Incidentally, the civil service commission is finding that many grades are unusually high, for about half the woman war workers who came to Washington originally left jobs of teaching the young idea how to shoot. Hence, they just naturally tie the average civil service question into a bowknot and hang the whole works on the line in no time.

Every now and then, however, the commission manages to dig up a question that no one can answer. Such a one was found recently for a constituent of Representative Ayres of Kansas.

Driving through Maryland, a few days ago, with this particular constituent, the congressman was somewhat obfuscated when his friend pointed out one ramshackle house, standing in the middle of a cornfield, and asked:

"Can you name that county seat for me, congressman?"

"No, I can't," Ayres said, "and I don't think any one else can."

"Oh, yes, it can be done," came the reply. "That is Goofusburg."

"Well," responded the congressman "that may be true, but it doesn't appear that Goofusburg has been functioning for some time."

"Quite right," continued the unfortunate constituent. "It went out of business as a county seat right after the Revolutionary war. I believe, but that didn't prevent the civil service commission from asking me to locate it recently. I failed."

Had Fallen Down.

When the Los Angeles boys got in the other day, the papers said joy was unconfined, but they were wrong. At least there was one doughboy whose face was not wreathed in smiles.

Yes, the folks were there, and so was the one and only girl, but, especially with the girl, the doughboy seemed embarrassed.

"Gee whiz," whispered a buddy in his ear, "why the shyness? She's crazy for you to kiss her."

"Nix," wailed our hero, "she'll be off me for life in a minute. When I went away I promised her the kaiser's helmet, and I ain't got it, see?"—Los Angeles Times.

Valuations.

"Why does a woman value pearls and diamonds so highly?"

"I dunno," replied Farmer Corntossel. "I guess maybe it's for somethin' of the same reason these summer girls think more of a four-leaf clover than they do of a whole load of hay."

Charlie Chaplin In Russia.

It is pleasant to hear something amusing by way of news from Petrograd: and into that category falls the statement that on the streets of the Russian capital one may meet young men with a peculiar sort of walk, which reveals, as one comes to know it better, that they are trying to walk like Charlie Chaplin. For though the old social order has crumbled and chaos rules until such time as one knows not what new social order may be established, the motion-picture theatres continue to amuse their audiences, and Charlie Chaplin is a popular favorite. Bolshevist Russia laughs at the comedian of the films in unison with England and the United States; but Russia, as report has it, carries admiration farther and tries to walk like him. Perhaps circumstances in Russia particularly point to the excellence of Mr. Chaplin's filmed philosophy, for when his admirers are asked why they admire him, one typical answer is said to be that they like the actor "because he always turns up smiling after the most outrageous misfortunes."

NO CHRISTMAS BONUS FOR CIVIL SERVICE

BUT MORE MONEY WILL BE PAID MONTHLY TILL PRICES FALL

The Toronto World is authority for the statement that an order-in-council has not yet been passed sanctioning the payment of a bonus to the Ontario civil servants. As previously pointed out there was no appropriation from which the money could be taken, but the whole question has now assumed an entirely new aspect.

The Government is considering an altogether new scheme whereby the bonus will not be paid in a lump sum but rather spread over the monthly pay so long as the high cost of living continues. Thus the payment will be in the nature of a temporary increase of salary.

Conferences were held yesterday between the committee of the cabinet and Mr. McCutcheon, the civil service commissioner, when the plan outlined was practically agreed upon and now only awaits the sanction of the full cabinet. In any case there will be no bonus for Christmas.

New Competitive System

It is also announced that the competitive system of examination for civil servants' positions will generally obtain in future. Positions vacant are now being advertised for the first time in the history of the Ontario civil service. The idea is to coordinate the whole service. If a vacancy occurs in one department it will, if possible, be filed by the most capable employe in that or any other department. Otherwise applicants will be advertised for. The first advertisement is for a stationary engineer.

It is hoped in time also to eliminate the recommendation which have hitherto been made for filling minor positions such as junior clerkships and stenographers, and substitute the competitive system.

LOWER TARIFF FARMERS' IDEA

N. T. A. CRERAR DENIES THAT THEY WOULD ABOLISH ALL DUTIES

RECIPOCITY WITH U. S.

AND DIRECT TAX TO MAKE UP DEFICIT QUIETS FEELING OF UNREST

Toronto, Dec. 19.— In discussing before the United Farmers of Ontario the tariff policy recently adopted by the Canadian Council of Agricultrue, Hon. T. A. Crerar, president of the United Grain Growers, pointed out at Massey Hall last night that, in his opinion, an all round reduction of tariff is not, as some have pronounced it, a class legislation, but that on the contrary, it would be getting away from class legislation inasmuch as it would mean the removal of special privileges. At the same time, Hon. Mr. Crerar admitted that reduction of tariff would necessitate some other form of taxation to maintain the revenues needed to keep the finances of the Dominion in a workable condition, and the solution he had to provide that revenue was direct taxation. Hon. Mr. Crerar recognized that most people object to direct taxation, as it appears to them much more formidable than an indirect tax, but he declared that in the end it would work out for the good of the country. His argument to establish this point was that when people pay their taxes indirectly, in the form of so much on each pair of shoes or other articles of clothing they do not appreciate that they are paying it out and therefore do not take a keen interest in public affair; but when they are compelled to hand out the money directly to the Government, then they will become deeply interested in economy and honesty of administration.

Hon. Mr. Crerar admitted that the most important plank in the platform of the Canadian Council of Agriculture was their pronouncement calling for a general reduction of the tariff. The cardinal principle in the United Farmer policy, he declared, is their belief that protection as a fiscal policy is economically unsound and morally wrong." This principle has been criticized on the grounds that the United Farmers were aiming to do away with all tariff, but that, he asserted was a false view of the aims of the farmers. In outlying their tariff policy Hon. Mr. Crerar repeated that it calls for: an immediate substantial, all-round reduction of the tariff; complete free trade with the Old Country; an effort to obtain reciprocity with the United States in natural products; admission of agricultural implements, oils, etc., from the United States free of duty; and tariff concessions to the Old Country whenever such are extended to other nations.

HOW THE FORTY

and to as far as such extend, that he has been unable to secure employment, or to be retained in such. Many men secure a place, to find in a short time that the job has lapsed from causes. The form filled in, it is taken to the Patriotic Fund Office an the formal document made up, giving all particulars of dependents, (if any), and such other facts as to enable the Distribution Committee to view the application and reach the conclusion, that assistance is desirable and needed. If any doubt exists, the application is investigated.

Meet Monday Night.

On Monday evening the Executive. Finance and Distribution Committees of the local Branch of the Fund will meet to formally take over the Trust from the Government, so far as this district is concerned. At this meeting the appointment of the present Distribution Committee to handle the Emergency Fund, (or appropriation,) will be confirmed, or at least enough of the membership to form an efficient working committee. This committee takes up and accepts all responsibility that the records will be accurately kept, that all acounting shall be made and that scrupulous care shall be taken that the terms of the trust be not abused by any neglect or oversight of the Committee. It is pointed out from Ottawa that a very strict audit is required and will be made. The local Auditor of the Patriotic Fund will also be empowered to check up expenditures and verify payments.

Emergency Allowances

It is permitted to make on application, and on a hasty verification of the facts, an allowance, such as would represent the sum covering a two-week period. Further payments follow on verification of the fact that the applicant has not as yet been given employment, that he has not declined employment, if at all suitable, and that he is still in the city or vicinity.

The facts necessary for verification are to be obtained from the Information and Service Branch, which is instructed to keep in touch with the ex-member of the forces and his chances for employment. In certain cases transportation can be allowed if the applicant has a bonafide opportunity offered to work in some place outside the district.

The rates, or proportions of allowance are fixed as being the same as under the Patriotic Fund Post Discharge Allowance Schedule, and which is in operation in the city, based on the present needs of those participating. From the maximum allowance deductions are to be made for any present income, pension, sums accruing from other sources, and is based on, in the cases of married men, the number of dependents. It is hoped that great good will follow, inthat the positive relief to the recipients will allay a state of anxiety that snould not be left for the ex-member of the forces to have to grapple with.

Distribution Committee

Some enquiry has been made, locally, as to the Distribution Committea and how constituted. The following excerpt, from the provisions of the Order in Council, define the situation:

METHOD AND POLICY. Clause 2—

> That for the purpose as outlined above (in the Order in Council), there shall be formed a separate department of the Patriotic Fund, (as in any or several places,) for the administration of this appropriation, and an ex-member of the Forces shall be a member of each local committee dealing with the administration of this branch of the Fund's activities." it is further added, as explanatory, that wherever the term, "Ex-Member of the Forces," or "applicant" is referred to, they shall represent and include any person who was enrolled or drafted during the late war. For service in the Military Force of Canada, on the high seas in the Naval Force, in the Air Force, of Canada, in any other Branch or Force of His Majesty, or of his Allies, provided that such persons have seen service overseas, or in the opinion of the local committee of the Canadian Patriotic Fund, are in need of assistance by reason of their military service."

It may be added that the period shall be given is for only the months of December, January, February and March, the latter three months of the incoming year, 1920. As the operation of the scheme has been delayed, it is permissive to make payments to some extent as retroactive for the month of December. Also in what are noted as being extreme cases some further payments may be extended into March, 1920.

A placard, or poster, has been issued, and copies will be immediately distributed, calling the attention of ex-members of the forces to the provisions of the Order in Council. This is done that fullest publicity be made and that all cases be brought to attention of the organization. It may be added that the intention is to assist, and that no feeling of difference, or reluctance to apply need be entertained, so long as the facts are such as will support the application. The service has been made as simple as possible. There is no desire to pry in to the private affairs of any one, only to ascertain such information as will support the claim or wish that asistance be made. The utmost consideration will be used to enter and in considering cases, as has invariably been the rule in the past. That which concerns each man or family is entirely private, only so far as to enable the necessary records to be made.

All applications should be made direct to the office of the Patriotic Fund or to the Information and Service Branch of the S. C. R. It is not necessary to apply through any other local organization and preferably the service wishes to deal with applicants direct as the quickest and shortest way of having assistance determined and allowed.

Make This a Musical Christmas

Make This a Musical Christmas—

This is indeed a splendid motto for this Christmas. This is the year for real rejoicing, and music at all times is symbolic of festivity.

The NEW EDISON
"The Phonograph with a Soul"

will provide for your Christmas this year the finest in music. Any phonograph maker can say that, but can he go further and say that his phonograph reproduces the human voice to the point where it cannot be detected from the singer's own voice?

All over Canada this last few years there have been public tests proving Edison's claim that he "RE-CREATES" music. If you will come to our store we would be delighted to play some of your favorites on the NEW EDISON, "The Phonograph with a Soul."

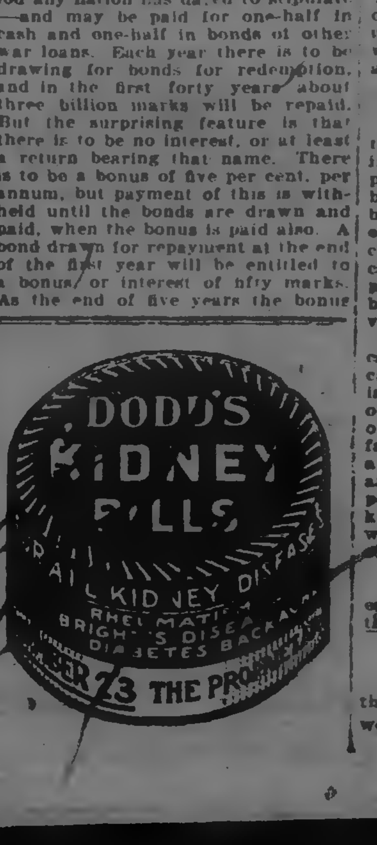
Lottery Loan Makes Millionaires

HOW would you like to be a millionaire? There is no need for an answer, unless you already happen to be one. If you desire strongly enough to have a million, and will run far enough after it, you have a straight gambling chance for it by moving to Germany. Ah, that is the "but" in the case. Who would want to go to Germany for the sake of being a millionaire? Only those whose gambling instinct dominates every other desire. They say that in Berlin and other large German cities, every night there are thousands of great gambling dens going full blast, at which millions of marks are won and lost. These gambling dens are the resort of men and women alike, and there is a great fever among those with money to try their luck. The German Government needs money desperately, and seeing this huge, ruinous gambling mania, asked itself why it could not have some state gambling. It decided to have a great lottery loan, which would make ten millionaires each year. To induce subscriptions on a large scale, in spite of the ruin of the country, it has begun a loan fashion that has since spread to France, and has even a large following in Britain.

Germany's new lottery loan is the most gigantic thing the world has ever seen. Who would not put a few marks in it on the chance of becoming a millionaire, one of the ten to be made each year? It is safe betting that French, Dutch, and British money will find a way into Germany to run that chance. The loan is to be for an amount of a billion marks, or not much more than a billion dollars. The bonds that are to be taken will be for eighty years—the longest period any nation has dared to stipulate—and may be paid for one-half in cash and one-half in bonds of other war loans. Each year there is to be drawing for bonds for redemption, and in the first forty years about three billion marks will be repaid. But the surprising feature is that there is to be no interest, or at least a return bearing that name. There is to be a bonus of five per cent. per annum, but payment of this is withheld until the bonds are drawn and paid, when the bonus is paid also. A bond drawn for repayment at the end of the first year will be entitled to a bonus or interest of fifty marks. As the end of five years the bonus would be 250 marks.

There is no interest on the deferred payment of interest, and this means that on the whole sum paid in, there is an accumulation of interest for the Government. This fund is the reservoir from which the ten millionaires are to be created each year. As the interest on five billion marks at five per cent. would be twenty-five million marks, most of it deferred, there would be ample to allow for the payment of ten millions to ten individuals, especially as in the course of time, interest upon the interest would accumulate. But the German financial genius that conceived this scheme would go further. Twice each year there are to be lottery drawings, at which there will be 2,500 prizes, with total prize money of 25,000,000 marks. The maximum is five prizes of a million marks each, and the lowest is a thousand prizes of a thousand marks each. In addition to this, every second certificate or bond drawn for repayment gets a bonus of a thousand marks if drawn during the first thirty years, two thousand marks if drawn during the ensuing ten years, and four thousand marks if drawn during the last forty years. That is, 58 per cent. of the certificates can receive prizes and bonus, apart from interest, while the total prize money distributed through the 80-year period will amount to four billions for lottery drawings, and five and three-quarter billions for bonus on every second certificate. This is nearly ten billion marks.

Surely this is gambling with a vengeance. To get a national loan of five billion marks, during eighty years, the nation will repay, besides principal, nearly ten billions in prizes. Up to 25,000 marks, holdings of the loan are exempt from succession duty taxes, and profits from prizes are exempt from income taxes. The ten millionaires each year will feel cheaty when they escape income taxes, when everyone else is paying everything but a living cost to the state. Any old subscriber has the right, after twenty years, to call for payment of bonds, but there will be a discount of ten per cent. on them. This gigantic gamble is the first effort of the Socialist Government to raise money, and the result will be watched with curious interest.—Toronto Mail and Empire.



Laziness Investigated.

Two women, among other scientific persons, are to be engaged during the coming term in a novel experiment of which the British schoolboy and schoolgirl are to be "the vile body." The two women have obtained leave to enter during lessons the classrooms of a certain famous educational establishment for the purpose of testing the energy put forth by the pupils during the course of various studies.

It is believed that by purely chemical, perhaps also electric means, you can discover just how much energy is being exerted, whether physically or mentally of any group of workers or any single worker, whether in a factory or in a classroom. There are a variety of methods which help one another; but the chief is to test the percentage in the air of that well-known chemical, carbon dioxide, which we breathe out increasingly as an energy is increased.

When the oranges, custards or eggs are served blue dishes make them look appetizing.

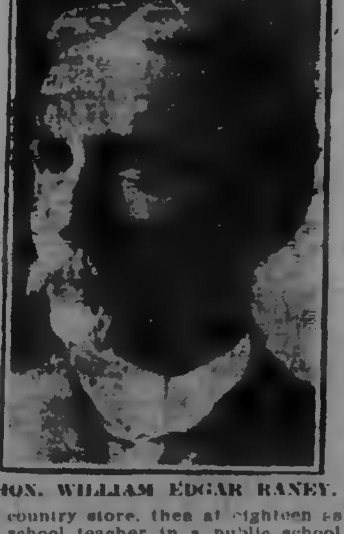
"He Is a True Friend,
A Bonnie Fighter,
And Never a Quitter"

HON. WILLIAM EDGAR RANEY, K.C., the new Attorney-General of Ontario, comes of a blending of French Huguenot and United Empire Loyalist stock. When Col. De Bernard's regiment was disbanded after the American Revolutionary War his troopers were given land in Eastern Ontario. A farm on the banks of the St. Lawrence, a mile east of what is now the village of Aultsville, fell to Frederick Rennee, as he spelt his name. Into this wilderness of the eighties of the eighteenth century, Frederick Rennee brought a bride from Montreal, also of French ancestry, but of the ancient faith. Of this union on the original homestead and of the fourth generation was born in due course in December, 1859, a great-grandson of Frederick Rennee, William Edgar Raney.

In the early years of the nineteenth century, to the adjoining farm to the east, came Richard Whitney, father of Sir James Whitney, and for many years Richard Whitney and John Raney were pioneer neighbors.

Frederick Rennee was one of the first members of what is said to have been the first Protestant church in what is now Ontario, a Union Lutheran and Presbyterian Church, located about two miles east of Morrisburg, where its successor still stands.

In the sixties and seventies there were still log school houses in Eastern Ontario, and to one of these and to the Aultsville school the embryo Attorney-General was a pupil. Then at the age of fifteen he went out to fend for himself, first as a clerk in a country store, then at eighteen as a school teacher in a public school and afterwards as a pupil and teacher in the Collegiate Institute at St. Catharines, then under the headmastership of the late Dr. John Seath.



HON. WILLIAM EDGAR RANEY.

In due course the young man registered at Toronto as a student-at-law, taking concurrently with his course at Osgoode Hall, a course at Trinity University and graduating with the degree of Bachelor of Civil law and the gold medal for his year.

In politics Mr. Raney describes himself as an independent Liberal. While a law student at Toronto he was one of the founders of the Young Men's Liberal Club, but in 1904 he lent his aid to bring in the Whitney Administration, and from that date until the election of 1914 he was a supporter of that Government. In 1914 he led a forlorn hope against Mr. Gooderham in south-west Toronto in a "Banish the Bar" campaign.

Always a crusader against wrong in whatever form he saw it, Mr. Raney directed his energies chiefly against the drink traffic and the evil of race-track gambling. Some of his foes regarded him as a "narrow-gauge" reformer, but they had to admit that he was a fair fighter. His friends and associates credit him with a sanity and balance that greatly steadied his fellow-crusaders.

"He is a true friend, a bonnie fighter, never a quitter, and a horse to work," is the sentence size-up of the man by one of his most intimate friends. "He's not one of the 'leave it to George' kind. Nothing makes him so mad as anything that savors of injustice. If he sees anything unfair he wants to hit it."

He has a brother who is a Methodist minister, but the new Attorney-General is a Presbyterian.—Toronto Star Weekly.

"Pompey" Elliott's Popularity.

Ask any newsboy in Melbourne who "Pompey" Elliott is and he will tell you instantly and with pride that he is Brig.-Gen. H. E. Elliott, one of the most aggressive leaders in the whole war. The newsboy knows all about "Pompey" Elliott for he met him recently at the unveiling of an honor board containing the names of 530 former newsboys who had fought at the front, 38 of whom did not return. He saw the general chatting with his Diggers, and he heard him talk of Gallipoli and France. One might search from Darwin to Hobart and not find a finer illustration of the reality of Australian democracy.

DOCTOR ADVISED HIM TO TAKE IT

A. F. ROBERTS, SUCCESSFUL CATTLE DEALER, GAINS 16 POUNDS IN 60 DAYS TAKING TANLAC.

"One of the best doctors in Colorado advised me to take Tanlac, and it has not only overcome my troubles but I have gained sixteen pounds since I began taking it sixty days ago," said A. F. Roberts, who lives at Rocky Ford, Alberta, Canada, a few days ago.

Mr. Roberts is one of the largest cattle dealers in his section of the country, and before moving to Canada a short time ago, he had spent most of his life in Colorado, U.S.A.

"I can not understand why Tanlac enjoys such wide popularity both in Canada and the United States," continued Mr. Roberts, "and since it has done me so much good, I know that it is a very dependable medicine and deserves all the praise that is being given it. For the past two years I have suffered from stomach trouble, and when I commenced taking this Tanlac, it was almost impossible for me to retain anything I ate. I was very nervous and never got a good nights sleep, and finally got so weak and rundown that I was hardly able to get about. I often had dizzy spells and was bothered a great deal with constipation.

"My Physician certainly knew what he was doing when he prescribed Tanlac for me, for it has done the work for me, as I am as healthy and strong now as I ever was in my life. In fact it has done much more for me than I expected it would do. I have a fine appetite and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly, and I never have the slightest sign of stomach trouble of any kind. I am no longer bothered with constipation, and never have those dizzy spells any more. I have regained all my strength too, and that nervousness has left me, and I sleep like a log every night. In fact, I am simply enjoying perfect health again, and I give Tanlac credit for it all."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

A Throne Room in Mogul India

INOTED that the throne on which the King, Shahjahan, was seated stood in front of, and near to, the palace of the women, so that as soon as he came out of his door he reached the throne. It is like a table, adorned with all sorts of precious stones and flowers, in enamel and gold. There are three cushions—a large one, five spans in diameter and circular, which serves as a support to the back, and two other square ones; one on each side; also a most lovely mattress; for in Turkey, and throughout the whole of Hindustan, they do not sit upon chairs, but upon carpets or mattresses, with their legs crossed. Around the throne, at the distance of one pace, are railings of gold, of the height of one cubit, within which no one enters except the king's sons.

Below the throne, several feet lower than it, a space is left, sufficient for the secretary (? wazir) and the greatest officials of the court. This space is surrounded by a silver railing. Near it stand "grusberdares" (gurz-bardars)—that is to say, the bearers of golden maces, whose duty it is to carry orders from the court to princes of the blood royal. After a descent of a few more steps there is another space of greater size, where are the captains and other officials, also the "grusberdares" (gurz-bardars) with silver maces, who convey the orders of the court to the governors, generals, and other princes. These are placed with their backs to a railing of wood painted vermilion which surrounds the space.

The hall in which stood the royal seat is adorned with twenty highly decorated pillars, which support the roof. This roof stretches far enough to cover the spaces enclosed within the silver railing, and is hidden halfway by an awning of brocade. Further, a canopy over the king's head is upheld by four golden pillars.

Outside the wooden railing is a great square, where, close to the railing, stand nine horses on one side and nine on the other, all saddled and equipped. Near to the pillars are brought certain elephants on every day that the king gives audience and there they make their obeisance. Behind the horses already spoken of were four handsomely adorned elephants, and in the square a considerable number of soldiers stand on guard. At the end was a great hall where were stationed the players on instruments, and these, upon the king's appearing to give audience, played very loudly, to give notice that the king was already in the audience hall.

The silence preserved was astonishing, and the order devoid of confusion. For this purpose there are officials, whose business it is to see that the people are placed in proper order. Some of these officials held gold sticks in their hands, and these came within the silver railing. The others carried silver sticks, and they took great heed that throughout the court nothing was done that could displease the king.—From "A Pepys of Mogul India" (tr. and abridged from the "Storia Do Mogor" of Niccolao Manucci, by William Irving.

Production of Scent.

No substance that refuses to dissolve in water has an odor. It is the actual substance itself, floating in particles in the air, as in the case of light and sound. The damper a thing is the more powerful the odor it gives off. A pleasant proof of the fact can be had by walking in a garden after rain. It is the vapor of a liquid that smells and not the liquid in the mass itself.

One Common Tongue.

"There was one word," wrote an American Red Cross nurse serving in a French army hospital, "that we quickly learned in five languages. It was the word that came most often to the lips of sick or wounded soldiers when suffering or delirium wrung utterance from them. It is Mutter, mere, moeder, madre and mother."

Natural Cloth.

In tropical South America the inner bark of a species of tree yields an excellent cloth, the fibers of which are interwoven much as if the fabric came from a loom. All that is necessary is to wash and beat out the cellular stuff from the interstices and, when dried, it is light, flexible and altogether suitable for making up into garments.

The Australian daily, weekly and monthly publications are considered great institutions, especially the dailies, and the consumption of newsprint alone is large, probably running into 4,000 tons monthly for the commonwealth.

Torch of One's Own.

As Plutarch tells us: "It is well to go for a light to another man's fire, but not to tarry by it, instead of lighting a torch of one's own." A torch of one's own! That is a possession worth having, whether it be a flaming beacon on the hilltop or a tiny taper in the window. We cannot tell how far a little candle throws its beams, nor who is laying his course by its flickering light. The most that we can do—and it is also the least that we should do—is to tend the flame carefully and to keep it steadily.—Brander Matthews.

Cloth From Bark of Tree.

The famous "tapa" cloth of Polynesia is made from the inner bark of the paper mulberry. When of the finest quality it is bleached to snowy whiteness and fine as muslin. In tropical Africa the inner bark of a leguminous tree is utilized in the same way. Indeed, it is surprising to learn how widely tree barks are employed as material for clothing the world over. And in the West Indies grows the "lace-bark tree," which yields a delicate tissue so like lace that many articles of feminine adornment are made from it.

How to Make Money Go.

Pick up a half dollar with two needles, or pins, by placing the points on the milled edge of the coin diametrically opposite each other. By keeping the needles firmly pressed against the coin it will be held with sufficient firmness. Then blow against the coin, directing your breath either above or below the center line, and it will spin round at a great rate, producing a buzzing sound.

Paths of Democracy.

To accustom oneself to disregard the accidents of manner and station sufficiently to see the man as he is, to have a clear sight for genuine character under any of the disguises of unfamiliarity and prejudice, to know how simple and how common are the elements that go to the making of manhood, are the paths that lead to belief in democracy.—George E. Woodberry.

Priceless Persian Rugs.

It is a well known fact that an Oriental never sets foot upon his rug with even the soft sandals that he wears. When his foot is set upon his rug it is entirely bare, and this is the reason why oriental rugs woven hundreds of years ago are still perfectly preserved. The hunting rugs of Persia have a great historical value, as they depict authentically how the phoenix and elephant were hunted in ancient days. Mounted hunters pursuing the lion, deer, and other creatures, both fabulous and real, form the groundwork of all of these rugs.

African Pigmies.

The historian Herodotus, 2500 years ago, described the African pigmies which he located near the source of the Nile. Herodotus, for once, told the truth, for it is in that region that modern explorers have found them. Stanley described them as having huge stomachs and short legs, and as "leaping about like grasshoppers." One specimen he saw was a full grown young woman, three inches short of three feet in height, but "perfectly formed and of a glistening sleekness of body, with absurdly large eyes."

Use of Drinking Water.

Drink whatever water you desire with meals but do not take ice water, and do not use water merely to wash food down your throat. Water aids digestion by helping to liquefy the food and by bringing the gastric juices into closer contact with the food particles. Water does not affect the enzymes and weaken them by dilution as some people maintain, because the power of the enzymes depends not on the percentage which is present, but upon their total amount and chemical composition.

First Maine Post Office.

In 1775 the first post offices in Maine were established at Kennebunk, Falmouth and Bath. The mails were carried by carriers on foot or on horseback and the average week's mail did not amount to five letters at each office. The rates were high, 8¼, 12½, 18¾, 25 and 37½ cents, according to the distance the letter had to be carried, and double the rate when the letter was on more than one sheet of paper.

The Laborer and His Hire.

Billy had been running errands for his mother, and to show her appreciation she offered him a penny. Billy looked disgusted and, glancing into her face, he exclaimed: "Oh, be a sport, ma, and pay me what it's worth!"

Super Butchery.

"We caught him, forced him at the pistol point to give up the stolen property, and then cut off one of his ears. 'It will be both ears, and both hands, if I catch you again.'"—Pictorial Magazine.

SOCIAL EVENING AT BUSINESS COLLEGE

TEACHERS AND STUDENTS JOIN IN PROGRAM OF MUSIC AND DANCING

One of the most enjoyable concerts and dances of the season was given last night by the students and staff of the Peterborough Business College in the main class room. The room was decorated with stringers of red and green, the blackboards being draped with large Union Jacks. The concert programme was as follows:

Piano Selection.—Mr. Brown.
Solo.—Mr. Mercier.
Solo.—Miss Nicholls.
Piano Selection.—Mr. Haddow.
Solo.—Mr. Mathews.

The dancing started about 9:30. Seven numbers were rendered with encores. Refreshments were then served by the ladies, after which more dancing was indulged in.

The teaching staff, composed of Mr. and Mrs. A. J. McKone, Miss Wilson, Miss Hurley, Mrs. K. Tracey, Mr. Wilson and Mr. Fields, are to be congratulated upon the splendid success of the evening's entertainment. The whole-hearted way in which the staff worked was a credit to the Business College.

The Travellers' Palm.

All the early explorers in Madagascar spoke with enthusiasm of one tree in particular which was common and of such strange appearance that it formed quite a feature of many parts of the islands. This afterward became well-known as the Travellers' Palm, though it is not a real palm at all. The leaves are spread out at the top of the trunk like a huge open fan. They are bright green shining leaves and usually 12 feet long and the fan being held aloft on a leafless stem some 20 feet high forms a striking object. But the use which has given the tree its name lies in the quantity of pure water which is held in the large sheath at the base of the leaf-stalk. This can be tapped from beneath and a draft of wholesome water obtained at will. It is thus a boon to travellers wherever it grows and thus earns its name.

Rubber Easy to Cultivate.

After four or five years of semi-cultivation a rubber plantation requires practically no care, except to see from time to time that other trees which may have gotten a start, are cut out. The yield of rubber gum begins about the seventh year under favorable conditions, and continues thereafter indefinitely.

Seek Perfection.

Aim at perfection in everything, though in most things it is unattainable; however, they who aim at it and persevere will come much nearer to it than those whose laziness and despondency make them give it up as unattainable.—Chesterfield.

All in Well-Chosen Library.

Said Emerson: "Consider what you have in the smallest chosen library. A company of the wisest and wittiest men that could be picked out of all the civil countries in a thousand years have set in best order the results of their learning and wisdom. The men themselves were hid and inaccessible, solitary, impatient of interruption, fenced by etiquette; but the thought which they did not uncover to their bosom friend is here written out in transparent words to us, the strangers of another age."

MAY ALLISON SEEN IN NEW METRO ROMANCE

"CASTLES IN THE AIR" LATEST COMEDY TO COME TO EMPIRE

"Castles in the Air," the brilliant comedy romance of which May Allison is the star, will be the feature at the Empire Theatre on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

In this lively and appealing drama Miss Allison enacts the role of Fortuna, a poor but romantic girl who believes that some day, like the heroines of the lurid novels of which she is fond, she will meet a millionaire and have all the happiness of her namesake.

How she does meet the man of wealth but how her own romance comes from another and quite unexpected quarter, are incidents which go to make a play of distinction and charm. Fortuna is a lovable little character—a character of the kind in which Mary Allison excells—and her dreams and expectations, and her eventual happiness, combine to create a picture of winning appeal.

The clever star is surrounded by a notable cast among whom are Ben Wilson, Clarence Burton, Walter I. Percival, Irene Rich, "Mother" Anderson, Viola Dolan and Ruth Maurice. The play was directed by George D. Baker and was adapted from the story by Kate Jordan.

The woman who thoroughly understands men may not be able to write good poetry but she is apt to be a good cook.

A St. Louis girl ate half a wedding cake and retired to dream of her future husband. The next morning she declared she would rather live and die an old maid than marry the man she saw in her dreams.

EDITOR'S MAIL

Editor Review.— Many returned men in this city have remarked on the peculiar way in which the civilian in the audiences of different places of amusement in this city, carry on during the playing of "The King" at the end of a performance. If one is looking carefully at an audience while this is being sung or played, it will be observed that a number of men and nearly all the ladies are standing still, at attention, as they say in the army. Another party of men will be leaving the theatre or putting on their coats, apparently quite oblivious of the fact that they are doing anything unpatriotic. I would not go so far as to call it unpatriotism, but it is certainly an insult to the King, and also to the management of the place of amusement. It is only a mark of respect to our present rulers but surely the civilians don't need to be taught how to act in a theatre by the returned men. If we can do it and are proud to do it, than the civilians who make a practice of leaving the theatre during the playing of the National Anthem, should be doubly glad of the opportunity of paying some slight mark of esteem to our present King George V.

Yours truly,

VETERAN.

ANNUAL AT HOME OF PETERBORO CLUB

ENJOYABLE EVENING SPENT AT CARDS AND DANCING

The annual At Home of the Peterborough Club held last night was in every way a successful entertainment. Over 80 couples enjoyed themselves greatly, dancing and playing bridge.

The club rooms were beautifully decorated with flags and Christmas decorations that gave them a bright and cheerful appearance. The new dance floor was utilized and received many compliments from the dancers.

The music was supplied by Moher Fitzgerald, Seymour and Hughes. The wives of the directors were patronesses of the function.

CHRISTMAS AT ST. ANDREW'S

Appropriate Service With Special Musical Service Tomorrow

Our debt to the child that came to Bethlehem long ago is incalculable. There was never a Christmas until He came nor ever a year without one since He died for us men and our salvation. The true Christmas spirit has all its springs in Him—giving, thinking and doing for others—but in the midst of all the bustle of buying and wrapping and mailing may our hearts pay homage to Christ Himself, and may tomorrow, "the Lord's day"—the last Sunday before Christ Day—be memorable in Peterborough because of the things going up to all the churches to give God thanks for his unspeakable gift and to join in reverent worship and adoining praise.

In St. Andrew's Church there will be Christmas messages morning and evening. The evening service will be notable for the special Christmas music which the choir has been preparing for some time. The church has been suitably decorated by the members of the Young Men's Guild and young men and women in the city without a church home will find themselves welcomed and among friends.

She Didn't Find All.

"Is that all you found in my pocket?"

"A rip under the sleeve, but, of course, you were not looking for anything like that."

What has become of the old-fashioned girl who, when a love affair went wrong, pined away and died?

SOCIAL SERVICE WORK IN THE UNIVERSITY

"A school which studies life," one student called it, and by this he meant not life as we find it in the "Ward" in Toronto or any other poor district alone, but life as it really is in all its interdependence and solidarity. It is the realization of this interdependence which has led many to question not only the justice but the necessity of social evils. It has inspired the effort, which is being justified, to apply science to their solution, and in short has led many from the study of social science to the performance of social service. Some of those who travel this road will serve as privates in the ranks; others as officers who will initiate and direct social advances.

Of the student in training for social work in the University, ten lecture courses are required. The first four of these—Evolution of Modern Industry, Economics, Psychology and Ethics—deal with conditions and principles of social work. The remaining six courses prescribed apply directly to the branch of social work towards which the student aspires. For example, if planning to enter the field of industrial investigation, the student will take the Social Treatment of Poverty, Community Work, Social and Industrial Hygiene, Industrial Problems and Industrial Investigation If Child Welfare is the goal the courses will be Social Treatment of Poverty, Child Welfare, Hygiene, Recreation and Mental Hygiene—and so with other subjects in which the student may specialize in which courses having definite application are prescribed.

But lecture courses and long bibliographies are not all. The student also does field work. This in order that he may have intimate acquaintance with the conditions and problems which he is studying while at the same time he acquires some technique in methods of dealing therewith. To this end a series of visits of observation or "Cook's tour," as the students call them, is arranged to institutions and agencies of various types Amongst the institutions visited recently are the Preventorium, The House of Industry, The Children's Aid Society, Alexandra Industrial School, Boys' Naval Brigade Training Ships, etc. Visits to large factories are another interesting feature. And in addition to this there is attendance at various meetings, open forums, Home and School Councils Municipal and Labour Temple and trade union meetings—in short, an attempt to keep in touch with all types of community organization and group effort toward improving living and working conditions. And lastly, each student is attached or "apprenticed out" to some agency doing social work. There, carefully supervised, so that his inexperience may not do damage, he gains practical experience in the performance of social work.

This briefly, is the plan of work in the Department which is fortunate in claiming Professor MacIver as Director. The entire enrolment numbers over 400, and 52 of these are full-time students. They are there because of a compelling interest in social work and a belief in its opportunities for service. Sensible enough to seek a well-rounded interesting life for themselves, they are at the same time unselfish enough to demand it for others. Their zest for work and play in proper proportions is evidenced by their zeal for study and field work, and by their enjoyment of teas, basketball, art and all the good things of life. Practical enough to realize the necessity for careful study of social science, they are withal idealists in their belief that the world will some day be made a happy wholesome place for every one.

WON THIRD PRIZE FOR CHRISTMAS POEM

MISS CAMILLA SANDERSON, FORMERLY OF PETERBOROUGH SCORES SUCCESS.

Some time ago the Christian Guardian offered three prizes for the best Christmas carol, the competition to be open to America. The result has been announced and Miss Camilla Sanderson, formerly of this city, but now a resident of Cleveland, O., wins the third prize for the following beautiful Christmas hymn:

"A stable floor for kingly birth
A manager for a princely bed,
Oh, sing for joy, ye sons of earth,
By all the choirs in glory led.
A son is born of David's line,
A rightful heir to power divine.

"The wise men from the East are there
With treasures rich of myrrh and gold,
His mother marks their reverent air,
Her tender arms His form enfold.
They pour their offerings, rare and sweet,
In humble worship at His feet.

"The shepherds hear the angels sing,
They marvel at the glorious light,
And into Bethlehem they bring
The messages of this wondrous night,
They come to find that holy One—
The Christ of God, His chosen Son.

"Join every voice with loud acclaim
The mighty hallelujah song
Emmanuel shall be His name,
Anthems of praise to Him belong,
Good-will and peace to man from heaven,
Through Christ, the new-born Saviour, given."

Miss Sanderson will be remembered by a host of friends in this city, both as a writer and as a leader in all sorts of social work. She was formerly Canadian secretary of the Barnado homes. Her father was the late Rev. John Sanderson, a pioneer Methodist minister in this district, who made his home here after his superanuation and who is buried in Little Lake Cemetery. Mr. R. J. Sanderson, of Braidwood avenue, is a brother.

Miss Sanderson is well known in Canada and the United States as a writer of religious and general verse. Her poems have been published widely in the Guardian and other Canadian papers. A year or so ago a little volume, "Good Morning," containing a collection of her writings, was published and received a good deal of favorable comment. Although for the present, residing in Cleveland, she is a thorough Canadian and has had a wide experience in social welfare work

Christmas Cantata at Trinity Methodist Church.

A rare treat is in store for those who hear the Christmas cantata, "The Adovation" in Trinity Church Sunday night. This will be the first rendering of this music in Peterborough. A number of new and beautiful Christmas anthems will be given at the morning service. The pastor's morning theme will be taken from Raphael's famous painting, "The Sistine Madonna," which has been reproduced in the first of the three memorial windows in memory of Flight-Lieut. Arthur Huycke. The services of the day will be full of interest for both young and old. It is Children's Day and Mothers' Day combined. Strangers and visitors are cordially invited.

'WISE OLD BEN

BENJAMIN FRANKLIN once said: "It is a strange anomaly that men should be careful to insure their houses, their merchandise, and yet neglect to insure their lives—surely the most important of all to their families, and far more subject to loss."

ALLIES HOPE TO HAVE PEACE BY CHRISTMAS

Supreme Council Making Every Effort to Have Protocol Signed at Once by Germany so That, Holiday Season May be Celebrated Without a Cloud on the Horizon.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 22. — The Supreme Council, it became known today, is making every effort to reach an understanding with Germany on the question of reparation for the sinking of the German fleet at Scapa Flow so that the protocol may be signed and the ratifications of the Treaty of Versailles exchanged before Christmas. The question was up during a long and busy session of the Council this morning at which the terms of the note replying to the last communication of German representatives were considered. No decision being reached, another session will be held at 7 o'clock this evening.

It is believed that the note, when completed will be handed during the evening to Baron Kurt von Lersner, head of the German mission, in the hope of expediting whatever consideration the German delegation finds necessary to give to it. It was thought today that all else might be disposed of in time to permit the celebration of Christmas in a state of effective peace with Germany, unless that nation maintains certain of her objection to final terms after receiving the Council's note.

W. H. CROUGH, ENNISMORE, IS DIRECTOR OF THE PROPOSED NEW DAIRY COMPANY

Company Will be Capitalized at $250,000 and Work of the Organization Will Begin at Once.

The proposal that has been under consideration for some time to effect an amalgamation of the cheese factories in the Central Ontario District took definite form on Friday, December 19th, when a meeting of the provisional directors was held in Toronto and it was definitely decided to incorporate a company for that purpose. The company will be known as the United Dairymen Cooperative, Limited. It will be capitalized at $250,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $25 each. It was decided to endeavor to accomplish the amalgamation on the same lines as have proven so successful in the case of the Saskatchewan Co-operative Elevator Company and also the Saskatchewan Cooperative Creameries, Limited.

In the afternoon the directors waited on Hon. Manning Doherty, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, and asked him if he would be willing to furnish a third arbitrator to assist in valueing the factories that desire to join the amalgamation. It was pointed out to him also that many factories would desire to have speakers address their meetings to discuss the matter. The proposed company would be sending out speakers for this purpose and Mr. Doherty was asked if the Department of Agriculture would furnish a dairy expert to address the meetings when the services of such an expert were desired. Mr. Doherty agreed to grant both requests.

He stated that he was of the opinion that the proposed company should prove to be greatly in the interests of the dairy industry and said that he was glad to assist any movement that would make it possible for farmers to cooperate more effectively in the control and conduct of their own affairs.

In order to keep the new company in close touch with the United Farmers' Co-operative Company, it was decided to appoint Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary-treasurer of the latter company, as a provisional director of the new company, Mr. Morrison having consented to act in that capacity.

The provisional directors of the new company are R. W. Ireland, of Wellington and Walter Clark of Allisonville, representing Prince Edward County; T. J. Thompson, of Springbrook, John McCaffery of Madoc and Hugh Maloney of Marmora, representing Hastings County; J. E. Galvin, of Lakefield and W. H. Crough of Ennismore, representing Peterborough County, J. J. Morrison of Toronto, and H. B. Cowan of Farm and Dairy, Peterborough. Mr. Cowan will act as secretary-treasurer of the company until the charter has been obtained and the first meeting of the shareholders has been held. Officers of factories desiring to have speakers representing the company address their patrons in reference to this movement are being invited to notify the company to that effect in order that the work of organization may be pushed without delay.

CLYSDALE REMANDED UNTIL WEDNESDAY

CHARGED WITH WRONGFULLY CASHING A CHEQUE—PLEADS A MISTAKE

Stanley Clysdale appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning on a charge of cashing a cheque for which there were no funds in the bank.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who appeared on behalf of the accused, admitted that he had used the cheque without funds to purchase a sweater a Smith's second-hand store, and also that he received $5 in change. He stated, however, that he would attempt to prove that there were funds in the bank at Smith's Falls, upon which Clysdale thought he was drawing the cheque. To do this he required the testimony of Mr. and Mrs. Clysdale, which he could not obtain until Wednesday.

On these grounds the accused was again remanded until Wednesday.

LIQUOR MAY BE IMPORTED INTO ONTARIO AFTER THE BEGINING OF NEW YEAR

Order in Council Placing Embargo on Imports Has Been Lifted—Provinces May Become Dry by Majority Vote When Prebiscite is Submitted.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 22.—Under the Provincial Legislatures Act there will be no interference with the importations of liquor for domestic use. The cancellaton of Federal orders-in-Council, it is admitted here, deals a severe blow at the provincial prohibitory laws. Provincial restrictions on sale remain, but there will be nothing to prevent a resident or a dry area from importing liquor provided he does not import it for sale.

It is expected, however, that some provincial legislatures at any rate will endeavor to strengthen their position. Under the Act passed last session, provincial legislatures may petition the Dominion Government for a plebiscite. Until the legislatures sit and are able to present petitions there is not likely to be any further action by the Federal Government.

Express Co. Not Notified.

Toronto, Dec. 22.—The Canadian Express Co. has not yet been notified by the Government of the lifting of the war-time restrictions on liquor importations on Jan. 1. Until that happens they will not handle any shipments. When it is lifted they expect an "avalanche."

Liquor From United States.

The following is incorporated in a despatch from Ottawa to the Daily Star today:

"It is said that there are four hundred million gallons of intoxicating liquors in the United States which must be exported on Jan. 16 if it is to be got rid of at all. It is suggetsted in some quarters that much of this will find its way into Canada."

Temperance Eyes on Drury.

Although the matter has not yet been definitely decided by the Ontario Government, it is almost certain that a resolution will be introduced at the coming session of the Legislature asking the Dominion Government to take a plebiscite on the question of total prohibition. The questions of the liquor traffic and race track gambling will be tackled immediately by the Provincial Government in view of the action taken yesterday.

23 VICTIMS OF RAILWAY WRECK

SEARCH FOR BODIES IN TANGLED MASS OF DEBRIS CONTINUES

OVER FIFTY WERE INJURED

LATER DETAILS OF RAILWAY TRAGEDY IN MAINE ON SATURDAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Onawa, Maine, Dec. 22. — Search was continued today for bodies in the tangled mass of locomotives and cars piled up along the C. P. R. tracks two miles west of here as a result of the terrible accident on Saturday. The official number of killed stands at twenty-three, and nearly fifty were injured. It was believed that Engineer Fred Wilson of the special train and Engineer William Bagley of the freight, who are missing, would be found burned to death beneath the tenders. Although several of the injured were in a serious condition, some because of exposure to below zero temperature, the doctors stated that most of them would be able to be removed to Montreal today. All of those killed were bound for points in the western provinces.

GIGANTIC THEATRE COMBINE COMPLETED

CHAIN OF PLAY AND PICTURE HOUSES FROM COAST TO COAST

Word was received this morning that the gigantic theatre combine that has been under discussion for some time has been completed in its fullest details. The local Grand Opera House will form a link of the chain of theatres that will stretch from Halifax to Vancouver.

Arrangements have been completed with several American picture syndicates to produce nearly all the great American actors and actresses throughout the entire circuit. Arrangements are also pending with some of the large English companies to come over to this side and produce their own plays.

This is the most gigantic combine that has ever been attempted in this country and what dimension it will eventually assume is not known. At any rate this arrangement should and undobutedly will, bring some of the world's greatest stage and screen artists to the local theatre.

MR. MEHARRY LOSES HIS CASE ON APPEAL

SUPREME COURT HANDED DOWN DECISION AT OTTAWA THIS MORNING

In the case of Meharry vs. Auburn Wollen Mills:

The Supreme Court of Canada delivered judgment today at Ottawa in this case. The court consisted of the Chief Justice Sir Louis Davies, Idington, Duff, Anglin, Brodeur, and Mignault J. J. The appeal was heard on the 27th and 28th days of November last.

The action was brought by Mr. W. J. Meharry against the Auburn Woollen Company for the specific performance of an agreement for the sale of 4.70 acres af gravel lands opposite the gold links for $4,700.0 dated the 8th day of September, 1915 upon which Mr. Meharry has paid $200.00 at the time of signing the agreement and paid a further instalment of $500.00 on the 25th of September, 1915.

He obtained time from the late Mr. Kendry for the payment of the 3rd instalment which became due on the 20th. October, 1915. The last instalment became due on the 8th September 1918.

The agreement contained a drastic forfeiture clause, giving the Company the right to forfeit al' money paid on any default that might take place to deprive Mr. Meharry of all his rights to object him from the property and to retake possesion of his lands.

At the trial in Peterborough on the 19th of February last, Chief Justice Sir Glenholme Falconbridge relieved the plaintiff from forfeiture and granted him specific performance of his contract on payment to the Company of the balance of the purchase money.

The Company appealed from this decision to the Appelate Division of Ontario, consisting of Sir William Meredith, Magee, J. A. Hodgins, J. A. and Latchford J., and this Court on the 19th. of May last set aside the judgment of the Trial Judge, dismissed Mr. Meharry's action with costs, and directed that instalments paid be returned to Mr. Meharry subject to the Company's lien for costs.

From this judgment Mr. Meharry appealed to the Supreme Court of Canada and its judgment is as follows:

Appellant Meharry's appeal dismissed with costs ground of decision Trial Judge found Mehary misapprehended his rights when he wrote his letter drawn in Mr. Peck's office who was acting for the respondent and the Supreme Court of Canada drew the inference Mr. Peck could act for both parties and allow Meharry to abandon his rights against his own client Auburn Woollen Co. and let Meharv lose his rights under his contract.

Mr. R. R. Hall and Mr. C. R. Widdifield appeared as Counsel for Mr. Meharry, the Appellant, and Mr. Strachan Johnston, K. C., (Toronto) and Mr. E. L. Goodwill appeared as Counsel for the Auburn Woollen Company, respondents.

FAMILY ALMOST IN TRAIN WRECK

J. W. WILLIAMS, WIFE AND DAUGHTER BARELY ESCAPED ONAWA TRAGEDY

TOO TIRED TO TAKE TRAIN

FOLLOWED LATER AND SLEPT PAST SCENE OF FATAL ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Williams and family, who arrived in the city this morning from Leeds, England, had an exceptional escape from being on the train that was wrecked at Onawa, Maine, on Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams and five daughters, Gertrude, Florence E., Stella, Emily and Veta May, on arriving at St. John's, N. B., after a very rough and stormy passage, decided to remain over night for a much needed rest. If they had taken the train they had expected to travel by up to that time, they would have been in the midst of that terrible catastrophe in which so many lost their lives.

Mr. Williams had been associated with the Salvation Army in the Old Country for twenty-six years as a bandsman, and holding many other offices. He states that he has always had a longing to come to Canada but this is the first time he has succeeded in crossing the water. He will take his place in the local band and his daughters will join the ranks of the songsters. They will be a very welcome addition to the local corps on account of their past connections and experience with the Army in Leeds and other places in the Old Land.

Mr. Williams and family were welcomed by friends on their arrival this morning and were congratulated upon their miraculous escape from the train wreck.

Mr. Williams states that he and his family passed over the scene of the accident while asleep and were not informed that it had happened until they were far past it. He was disappointed at being deprived of the opportunity of seeing the place where the tragedy occurred, although he is naturally very thankful he was not among the unfortunate ones who took the first train for the West.

The Williams family declare they are very much impressed with the appearance of the new country in which they will make their home.

In spite of continued warnings, trespassers continue to use the C.P.R tracks as a thoroughfare. This morning seven of these were fined $2 and $3.10 costs each, and one more who was summoned failed to appear. This prosecution will continue until the people learn that they must not use these tracks as a thoroughfare.

PLEBISCITE TAKEN IN CITY OF FIUME

MAJORITY IN FAVOR OF OCCUPATION BY REGULARS FROM ITALIAN ARMY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Trieste, Dec. 22.—Despite efforts to delay or cancel the proposed plebiscite in Fiume on the question of accepting the proposal of Gen. Badoglie, Italian chief of staff, providing for the substitution of Italian regulars for d'Annunzio's forces of occupaton, the vote, after all, was taken, and is reported to have gone strongly in favor of accepting the proposals. D'Annunzio, however, declined to accept the result and declared he would reserve his decision for himself. According to the officials who had the polling in charge, the vote was 85 per cent. in favor of the occupation by the regular Italian forces.

MEMBERS OF UTILITIES COMMISSION HAVE GIVEN MODEL ADMINISTRATION

Mr. Ryerson Ritchie Describes Growth of Water Works From Small Beginings—Commissoner Hicks, He Says is Entitled to Re-Election.

Dear Mr. Editor :

Peterborough is, in my humble opinion, on the threshold of an unprecedented period of expansion and prosperity and it is of the utmost importance at this time that we, as citizens, "stop, look and listen!" If it shall be the purpose of the ratepayers to give intelligent direction to the city's development they will take time to understand the business of the city and give it serious attention. They will vote on New Year's Day.

Thinks of our boys and girls. I know of no city where you can find better types of physical or mental excellence. If we are going to keep these girls and boys at home we must make the development of our city an objective part of their education. The life of our city and the education of our children are inter-related. We cannot safely shirk our civic duty any more than we can shirk our parental duty. The business of the city is our business and we cannot afford to neglect it.

The ownership and management of public utilities is our business, and yet there are thoughtless people who talk of public business as if the elemental principles of trademanship did not apply collectively as they do individually.

Our Public Utilities Commission is the executive board of our water and electric service plants. The record of that commission is a credit to the gentlemen who have served upon it and one of which, as a city, are proud. It is a record of highly efficient management. The city is under very great obligation to W. H. Moore, K.C., Robert Hicks and T. F. Mathews, its chairman.

The Water System.

The Commission has expended approximately $400,000 on the plant. The water works pays annual interest and Sinking Fund on debentures of about $40,000 and during the last five years has worked up an annual profit of about $5000 net. The total profits from date of purchase aggregate almost $80,000. Its Sinking Fund Reserve amounts to $181,219.29 and it has an investment fund of $40,000 to meet any possible contingency.

It has reduced the rate to consumers until it is now a third of the original charge and gives a vastly better service.

When the city bought the old plant it had 18 miles of mains, now it has more than 46 miles.

Then we had 1150 individual services; now there are 4,652 services supplied.

The city inherited an antiquated pumphouse and wooden dam, now we have fine concrete structures not surpassed in the country.

The pumping capacity has been increased to 16 1-2 million gallons daily, in excess of the maxmum requirement for safeguarding the city.

An auxiliary steam pumping plant and duplicate force mains have been installed, thus minimizing danger from shortage of water or ice troubles.

In order to make the water safe in the interest of the public health a liquid chlorine system of sterilization has been installed.

And last, but by no means least, of many permanent betterments that might be mentioned, which add to the value of this great business, the Carnegie property of 35 acres was recently purchased as a site for the proposed and necessary filtration plant to come. This finely situated property will make one of the most beautiful parks in all Canada, the very possession of which will add to Peterborough's attractiveness as a good place to live and work in.

The Electric System.

The cost of the original electric plants, of lands and buildings and sub-station equipment, and for increased distribution and transforming capacity, meters and testing devices amounts to about $200,000. A conservative valuation of the tangible assets today would exceed $256,000—a gain of $56,000 in five years. Good business that.

A substantial contingent fund has been created out of the earnings to protect the city and safeguard the plant from an exceptional emergency.

Since the plants became the property of the city, and during the war when the high cost of living soared our Utilities Commission equalized and reduced the rates for domestic electric service and actually saved our citizens as a whole some $50,000 a year—one quarter of a million dollars in five years. What privately-owned corporation would do that?

There has been set aside for depreciation on plant the sum of $25,725, and on the debenture issue there has already been set aside the sum of $15,660.56 as sinking fund.

From January 1st last to September 30th there has been sold to customers 947,064 K.W.H. at a net cost of $22,654.39. Had the rate now charged been that of the Peterborough Light and Power Company the cost to the customers would have been almost double the amount now actually paid under the commission's management, thus forcibly illustrating the difference between the privately-owned corporation and municipal ownership under competent management.

A BOOST FOR COMMISSIONER C. R. HICKS.

The electrical system has grown in these five years from five to eight circuits and from 1900 individual services to 5400 and it successfully met the feverish fluctuations that resulted from the war's abnormal and spasdomic demand upon our industries.

Many betterments are planned but awaiting better prices for material, such as copper wire; indeed the commission has outlined a comprehensive plan of development to improve the whole service which will show, in spots, as conspicuously as the removal of the poles from George and Charlotte streets.

The above brief outline of facts surely gives convincing answer to any voter or taxpayer who has the welfare of his city at heart.

The city water and electric service plants were originally purchased and subsequently improved with borrowed money. The two systems have been so admirably managed that their entire cost will have been wiped out within a few years. Not a cent will go out of our taxes for these properties.

The whole comprehensive management of the two big business enterprises of Peterborough shows that the men who have conducted them so far are capable of handling big business. They have demonstrated that municipal ownership can be made more successful for the community than private ownership generally is—even for its shareholders.

The city has had from its Utilities Commission in personal service alone what in any private business would have cost thousands of dollars, while our cost can be measured by hundreds.

And now we have a situation to be met—the election of two members of the Utilities Commission. Mr. Hicks' term is about to expire, and Mr. Mathews has resigned because of his removal to Toronto.

It is an outstanding and demonstrative fact that the chief element in the success of municipal ownership in the city has been the continuity in personnel and polcy, of its managemnt. Therefore, common sense and common honesty oblige us to hold to our standard of service on the Utilities Commission.

It is in the city's interest that Mr. Hicks be re-elected. We need him in our business; we need more than ever his knowledge and experience. In the nomination of candidates and the election of a successor to Mr. Matthews it is imperative that we exercise our better judgment and elect the better men for the big job.

Yours sincerely,

RYERSON RITCHIE.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

MONDAY, DECEMBER 22, 1919.

WHY NOT AN OLD HOME WEEK!

THERE ARE HUNDREDS of former residents and natives of Peterborough scattered all over Canada, and many such are prospering in the United States. Every time one of these returns to his former home on a visit he is struck by the progress that has been made in Peterborough since he went away, this progress being in proportion to the length of his absence. When such a man returns to his present domicile he is a walking advertisement, proclaiming the virtues of this city and the pride which every man feels in his native place, no matter where his lot may be cast, is stronger than ever.

If the Board of Trade is anxious—and every one believes that it is—to advertise this city, it would seem to us that no better and cheaper plan could be adopted than the holding of an Old Home Week. Nothing of the kind has, we believe, ever been staged here, although such affairs have been held with invariable success in places both larger and smaller than this city.

This is a movement that would most certainly meet with the hearty co-operation of all classes of citizens, especially by those who have friends and relatives in distant parts of the country and who would hail this as an excellent opportunity for the absentees to pay a visit to the old home town. The railways could easily be induced to grant special rates for the occasion, and Peterborough would have a family reunion the like of which it has never known.

WITH TURKEYS FIFTY CENTS A POUND.

THE MAN WHO on Saturday carried home along the streets his Christmas turkey by the heels gave public testimony to his material prosperity, just as does the citizen who wears the coonskin overcoat. What matter it that turkeys did sell on the market for fifty cents a pound and that some birds tipped the scales at a figure which established their selling price at $10 or more? There were plenty of customers willing and financially able to make the purchase.

Why all this pessimistic talk about the high cost of living, especially now that the Board of Commerce has officially established the fact that there is really no help for it? Is not the high price of turkeys the best possible evidence that times are good and that the people as a rule have money? Plunge the masses into poverty and the price of Christmas fowl and everything else will drop out of sight with all dispatch.

Everybody cannot afford to buy turkeys at fifty cents a pound. Neither could they when the price was forty cents lower. It was ever thus. The poor are with us always at Christmas time, and every other season of the year. Prices were at least fifty per cent. lower four years ago. But who is there who can recall those trying days, when the city was inventing work to keep honest residents from the necessity of accepting charity, who would revert to former conditions with all that that reversion would entail?

It is the fashion to blame the farmers for the high cost of foodstuffs, but, bless you, the farmer does not set the price of his produce any more than the retailer does that of the articles he handles. He merely sells what the consumer is really anxious to obtain. It would be just as unreasonable to expect the farmer to develop a spirt of generosity and cut prices below the prevailing rate, even as a concession to the promotion of the Christian spirit, as to look for the baker, the butcher or the shoe dealer to adopt the same policy. And if the farmer does get high pirces for what he has to sell, don't forget that he is a purchaser as well as a seller and that he is caught like the rest of us when he comes to buy the articles he is unable to produce at home.

WOULD REFORM HANGING LAWS.

HANGMAN ELLIS no doubt regards his position as essential to the welfare of the State as that of the judge who delivers his subjects into his hands. After he had officiated at "working off" a murderer in Hamilton the other day he called the newspapermen together and asked them to bring journalistic pressure to bear upon the Government so that all murderers should be hanged at the penitentiary at Kingston instead of at the various jails in the counties where they committed their crimes.

This recommendation is not original with the hangman. It has been before the public for four or five years. If such a change were made, the law should go a little farther and make it obligatory upon the members of Parliament to attend the hanging of every condemned murderer. We take it that one such spectacle would suffice, especially if the hangman should happen to so bungle the job as to prolong the dying agony of the victim of the State's vengeance. Probably the horrified members of Parliament would urge the calling of a special session of the House so that capital punishment, at least this antiquated and barbarous form of it, should be abolished at once, the new law to be made retroactive so as to save the lives of any who might be under sentence of death. And such action would not be inspired by mawkish sentimentality but by pure humanitarianism.

Five foreigners in the local ajil are awaiting the offices of the man who is willing to hang his fellow mortals for a consideration. The worst feature of this system of dealing with criminals is that it brings such men to the front. Mr. G. N. Gordon will go to Ottawa tomorrow to plead for mercy for these unfortunate creatures, and an attorney could not possibly engage in any duty of a higher nature. Consider the early training and the associations of these men. The crime which one of them actually committed and to which all five were accessories before the fact was inspired by cupidity, and the passions of the perpetrators were inflamed by liquor. There is, however, no excuse for their crime. They knew that they were doing wrong and were aware of the consequences if they were detected. The question of their punishment, however, is another matter.

Does the State gain anything in public respect by adopting measures of reprisal? The man who commits a crime may do so in the heat of passion or as the result of pure moral degeneracy. The State, in taking that man's life, can plead nothing of the kind either as a reason or by way of extenuation. Anybody may take the life of another in anger. The hangman, however, acts in cold blood.

The moral degenerate is restrained by no human enactment. Impending consequences do not affect him. It is impossible to make men righteous by a system of terrorism. Any sane man who brings himself to the point of committing a crime is not deterred by the thought of the punishment that awaits his act. He is, as a rule, willing to accept the consequences, having argued himself into the belief that the deed was justiled.

Hanging men is simply an easy and cheap way for the State to escape responsibility for the future care of its degenerate wards. It costs less to take a man's life by judicial warrant than to keep him in confinement for the remainder of his days. The lunatic with homicidal tendencies is shown some consideration. The man who commits a crime, gross and brutal, cannot be right mentally any more than is the unfortunate who is put under restraint to prevent him from taking the lives of his fellows or committing other violent offences.

VISIONARY CANTEEN PROFITS.

THERE IS AN OLD truism that figures never lie. This is the case if they are left to themselves, but falling into evil associations or into incompetent hands they are often made to speak in terms which can be most charitably described as equivocation.

It was announced the other day that an officer had arrived from England freighted with thirty-five million dollars, which represented the profits of the Canadian soldiers' canteens that were operated during the war, this tremendous dividend to be distributed among those who had helped in its accumulation.

The announcement was taken in all seriousness by the majority of the public, who were not slow in jumping at conclusions. If the [illegible] Canteens were able to show such a profit, then what about the canteens that were conducted by the Salvation Army, the Y. M. C. A., and the Knights of Columbus? And what was to be done with these profits?

Any alarm or cynicism on this head is unwarranted. The reported profit of thirty-five million dollars is a ridiculous story when the facts are considered. Such a profit would represent a capital stock, or an amount of business transacted, simply incalculable. There were not more than 400,000 Canadian soldiers in Europe altogether, and it is impossible to believe that every cent of the earnings of these men went into the company canteen. But even if they did the percentage of gain on the turnover is still far too high.

It is likely to be found that the real profits are a mere trifle as compared with the sum reported last week. Again, no significance should be attached to this rumor as aplicable to the Salvation Army and the other organizations that operated canteens during the war and which secured contributions from the public to carry on the work. These religious bodies were not engaged in a money-making proposition or a game of graft. They were carrying on a work in line with their profession, for the benefit of the fighting men. If they broke even, that was probably the best that they did.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

THURSDAY is Christmas, and the stores are bristling with everything in the shape of gifts. Do it now.

● ● ● ● ●

IT REQUIRED sacrifice to vanquish the Central Powers. As much will be needed now to save them from starvation.

● ● ● ● ●

LIQUID Christmas cheer is $6 a quart, and then there is always the chance that it will be confiscated by the authorities.

● ● ● ● ●

IF THE ALLIES can talk the Germans into reason it will be the first time that such pacific measures have had the desired effect.

● ● ● ● ●

THE DRURY Government promises to give the Province a sane and economical administration, U. F. O.—that is, unless forced out.

● ● ● ● ●

WHY NOT ADOPT the slogan of the Belleville Board of Trade and declare warfare on the A. O. P. K.—the Army of Peterborough Knockers?

● ● ● ● ●

"MAN CREATES the evil he endures," says Robert Southey. Quite so. Man has created every evil government under which he ever suffered.

● ● ● ● ●

IN A DAY OR TWO all the cards will be face up on the municipal table. By that time the public will know who are the candidates for civic office.

● ● ● ● ●

THINGS MIGHT easily be worse. For instance, the vaccination question is not a burning issue in the municipal campaign as it seems to be in Toronto.

● ● ● ● ●

AN ADVERTISEMENT in a Toronto paper reads: "I will not be responsible for anything contracted only by myself." Including, no doubt, the notice itself.

● ● ● ● ●

THERE IS beyond question gold under the surface of Hastings County, but what is needed is a farmer's plow rather than a miner's pick to bring it into circulation.

● ● ● ● ●

EVEN SANTA CLAUS seems to be pinched by the high cost of living. The most of the Christmas cuts show him with a reindeer team reduced to six animals instead of the traditional eight.

● ● ● ● ●

EXPECT GREAT things of the Drury Government, anything short of a reduction in the price of eggs or other foodstuffs. Be reasonable and concede that this is a matter outside legislative jurisdiction.

● ● ● ● ●

THE BELLEVILLE Board of Trade has decided to take an active part in municipal politics. Why should the Peterborough Board deem it either the part of wisdom or discretion to remain neutral at the ring side?

● ● ● ● ●

ALMOST EVERY DAY the papers contain accounts of Toronto victims of gas fumes. Considering the Board of Control and other public officials, the wonder is rather that the entire city has not been asphyxiated by this time.

THE CANNY FARMERS AND THE HYDRO

(Hamilton Herald.)

Premier Drury's frank declaration that he cannot approve of the duplication of existing railways by Hydro to the Hydro-Radial enthusiasts. Even more disappointing will be the pronouncement of the United Farmer's Convention at Toronto. "This convention," says the resolution, "views with alarm the proposed policy of Hydro radials, involving the expenditure of millions and intending in many instances the duplication of present railways; that the legislature be requested to move slowly in this matter."

The Ontario Legislature is controlled by the U. F. O. members; the government depends upon them for its existence; and the U. F. O. members owe their election to the U.F.O. organization. Considering these facts, it does seem that the attitude of the U. F. O. towards the Hydro-Radial enterprise—an attitude of semi-hostility or at least of doubt—makes the prospect for those enterprises anything but bright. It is evident that the farmers are not so easily infected with Sir Adam Beck's enthusiasm as are the town and city folk. The farmers are not swallowing without question the alluring estimates and promises put forth by Sir Adam and his staff. It is inevitable that the skeptical attitude of the U. F. O. convention will be receive governmental support unless the need of it and its probable success as a commercial proposition can be demonstrated.

And there is nothing wrong about this attitude, is there? If in all things the farmer legislators and administrators show the same disposition to be sure of their ground before sanctioning large expenditure on public works, they will be worthy of confidence.

REMARKABLE GROWTH ENJOYED BY THE ROYAL BANK OF CANADA

Bank Marks the Celebration of its Golden Jubilee by Placing its Total Assets Well Above the $500,000,000 Mark as Compared With Less Than $100,000,000 in 1910 Success of Large Branch System Indicated by Increase in Deposits of Over $80,000,000—Substantial Gain in Current Loans Shows Business Activity

Montreal, Dec. 22.—Shareholders of The Royal Bank of Canada will derive much satisfaction from the financial statement for the fiscal year to the end of November, now issued. In spite of the fact that the year covered in the report immediately followed the signing of armistice and was entirely within the period of readjustment, the Bank fortified its already strong position, made a gain of over $100,000,000 in assets and from the standpoint of earnings was able to report the banner year of its history.

This year the great strides made will certainly attract all the more attention, because in some quarters it was thought that the leading banks of the country would experience some difficulty in keeping up the very high totals reached during the war period, when some very large undertakings were being carried out for the different governments. This period of readjustment, however, does not seem to have had the slightest effect on the progress of the Royal and it has gone steadily ahead and added over $100,000,000 to its assets during the course of the year.

Of equal interest perhaps has been the manner in which the Bank has been able to help the country in the expansion of its foreign trade, as it enjoyed perhaps the greatest experience of any banking institution in Canada in this particular kind of business and on this account was able to lend the fullest assistance in the export business of the country, during the period when this has been of paramount importance.

From the public standpoint, of greatest interest will be the gain in total deposits of over $80,000,000, notwithstanding the large withdrawals that must have taken place in connection with the recent Victory Loan. With the increase that has occurred during the year savings deposits of the Bank now stand at $259,465,169, as compared with $197,348,539, while deposits not bearing interest gained to $159,656,229, up from $135,243,278 a year ago.

Growth in Business.

The general statement of assets and liabilities shows that the Bank has crossed another important milestone by placing its assets across the half-billion mark, these now standoing at $533,647,084, as compared with $427,512,982 in the previous year. Of this amount liquid assets are represented by $273,908,862, as against $224,982,088, while cash on hand, as represented by current coin and Dominion Notes, has gained to $55,681,547, up from $42,124,658 a year ago. The past twelve months have been noted for their business activity in all parts of the country, with the result that the total current loans of the Bank now stand at $233,834,879, as compared with $183,748,392 at the end of the previous year

Larger Profits Reported.

With the larger business that has been handled, the profits for the year have also shown a healthy gain and amounted to $3,423,264, after the usual deductions and provisions, including bad debts. This was at the rate of 20.14 p.c. on the $17,000,000 of capital and was an increase of $13,418, as compared with the profits of the previous year, when the ratio was 18.7 p.c

After deducting $2,862,602 for dividends and other appropriations, the Bank was able to add $561,057 to its Profit and Loss Account, bringing that item to $1,096,418, thus more than doubling the amount carried forward at the beginning of the year.

The Profit and Loss Account compares with that of a year ago as follows:—

	1919.			1918
Balance P. & L. Acc. Nov. 30, 1918	$ 535,757		$ 564,264
Profits after charges of management, provision for debts and customary deductions	3,423,264	$3,959,021	2,809,846	$3,374,110
Dividends	$1,866,196		$1,614,702
50th Anniversary bonus of 2% to shareholders	340,000		....
Transferred to Officers' Pension Fund	100,000		100,000
Written off Bank Premises	400,000		400,000
War Tax on Bank Note Circulation	156,406		133,652
Patriotic contributions, etc.	....		90,000
Transferred to Reserve Fund	....	2,862,602	500,000	2,838,352
Total P. & L. carried forward		$1,026,419		$ 535,757

Passing Notable Milestone.

While the progress enjoyed by the Bank during the past year has been remarkable, some idea of the record it has established among the leading financial institutions of the country may be gained when a comparison is made of its accounts as they stand today, with those of a few years ago. A comparison of the principal accounts for 1919 with those of 1918 and 1910, shows as follows:—

	1919.	1918.	1910.
Total Assets	$533,647,084	$427,512,982	$92,510,346
Total Liquid Assets	273,908,862	224,982,088	37,226,670
Current Loans and Discounts	143,259,518	119,184,715	52,471,208
Total Deposits	419,121,399	332,591,717	72,079,807
Deposits bearing interest	259,465,169	197,348,439	51,709,181
Deposits not bearing interest	159,656,229	135,243,278	19,737,130

Mainly About People

The following contribution from a reader to The Toronto Telegram will be read with interest by those who read the accounts given of the memorial at Port Hope to the late Joseph Scriven, Encloses Clipping.

Sir— With refernece to the articles which appeared in your paper the enclosed cutting taken from the Belfast, Weekly Telegraph of November 8.1919, may interest many of your readers, and throws still a little further light on the life of Mr. Joseph Scriven. JOHN WILS.

Banbridge Hymn Writer.

"Sir.—Relating to your interesting note on the memorial erected in Port Hope, Ontario, to Mr. Joseph Scriven, author of the hymn, 'What a Friend We Have in Jesus,' permit me to mention that he was baptized in this parish in 1819. The entry in the parish records is :'Joseph, son of John Ccriven, of Ballymoney Lodge, Esq., and Jane Medlicott, his wife. Born September 10, and baptized by Mr. Leslie.' The entry is initialled 'J. McC.' which are the initials of the then curate, Rev. James McCreight. The rector then was Rev. Francis Burroiughs, M. A.

Mr. Scriven's Father.

"Mr. Joseph Scriven's father, Capt John Scriven, was churchwarden (with Robert Scott) for the years 1820 and 1821. In 1819 Capt. John Scriven was, with other residents appointed to report on the making of the parish.' It was subsequently decided to have this footbridge built as nearly opposite the schoolhouse as possible. Captain Scriven, Rev. T. Johnston, Rev. James McCreight, Messrs. W. Hayes and Henry Sterling were appointed to have it done, a penny per acre to be levied off the parish for the purpose. The site of the bridge must have been nearly opposite the old Seapatrick Church and graveyard. The lapse of a century has removed all traces of this bridge. The hymn of the bridgebuilder's son will, we may believe, have a longer usefulness.— Yours, etc.

A NEW SUMMER RESORT

Information has been received at Grand Trunk headquarters that Canada will have next year a summer resort hotel that will surpass in size any similar enterprise previously created in the Dominion. This hotel will be in "The Lake of Bays" district, of the Highlands of Ontario and will be known as the "Bigwin Inn." Construction work has been completed and the hotel will be opened during the coming summer. It will have accommodation for six hundred guests. Railroad authorities state that the opening of the Bigwin Inn will mark a notable step in the development of Canadian summer resorts.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Clerks Get no Wages But Make Up to $100 Weekly.

J. H. Margolis, proprietor of the Metropolitan Clothing Co., of Dayton, O., doesn't believe in paying wages to his employees.

"The better way is to take your salesmen into partnership with you," says he. "Let every man be his own boss and decide his own salary. This eliminates the time-worn custom of applying to the proprietor every month or so for an increase in salary. Keeps absolute harmony among your salesmen and increases the profits of the store."

"When I was a clothing salesman a number of years ago," he said, "it used to be that a man who made $35 or $40 a week was considered to be the best man in the store. The boss always kept his eye on that fellow, undecided whether the salesman was worth that much money and fearful lest the time might come when some other concern, realizing that salesman's worth, should offer him a higher salary and take him away.

"Six years ago we opened the Metropolitan Clothing Co. in a modest way, using 7500 square feet of floor space. We began, as all other concerns did, in setting a definite wage for each salesman. We lost some men, gained others, but there always was the fear that the complete harmony so necessary for the success of a new enterprise was likely to crack and our entire organization collapse.

"Early in the game, with out business not yet established, it was, of course, impossible to do away with the time-honored method of paying wages to salesmen. We were young, business was just coming our way and had we inaugurated the system of eliminating salaries and giving men a certain percentage of their sales it would have been unprofitable both for the salesman and the store.

"But as business grew and the increase came in the cost of living essentials, it occurred to us that it might be mutually profitable to do away with salaries. At first we gave each salesman on the floor 4 per cent of his sales. Not long ago this was increased to 4 1-2 per cent.

"The percentage method has been an instant success. Men who formerly received $18 and $20 a week from other stores came to us and by vigorous attention to their trade were easily able to increase this to $30, $40 and $50 a week. We now have salesmen, who, by dint of courtesy and personal popularity, combined with good salesmanship, draw $100 a week for their services."

The "Emergency Shop."

The smallest grocery in Oregon is at 32 West Eighth street, Eugene, Ore. It is about five by twelve feet and bears the sign "Emergency Shop." J. E. Masters is the proprietor.

Speaking of the selection of the interesting name, Mr. Masters said, "Emergency Shop is just exactly what this is. We carry tobacco, candy, chewing gum, fruits and the small stuff, but we also carry a line of canned groceries. If one of the women of the town finds that there's company coming and she isn't prepared to feed them she sends her husband to the Emergency Shop and we supply her; for we keep open until 10 o'clock week days and on Sunday too. That sign up there stops lots of people and has become pretty well known in my two years' of business."

An Accident That Brought Big Sales.

Some time ago J. C. Whitescarver, of Galena, Kan., ordered twenty fountain pens of a make that he had not before handled. These pens had been ordered by various customers and as Whitescarver had not had any other inquiries for such a pen, he did not thing it worth while to order more than the twenty sold in advance.

Through some mistake he received 200 pens instead of twenty. He at once notified the shipping firm, receiving a prompt reply to the effect that they would, of course, take back what he could not sell, but advising him to first make an effort to dispose of them.

He thought over the matter and then had 180 pens placed in a prominent spot in a show window. In the meantime he had printed slips, one wrapped around each pen, announcing that each purchaser was entitled to have his pen refilled wtih ink whenever wanted during the life of his, Whitescarver's business. Also a card, calling attention to this feature, was placed in the window.

Inside of five days every pen was sold and so many other calls made for them that he had ordered another supply.

"If for nothing but the sale of the pens, it was the cheapest and best advertising I ever did," said Whitescarver, "but the disposal of the pens was a minor item compared wth sales of other material I have made, traced directly to this 'stunt.'"

Does This Prove Men Most Sensible.

According to investigations recently undertaken by William Hahn & Co., shoe dealers at Washington, D. C., selling shoes to women and selling them to men are two entirely separate and distinct operations, calling for totally different kinds of salesmanship and the stressing of certain definite points in each case.

The three outstanding factors which determine a woman's shoe purchase are, according to the Hahn investigations, Style (or beauty), Exclusiveness and quality. In men's sales the are: Quality, Service [illegible]

The nine factors, as listed in the order of their importance in each sex are:

Women	Men
Style	Quality
Exclusiveness	Service
Quality	Price
Price	Reputation
Service	Testimonials

HEAR SENATOR BENNETT

(Orillia Times)

Senator Bennett has an enthusiasm that is contagious in regard to the value of the Trent Valley Waterway from a tourist standpoint. His chief recreating is motor boating, and he possesses a fine yacht which he is anxious to bring to Orillia and take down to Lake Ontario as soon as the lock system on the Severn river is completed. Orillia is the pivotal point on the Trent Valley system, for the entire northern section at least, and it will be the town's own fault if it does not reap large and lasting benefit from the tourist trade over the waterway, which will be open for through traffic next year. The Board of Trade should not be slow to act on Senator Bennett's advice in regard to liberal and persistent advertising, and if his suggested programme is to be carried out in connection with the motor boat Fair at New York in February, immediate action must be taken.

Sammy's Sudden Shift

✠

By JOHN HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Sammy Edwards, a taxi driver in a circus town, fell under the spell of the sawdust. So in the autumn, when the biggest of the four circuses came home to winter quarters, he struck the menagerie superintendent for a job. Fosdick sent him to McGuire, the "cat-house" boss, and after talking to McGuire for ten minutes, Sammy climbed back into his taxi an accepted member of the staff of the Great and Only, with orders to report Sunday morning.

After it was all settled, Sammy broke the news to Kitty Elwood—and Kitty, without any ado whatever, broke their engagement.

"If that's all the consideration I get from you, Sam Edwards," Kitty vehemently remarked, "all you get from me after this is none at all. It's off—all off, and off for good. Here's your hat."

"But, Kit," expostulated Sammy, "you don't get it at all. It's only for one year. Look-it. I qualify as a full-fledged keeper in a couple of months. Before the show goes out I'm a fancy trainer and go one trip with an animal act—see? It'll get us more than I could save in three years at the old job—enough to start right!"

"Two pu-pshaws and a pu-piffle!" Kitty, you see, worked in a paper-box factory. "Do you see much green in my eye? You're going with the circus because you've gone nuts on it—like every little boy in this town. You in a ring act! In five months! You'll be sweeping out cages the rest of your life—chambermaid to a smelly lot of animated old fur sets. You've lost out with me, Mr. Edwards. My husband's gotta have a balance wheel that can't be queered by circus chariots. Goodby!"

There was a finality about this that sent Sammy on his way without further word. Whereupon Kitty climbed two flights of stairs and wept copiously for an hour.

Sammy didn't spend all that winter just chambermaiding to cat animals. He got to be a keeper with a certain cage of peculiarly pernickety leopards as his most especial care. He soon learned, however, that he wouldn't be in any ring act by next spring. It was January before McGuire would let him go into the leopard's cage without a pointed iron bar in his hand, and February before he felt the least at home in that environment.

But when March came, Sammy had got along so far that when he signed up for the touring season there was a clause in his contract giving him forty-five dollars a month extra for riding in that cage of spotted cats in the daily parade—and the show furnished the fleshings.

Opening in the "Garden" at New York, where circus parades have long been a thing of the past, the second booking was in the show's—and Sammy's—home town. As the fates would have it, it rained pitchforks at the first day's stand, and there was no parade. So that Sammy was called on to make his debut as an "animal king" before the eyes of his own townspeople. Also his first appearance in tights.

Now Sammy had never ceased to be sore in spirit over the defection of Kitty Elwood. Even among the sylphs whom he had encountered during the winter, praticing and rehearsing animal acts or careering about the ring in the equestrian pavilion, there had been none equal to the task of displacing Kitty in his heart—and some very nice girls there were among them, at that. Wherefore, as Sammy climbed into his nest of feline revolutionists it was with mingled emotions that he assured himself that Kitty would certainly be somewhere in the street crowds and that she could not fail to see him. What would she think he wondered.

It was a new cage. Cat animals of all kinds hate new surroundings—witness Tabby at home. It was the first street parade. Caliph, the head devil of the leopard clan, detested the noise of band music. None of the family was overly fond of human beings, and crowds of them frazzled leopardian nerves completely.

A leopard with rasped nerves is dangerous. To make it worse, the cats, thanks to delays in the costuming department, had never before seen Sammy in pink tights. And to top it all, Sammy was nervous himself—something a trainer has no earthly business to be, ever. And the more he thought of Kitty being somewhere in the crowd the more nervous he became.

The parade hadn't gone two blocks before Caliph, sensing the unrest in his master, began to show his independence. He sulked every time he passed Sammy in that never ending promenade of the cage, glared at him sidewise and snarled—getting a rousing belt on the nose with Sammy's rawhide that didn't improve his temper. But Caliph wasn't alone in his mood.

Eliza, his big mate, never took her baleful eyes off Sammy for an instant, while Hindoo, the biggest of the youngsters, kept his mouth open and his teeth bared two-thirds of the time. Even Never and Forever, the hitherto fairly amiable cubs, frankly and openly foreswore allegiance to the banner of King Edwards.

It helped matters not at all that at the very first avenue crossing some one on the curb yelled: "Pipe Sammy Edwards all done up in pinkies! Gee, sammy, but it brings out the legs great!"—an extremely embarrassing remark, since Sammy from boyhood had been painfully conscious of his slightly bowed nether limbs.

Well, what with the animals acting like the deuce and the kidding he got from old acquaintances along the line, and what with—most of all—keeping on the lookout for Kitty the eyes that should have been attending very strictly indeed to the leopards, it happened.

The spotted beasts, always the bane of menagerie men's existence at best, were on the verge of getting out of hand when the cage reached that particular juncture of two important thoroughfares where Sammy's taxi had been wont to stand o' nights.

Involuntarily Sammy let his eyes divert from his snarling, feverishly pacing charges, to the old spot. And there, on the edge of the sidewalk, stood Harriman, his old taxi days employer, and—evidently quite by accident, just beside him—stood Kitty!

Kitty was white, as Sammy's glance fell on her. Kitty was frightened. For Kitty had been able to sense what scarcely anybody in the crowd suspected, for she had been investigating this animal business a deal in the last six months, had Kitty.

She knew that things were going wrong in that cage. As her eyes and Sammy's met, she raised her hand in one imperious, undeniable gesture, and through white lips screamed over all the fanfare of the pageant, "Duck, Sammy!"

Sammy ducked—and the razor-like claws of Caliph missed him by the thinness of a whistle as the snarling beast hurtled through the air. There was a whirl of tawny, black spotted bodies and a horrifying scrambling and snarling; an agile flashing of pink; one, two, three rapid blank shots in the faces of the frantic cats—and, like a jack out of his box, Sammy emerged from the rear door of the cage, slamming in the hasp behind him. In two jumps he reached the sidewalk.

There was no interlude. "Can I have my job back?" he demanded of Harriman.

"You can," replied Harriman. In just five seconds Sammy Edwards had quit one job and secured another.

"Come on, Kitty," he breathlessly urged, grasping that almost fainting young woman by the arm: "I'll borrow a raincoat in Ferguson's and we'll go somewhere and have a little talk. You can't kid me after the look that was on your face just now."

Kitty might, of course, have told him that she'd have felt just the same about a perfect stranger. But—oh, what was the use? She was too glad to have him back alive.

SCHOOLBOOKS OF LONG AGO

Ancient Tablets Show That Children of Past Ages Studied Much as Do Those of Today.

Professor Langdon of Oxford, Eng., has discovered that one group of the famous Nippur tablets stored at the University of Pennsylvania are in reality the oldest schoolbooks known to exist. They show, says the Christian Herald, that the children of the ancients learned much that the boys and girls of today have to study.

According to these tablets the children of 4,200 years ago were taught arithmetic, geography, history and grammar just like the children of today.

The multiplication tables are remarkably distinct, and in plain numerals show the incontrovertible fact that three times one are three and five times one are five.

On one tablet the school boy has been given a lesson in phonetic signs corresponding to the shorthand of modern times. The Sumerians, the authors of these tablets, also invented the use of writing syllables and combining them into words, being the first step toward the alphabet.

What Pewter Is.

Pewter is an alloy of tin and usually antimony, copper and bismuth for the best qualities of pewter, and lead for the inferior kinds. The tin always preponderates, and the proportion is largest in the best pewter. One hundred parts of tin to eight of antimony, four of copper and one of bismuth are given as the proportions of good ware.

A Perfect Arm.

The proportions of the perfect arm in a woman of about 5 feet 5 inches are as follows: The circumference of the upper arm should be about 13 inches, that of the fore arm 9 inches and of the wrist 6 inches. The upper arm should be one-third shorter than the forearm.

Frog Catcher Enlists.

Though Fritz is on the jump, his fate now is all the more certain. Peter Charon of New Haven, official frog catcher for the laboratories at Yale university, has enlisted in the marine corps.

"There isn't much doing in the frog line now," says Charon. "Before the war you used to hear them churning out their cries of 'Jug of rum! Jug of rum!' but now you can't find any of the creatures down our way. Besides there's no market since the laboratory men have all gone to war."

Charon is six feet, and one inch in height. The marines consider him a good addition to their fighting corps.

Not Appreciated.

A tourist was being driven through a picturesque glen in Scotland and while his companions went into raptures over the wild, weird, awe-inspiring features of the place he yawned over his cigar and newspaper. "Don't you like the glen, sir?" the driver asked, at a particularly striking spot. "Why," grunted the tourist, "I suppose it's all right, but I can't see any of the scenery for those wretched hills!"

A "Gentleman."

And the scholar said: "Originally the term 'gentleman' (Latin: gentilis), signified well born. A man of gentle birth usually was refined in manners and conduct, and so popular usage has extended the term to all men of chivalrous character; a gentleman 'lives right, rights wrongs, fears God and honors the king.'"—Exchange.

STANDARD CLOTHING WILL HELP CUT COST OF LIVING IN THE UNITED STATES

Producers of Wearing Apparel Agree to Devise Means to Keep Down Prices—Restaurant Men, too, Will Not Raise Rates.

Washington, D.C., Dec. 22.—Cabinet members and other high officials who have been assisting Attorney General Palmer in his fight upon the cost of living, held their first conference since the coal strike sidetracked all other activities.

Reports were received by the conference from H. E. Figg, Special Assistant to Mr. Palmer, which were said to show continued progress in keeping down prices.

"The reports were especially gratifying," Mr. Palmer said, "taking into consideration the fact that when we began our campaign last summer we were at the high point of supply and the low point of demand, while now we are at the low point of supply and the peak of demand. A graphic representation of living costs would show a very satisfactory curve of price ranges."

To Summarize Results.

With the approval of the conference, Mr. Palmer preparing a statement submarizing the results obtained, which probably will be given to the public tomorrow.

Mr. Figg, who has been in close touch with producers of wearing apparel, announced today that at their suggestion a conference will be held here next month, which will undertake to devise means for checking the increase in clothing prices. One of the most important steps to be considered will be the production and marketing of a certain fixed amount of standard, medium priced goods, as an incentive to the public to abandon the era of extravagance which has followed war prosyerity.

Mr. Palmer said he could not predict the immediate effect on prices of the settlement of the anti-trust action against the packers.

Free Trade Channels.

"The big effect of the agreed decree," he said, "is to open the channels of business freely to all men without fear of domination by these interests."

The court in which the agreed decree will be entered will not be announced until the decree is filed, which will be after the holidays.

Announcement was made in New Nork by the Southern Wholesale Grocers' Association that its complaint against a large number of railroads for alleged preferences in the way of rates and privileges to the five large packers would be dismissed from further consideration by the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Restaurant Keepers Act.

The members of the United Restaurant Owners' Association in New York will not put into effect their proposed advance of ten per cent. in prices after January 1. The restaurants included in this association serve about 4,000,000 meals a day, at prices averaging from thirty-six to forty-two cents a meal and the proposed advance would have affected principally persons receiving moderate salaries. Broadway and other high priced restaurants were not included in the agreement to raise prices.

Following a conference with Arthur Williams, the Federal Food Administrator, a committee representing the members of the association pledged support to the local and national food administration and promised to lend every effort in the campaign to keep down the cost of living. Mr. Palmer informed Attorney General Palmer of the action at the close of the conference.

One of the main factors which led the restaurant men to reconsider their decision was the news of the dissolution of the packers' trust. Members of the committee expressed the belief that the separation of the packers from the wholesale grocery industry would have the general effect of lowering prices. Another factor was the belief of many that the patrons of the restaurants involved in the advance would not be able to afford to pay the higher prices for their lunches, and that they would take home cooked lunches to work. The restaurant men agreed to give up extra charge for bread and butter.

Joseph Burger president of the Broadway Restaurant and Bakery Association, told Mr. Williams that the restaurant keepers are being "milked" by sugar profiteers, and Mr. Williams assured him that he was bending every effort, in co-operation with the United States Attorney's office, to catch and punish with jail sentences all profiteers in sugar.

POLICE ARE CHARGED WITH ROBBERY

Wife of Officer Says if He Stole Anything it Was to Make Merry Christmas For Daughter.

New York, Dec. 27.— Charges by Harry E. Lewis, District Attorney of Kings, that policeman of the Atlantic Avenue station, Brooklyn, of whom two are under arrest, have been active in robberies which have netted hundreds of thousands of dollars in furs and clothing were read before the Grand Jury. The District Attorney's office expects to receive the jury's findings today.

Policeman Herman Crouse, of the Atlantic Avenue station, who was arrested on Monday and charged with grand larceny in connection with theft of $12,000 worth of furs from the factory of Starobin & Dubin, wholesale furriers at 715 Herkimer street, Brooklyn, was rearrested and held without bail by Magistrate Francis McCloskey. Policeman Peter Reuger also is under arrest with Crause.

Mr. Lewis exonerated superiors in the Police Department of any hand in the wholesale robberies. He praised particularly the detective work of John Coughlin, acting captain of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau. The charges against the policemen were preferred by John McCurdy, police lieutenant of the Atlantic avenue station.

Policeman Accused of Larceny

Policeman Louis J. Hohorst, of the Liberty avenue station, was arrested by Policeman Adam Deering, who accused him of prying open a showcase in front of a store at No. 1,319 Fulton street. Hohorst was held in $500 bail each on two charges of having burglars' tools in his possession and petty larceny.

Albert Conway, Assistant District Attorney, was accredited with the arrest of Policeman Crause and Rueger by District Attorney Lewis. A tip to Mr. Conway from a man under arrest as a burglar, named Edward Werle, of No. 103 Charles street, Manhattan, Detectives under Captain Coughlin arrested Samuel Singer, of No. 27 Whipple street; Philip Brown of No. 455 Clinton street; Edward Cannon, according to Mr. Lewis, implicated Crause and Rueger in the story he told to Conway and Coughlin. Cannon is a chauffeur.

Co-operated with Ganz.

"We have absolute proof that the Starobin & Dubin, job was planned by police in active co-operation with burglars with long criminal records." Mr. Lewis announced after his presentation to the Grand Jury. "Generally I should say that the loot, taken in six months will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars. The same gang, working with the aid and under the protection of the same policemen, have carried out all these thefts. The activities of these burglars, working with the aid of policemen, reached over into Manhattan. It was a permanent gang."

The District Attorney said that he was investigating the robbery of the fur store of Alex M. Katsky, at No 773 Herkimer street, early in November when $4,000 in furs were stolen. He said he believed the gang had operated there. He had a conference with Katsky in the afternoon.

Policeman Horhorst was off duty but in uniform when arrested by Policeman Deering. Deering told Magistrate McGuire that he saw Hohorst take three pairs of knitted slippers, a pair of corsets and a black silk skirt out of the showcase. A jimmy and slippers, a corset and a skirt were found in Hohorst's possession.

The policeman is married and lives with his wife and daughter, Doris six years old, and his mother, at No. 458 Vanderbilt avenue. The wife said yesterday that Horhorst had been in in the department nine years. They were married eight years ago yesterday. She said that if her husband did take the articles that it probably was to give his little girl girl a good Christmas, and his salary was too small to permit it. She said Horhorst rescued a girl from death in a fire in an elevated station last year. John A. Leach, Deputy Police Commissioner, suspended Horhorst immediately after he was arrested.

First Harvest Festival.

The first harvest festival in Britain is supposed to date from the General Thanksgiving ordered by Queen Victoria in 1854, but Archdeacon Denison held a harvest festival in his church at East Brent, Somersetshire, England, in 1843, and the famous poet-preacher, Hawker of Morwenstow, held a similar service in his Cornish parish that same year.

The most popular of all harvest festival hymns, too—Dean Alford's "Come, ye thankful people, come,"—was written some years before the Queen's proclamation.

Unique London Club.

Of the many clubs in London, perhaps the newest and most exclusive is the Thirteen Club, which meets at the thirteenth hour of the thirteenth day of every month. It owes its inception to a lunch held to celebrate the armistice during the world war, at which it was found that 13 were sitting down. The membership is restricted to 13, and at a recent lunch every member made it a point to upset the salt.

Where the Grocer Was.

Doris' mother was in the habit of ordering her bread at Smith's grocery. One day while entertaining callers they heard Doris in the next room talking through her toy telephone, asking Central for Smith's grocery. when she called: "Mother, Mr. Smith isn't at home." "Where do you suppose he is?" replied the mother. Doris answered: "Why, he's up in heaven getting our daily bread."

THE CANADIAN ALADDIN CO. BUILD PERMANENT HOMES

The accompanying illustrations give an idea of the sort of dwellings the Canadian Aladdin Company, Limited, will manufacture in Peterborough if the proposition to aid this industry is indorsed by the ratepayers on January 1st. These houses are not "portable" as some citizens have the erroneous impression, but are built out to fit and ready to set up as permanent houses. Such dwellings are snug, warm and comfortable, and the idea of manufacturing them in standardized parts ready for erection originated with the parent branch of the Canadian Aladdin Company, who at Bay City, Michigan, employ 500 men at this work. This industry is an established one, is of material aid in solving the housing problem, and it affords people of moderate means opportunity for securing homes at substantial reductions from the cost of building under ordinary local conditions.

The company has been doing business in Canada for several years, with a head office in Toronto, and placing their manufacturing work under contract. Now, however, they hope to establish a factory in Peterborough on 334 feet of land fronting on the Monaghan Road, just south of Henry Hope & Sons, which site the city proposes to give them, providing the ratepayers pass a bylaw to that effect at the January elections.

The company will erect a building 100 x 200 feet on the site and expend not less than $70,000 in building and plant. They will open up with from 30 to 40 skilled hands, which number, it is fully expected, will grow rapidly, for the demand for Aladdin houses is already considerable and growing. The company's fixed assessment is to be $5,000 for ten years except for schools and local improvements, for which the factory will be assessed to the full value of the whole property.

The proposition to aid the Aladdin Co. will not increase the city's debt. On the contrary, if this bylaw carries, the city will receive some $500 a year from land held by the corporation unproductive of revenue now for several years, and secure a staple and promising industry, to say nothing of adding to Peterborough's list of skilled and well-paid citizens.

EDITOR'S MAIL

SUPPORTS MRS. MORRIS.

Editor Review: It was with pleasure that I read in the daily press the kind reception that Mrs. W. R. Morris received at the Trades and Labor meeting. Unless there are more narrow-minded, iron-jawed, purse-proud people in Peterborough than I think there are, Mrs. Morris' election is quite assured and she will be a great asset to the Board of Education.

The chairman of the Board of Education said at the mayor's luncheon the other night, that the child is the city's greatest asset. Let me say no one understands child life as well as a lady and as a great many of the teachers are ladies, no one can get in touch with those teachers as well as a lady. I think in place of electing one lady on the Board we should elect at least three.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier Said:

"After all what a man does with his money is to invest, and there is no better way to invest it than in Life Insurance.
As an ESTATE BUILDER there is nothing to equal Life Insurance.

TAKE THE FOLLOWING ACTUAL RESULT

A young man sixteen years of age took out a 15 years Endowment (No. 210380) in the Sun Life of Canada, which matured on the first of April. This young man paid annually $56.30 for fifteen years and he now has, through that investment, an immediate estate of $3495.00 in case of death.

DO YOU KNOW THAT THIS AMOUNTS TO ALMOST 15 PER CENT COMPOUND INTEREST ON EVERY DOLLAR PAID?

No wonder Sir Wilfrid said—and he might have added (no better place than the Sun Life of Canada)—"there is no better way to invest it than in LIFE INSURANCE."

I have followed very closely the reports of the Orillia School Board as they have come to me after each meeting during the year, and it appears to me that Mrs. Todd is the paramount mind on the Board. Her views have always been of the broadest nature, ever considering the child. Let me say that any money expended to improve the social life of the child is only practical economy. Passing last summer by a supervised playground during a holiday and seeing those little tots in the height of enjoyment, I made the remark to the janitor that that was the best expenditure that the city of Peterborough ever made. We don't realise what it means to a child whose surroundings are such that there is not much enjoyment, to have a place to go and mingle with other little fellows and feel that he is having just as good a time as other children of better surroundings.

I want to just mention that a few days ago, shortly after 4 o'clock, I was driving down through Ennismore. Six or eight boys of from twelve to sixteen years of age was standing on the stoop of the Post Office. A lady passed by, I presume one of their teachers, and every boy touched his cap to her, and the thought flashed upon me and I said to my wife on arriving home that there was something in those boys' school training or their home training that the average Public school boy was not getting.

Now, in conclusion, I say supervise the playgrounds and supervise all of them, supervise them Saturdays and holidays, and every summer night from 6 to 8 o'clock and at 8 o'clock let curfew ring in different parts of the city and let our city officials see to it that all boys and girls under 14 years of age are under their parents' or guardians' care.

While only a poor man depending on my daily earnings and my only child through with her education, I will pay my part without a kick. I am sorry to take up your space, but while alone in my home I cannot refrain from using the passing moments in giving vent to my feelings along this most important line.

Thanking you, I remain,

W. H. MERRILL.

STREET SIGNS WANTED

Editor Review:—As this is the season of the year when candidates for the City Council are announcing their platforms, I would like to suggest the following plank: That street signs be placed in such positions that they can be seen easily in winter as in summer. If this "plank" were adopted and carried by the incoming council, it would add greatly to the comfort of visitors in your city, and obviate the necessity for their having either to carry a snowshovel, or ask their way at each street corner.

SOUVENIR RETURNED BY PETERBOROUGH MAN

SMALL TESTAMENT TAKEN FROM ONE PRISONER IS FOUND BY ANOTHER

Harry Laird, of Blenheim, Ont., is the holder of a very unique war souvenir that came to him recently through the mails from Mr. R. B. Rogers of this city. It is a small pocket testament, and the story of the incident that led to its return to its proper owner is one of the most interesting of its kind.

Laird was taken prisoner at Sanctuary Wood on June 16, 1916, and immediately upon passing into the hands of the enemy was searched and his belongings taken from him.

Among these was a small pocket testament presented to him upon his departure for the front by the Blenheim Presbyterian Young People's Society. On the flyleaf was written his name and address, and there were also two small photographs of his mother and father.

Capt. Harry E. Rogers, formerly of Peterborough, now of Cooksville, Ont., who was also a prisoner of war, picked the testament up and kept it until he returned to Canda. Then he handed it over to his father, Mr. R. B. Rogers, who mailed it to Mr. Laird at Blenheim. Inscribed in the book is the name of a German officer, Dr. Oskar Weisenbohler, lieutenant, Tanhenheisier, 73, Canstatt, Wurttemburg. It is reported that the owner of the testament received a delightful surprise on the arrival of this souvenir through the mail.

PYREX CASSEROLE FOR MRS. SHIELDS

MEMBER OF CO-WORKER BIBLE CLASS HONOR THEIR POPULAR TEACHER.

On the evening of Friday last the members of the Co-Workers' Bible Class of Grace Church quietly invaded the home of their teacher, Mrs. Shields, and held possession until her return from Grace S. S. entertainment. Shortly after her coming, a program was placed in the hands of Mrs. Curtis, who ably filled the position of chairwoman. At the close of the program Mrs. Harrison read an appropriate address, and Mrs. Allison on behalf of the class presented Mrs. Shields with a pyrex casserole. Mrs. Shields made a suitable reply, after which a pleasant time was spent in music and impromptu speeches. Refreshments were served and the evening closed by singing "Blest Be the Tie" and the National Anthem.

A WORD OF COUNSEL.

To the Editor of The Review and all whom it may concern, which is every man and woman having a vote in the city:

Looking over the affairs of our city so far as I have been able to see, the Utilities Commission is the only branch of our city government that have not increased their rates and after paying not exorbitant but fair wages and also providing for the Compensation Act, have enough to still keep things moving.

While we regret that one of the commission has removed from the city and tendered his resignation, others whose terms expire with the end of this year are still with us. Now, in our own interests, which are the interests of the whole city, are we going to wake up and make it our business to see that those who helped to make these things possible are reinstated to help carry on the good work? We owe it to ourselves as well as to them to re-elect them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, I remain,

BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE DECIDES TO TAKE PART IN CIVIC ELECTIONS

Program of Improvement and Progress Planned by Representative Citizens of the City on the Lake Front.

That the Belleville Board of Trade members' group meetings for planning a bigger and better Belleville continue to stimulate helpful discussion and to bring forth numerous practical and worth-while suggestions was evident at the meetings of Groups No. 3 and 4, held last week under the chairmanship of Col. A. P. Allen and Mr. S. R. Burrows, for in spite of the extreme cold weather, and the many interests of the holiday season, a goodly number attended, and entered whole-heartedly into the discussion of Belleville's needs.

The primary election system has been requisitioned for the choice of directors who are nominated by ballot to be elected on the same way later on. In time this system is likely to be employed in securing candidates for municipal offices.

Among the new suggestions that were brought out at the last meeting were the following: Uniform business hours, have business divided over all days of the week, improve roads leading into city, more sanitary conditions, oil streets, promote community unity, make survey of available rooms for renting, elect a progressive council, appoint a playground commission, public comfort stations, commission plan of city government, appointing of suburb and area commission for highways, build workingmen's houses, take active interest in municipal elections, more and better school buildings, free skating rinks, housing inspection, secure sites for industries, improve shipping facilities, housing for returned soldiers, old boys' reunion, secure conventions, advertise local market prices, establish cement boat plant, sanitary inspection to cover plumbing, invest in local industries, co-operation with city council, assess vacant lots at sale prices, clean up streets and alleys, engage woman social worker, collect garbage from back doors, form syndicate to build houses, create a housing commission, adequate fire alarm system, declare war on the A.K.K. (Army of Belleville Knockers).

These suggestions will now be tabulated and a program of work will be formulated.

CONVICT WINS RACE AGAINST DEATH FROM SING SING PRISON TO HOSPITAL

Humane Consideration Shown Man Who Has Served All But a Few Months of a Three Years' Sentence.

New York, Dec. 22.—The gates of Sing Sing opened as dusk came Saturday afternoon and two keepers walked out bearing a stretcher, upon which lay a man near death, into a waiting automobile, where it was slung by ropes across the tonneau. A staff physician climbed into the car beside the dying man and the chauffeur started a race for Bellevue Hospital against death. Close to his breast the patient hugged a pardon which restored to him his citizenship and which granted his plea that he ge permitted to die a free man.

Death lost the first lap, and James Cummings, of Brooklyn, who had served all but a few months of a three year terms in prison, was carried into the hospital soon after seven o'clock. He had withstood the trip through a blinding snowstorm. Today surgeons will operate upon him and Cummings may live.

Prison physicians had condemned Cummings to death. A strange disease of the stomach, which inflicted endless torture and pain upon him, seemed to them to be incurable. At least only a most expert and skilled surgeon might bring relief and possibly save his life.

Cummings begged that he be permitted to die outside the great stone pile. His plea was sent to Governor Alfred E. Smith, and Friday morning the pardon was mailed in Albany.

Daniel J. Grant, acting warden, was notified. He detailed his secretary, Nicholas Schatzel, to the post office at Ossining to watch the mail. The pardon arrived on the last train from the north, and Cummings would have had to wait until Sunday tobe brought to New York city by railroad.

Acting Warden Grant believed the man to be dying, and he wanted to give him a fighting chance to die a free man, so he hastily rigged up an emergency stretcher, slung it across a prison automobile, and assignel Dr. Alexander Kosseff, of the prison staff, to start the rase to Bellevue.

"I never expedted a chance like this," Cummings said. "It was fine to get a pardon, but for Warden Grant to send me to Bellevue by automobile, why, that's real white, I think. Dr. Amos O. Squire, the prison physician, told me I couldn't possibly live without an operation and that the operation might not be successful. I told him I didn't care much about that, but that if I had to die I wanted to die outside. He took it up with the authorities and Governor Smith gave me a pardon.

"It's a good season of the year to me this year. Christmas doesn't always mean a lot to a fellow who gets in bad, but when a fellow's given a chance to spend Christmas outside, why that's worth all the suffering he's been through—and I suffered some.

"Sure, I hope the doctor fixes me up. I want to live now and just because I do want to live so awful much I think I'm going to get away with the operation. You don't care so much about whether you live or not when you're up there."

Cummings will be examined today and the operation will be made just as quickly as surgeons can determine whatis necessary.

OVER 700 CHILDREN OF VETERANS RECEIVE GIFTS FROM CHRISTMAS TREE

Crowds of Happy, Laughing Boys and Girls Stream Away From the G. W. V. Hall Laden With Presents The Sick Were Not Forgotten.

The homes of hundreds of children of the city who have suffered on account of the bravery and patriotism of their parents were made joyful by the gifts received from the Christmas trees at the Great War Veterans' Hall Saturday afternoon.

At 3 o'clock, the time for the treat to commence, the hall was lined with clamoring, happy children, gazing with anticipation upon the good things that could be seen on the trees and around the platform. Large bags, toy shovels, picture books and all sorts of things could be seen, and the prospect roused the excitement of the little ones.

Nor were they at all disappointed when their turn came to receive the the good things. Over seven hundred in all were given a parcel containing some toy or plaything, and a bag from Santa Clans containing nuts, oranges, candies and apples.

Each child was the son or daughter of some veteran who had played his part in the great war and had suffered for his country. Many of these homes would have passed over the Christmas season without the delight of receiving the play things, the candies and oranges which bring joy to the hearts of all children.

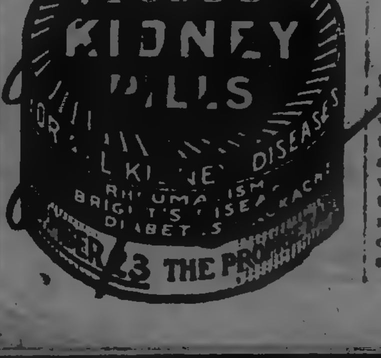
Besides this a large box was sent to the Isolation Hospital, and a great many others were sent to those who were unable to be on hand owing to illness.

During the afternoon, while the gifts were being distributed the band of the Great War Veterans provided a musical entertainment that added to the joyful spirit of the occasion and occupied the attenion of all those awaiting their turn.

Children Pleased.

It was a grand sight to stand outside the Veterans' building Saturday and watch the children stream out. Faces were aglow with pleasure everywhere, and the joy the children received from comparing their presents was manifest by their loud and happy talk. All were laughing, and a more cheerful spectacle could scarcely be imagined.

If the ladies of the women's auxiliary to the Great War Veterans, who prepared the treat and who were so busily engaged distributing the gifts could have seen the expressions on the faces of the departing boys and girls their hearts would have been gladdened and they would have had some idea of how their efforts on behalf of the less fortunate children were appreciated.



Greeks Prize Rugs.

Rug making is as old as Greece itself, but it was never made a commercial item, and it was rare indeed that a weaver could be persuaded to part with his rug. Greek rugs are of two kinds, the heavy ones used in winter and the light ones used at all times. In the beginning the designs were of the simplest, but later the Greeks borrowed floral designs from the Persians which loan was amply repaid with the development of Grecian art. Venetian rugs are also very rare.

Ticket Not Filled Out.

There was a new baby in the corner house, and the proud parents had sent out announcement cards to friends and neighbors. Mary, who lived in the same block, was anxious to see the new baby, and was waiting impatiently for the time to come when she could go. One afternoon at another neighbor's house she saw that she, too, had an announcement of the baby's arrival. "Oh, did you get a ticket to see the baby?" she said. "We did, but it didn't say what day to come."

Sunrise.

She struggled to a certain hilltop and saw before her the silent inflooding of the day. Out of the east it welled and whitened; the darkness trembled into light; and the stars were extinguished like the street lamps of a human city. The whiteness brightened into silver, the silver warmed to gold, the gold kindled into pure and living fire; and the face of the east was barred with elemental scarlet.—R. L. Stevenson.

Fingers Tireless Travelers.

Typists' fingers are the most amazing travelers in creation, and are capable of going tremendous distances without the fatigue that would come to the feet and legs in performing a similar journey. In ordinary typewriting the hand may travel, according to an expert, 10,000 miles a year and not indicate any impairment in efficiency. This refers, of course, to the average typist in an office.

NEW MINISTER TO PEKING.

Has Worked Through All the Grades of the Foreign Office.

Mr. Beilby Francis Alston, the new British Minister at Peking, certainly deserves the job. He has been in the running for years and is understood to have wanted the post very badly. Criticisms have always varied about him, but the middle view seems to be the correct one, namely, that he will be a good, useful, diplomatic representative, without being in any way brilliant.

His early upbringing was all in his favor, since his father was Sir Francis Alston, one of the lights of the Victorian Foreign Office. His education was mainly abroad, where he was trained for the Foreign Office in which he has worked through all the grades, beginning in 1890. His chief posts have been at Copenhagen, Buenos Ayres and Peking, of which he became the councillor of legation in 1911-12 and charge d'affaires in 1913. Even in those days people talked about him as a certain minister of the future.

Mr. Alston's utility to the Foreign Office has not lain in the permanency of his occupation of diplomatic posts. He is the diplomatic tourist. Whenever there was a mission going or a conference being held Mr. Alston was always approached. He was present at a conference on copyright in Paris (1896), at three sugar conferences at Brussels, and was sent with Prince and Princess Alexander of Teck to the coronation of the King of Siam at Bangkok in December, 1911. Whenever foreign diplomatic representatives came here it was a moral certainty that Mr. Alston would be attached to them. He specialized in this sort of attachment to distinguished Chinese visitors to Great Britain who came either on a mission or some royal function such as a coronation. This explains why he holds the Grand Cross of the Double Dragon of China, and why he is Commander of the White Elephant of Siam.

There are those who say that Mr Alston will never "set the Thames on fire." Perhaps not, but he will make few or no mistakes. For years when he was at the Foreign Office he was at the head of the Far Eastern section, or attached to it, and used to receive visitors who came to inquire into important events of the day affecting that part of the world. Mr. Alston used to handle them beautifully, though perhaps they went away thinking they had not learned much. His critics might say that Mr. Alston had not much to tell them, but anyway, his visitors were pleased, and he had no enemies. Otherwise he is not specially distinguished; he is, in fact, the businesslike type of diplomatist, and the Government at home will be able to rely on him. He will never get the Foreign Office into trouble, and it is something for the Foreign Office to be able to count so confidently on one of the young men whom it has trained. His tendencies are not particularly literary, but he does endeavor to study oriental matters, and it is his knowledge of these that has sent him to the Far East rather than his knowledge of Orientals.

Bustle Along the Jordan.

There is unaccustomed activity along the River Jordan. Experts from the technical department of the government at Cairo are prospecting for coal, oil, and minerals; engineers are making the surveys that forerun the reclamation of waste land by irrigation; and British energy is extending in this historic but long-abandoned region the modernization that began when Jerusalem was taken and the inhabitants as well as the army of occupation immediately supplied with a twentieth century water system that restored and made useful the ancient reservoirs south of Bethlehem. The Jordan valley, as the signs now point, will become a very different place. The river, the most important in Palestine, before the war was regarded as the Sultan's property. No vessel could sail it without his permission, nor could any bridge be built over it, and the permission had been withheld from tourist companies wishing to establish steamboat service. Much of the immediate country was waste land, and still is for that matter, except that now the British engineers have looked at it and said that a system of irrigation canals could use the river and make some 250,000 acres of alluvial soil available for the agriculture of a semi-tropical climate. At the same time the examination of the Dead Sea Basin predicts that here Palestine has a source of natural wealth comparable to the Klondike. Coal, oil, bitumen, and sulphur undoubtedly wait for development; copper was mined there when Byzantium stood on part of the site of Constantinople; marble, porphyry, and other valuable kinds of stone add to the natural wealth, to say nothing of salt and phosphates.

Lawyers in Print.

An article was the other day printed in the Observer of London which may suggest to somebody a reasonably stout little book on the same subject. Lawyers in literature engrossed the writer, not as makers of literature but as represented by those who make it. Beginning with the Man of Law in the "Canterbury Tales," a considerable procession of lawyers can be discovered in print; particularly in the work of Dickens, who is credited with having described thirty-five, in addition to two law-stationers, two law-writers, and a law-student. Fielding and Smollett each wrote about lawyers; Trollope pictured them; Scott, George Eliot, and Balzac added to the gallery. A largely forgotten book, "Ten Thousand a Year," is referred to as containing pen pictures of a number of lawyers who were once more or less distinguished. Very likely the lawyers who have made literature also would turn out to be a sizable company; and, of course, there are people who insist that a lawyer wrote "Hamlet" and a number of other well-known and lasting plays.

Photographs of women are very rarely taken in China.

The Lesson of Revolution

THE time is approaching when the world must do some constructive thinking. It is quite true that a small, a very small minority is already engaged in this. That has always been so, but the trouble is that a minority cannot really think for a majority, even if the majority elects to be thought for by the minority. As it is, a large percentage of the world is thinking anarchically, on the broad basis that history has shown reformation to be impracticable, unless preceded by a destructive wave sufficiently overwhelming to render fundamental rebuilding a necessity; whilst opposed to this are those who would concentrate the force of nations on the destruction of the destroyers, rather than checkmate them by means of a great reconstruction program.

Now reconstruction on the Phoenix plan has never been successful except in the solitary instance of the Phoenix. That mythological bird has, in other words, failed to acquaint its imitators with the secret of the process. Quite a number of adventurers have discovered this in the past, and the latest of the disillusioned is apparently Nicholas Lenine. The Bolshevist Government in Russia, that is to say, has not merely put on all its brakes, it has reversed its engines. The Red Terror is now excused as a necessity of the hour: a little while ago anyone who denounced it, was denounced, in turn, as a slanderous reactionary. Evidence, however, is not disposed of by the simple process of denial, and so the world is faced by the apologetical gamut of an earlier Jacobinism.

The question, then, which arises, and it has something more than a mere speculative interest attached to it, is, will Lenine be able to maintain himself where Robespierre failed? Certainly he is intellectually far more adaptable, and he is cumbered, in Trotzky, with no academical revolutionary like Saint-Just; indeed, so much greater is his influence than that of Trotzky, that he may almost be said to be playing a lone hand. Besides, he has one enormous advantage over the men of '93. It is this, that the Bolshevist leaders are practically without competitors in the great process of reconstruction, and they have taken advantage of this completely to change their policy. Disraeli's famous simile of the Whigs and their clothes might be applied to them with duplicated force and with refined irony. As they walk about Moscow to-day they are arrayed in all the political habiliments of the Mensheviki. They are yearning to strain the once despised peasant to their bosoms, whilst the bourgeois organizer finds the right hand of fellowship extended to him, with a flattering salary grasped in its palm. Strangest of all, here, in the Ultima Thule of Communism, they have revived private industrial enterprise.

Here, then, is an economic Daniel come to judgment, and the shipwrights of Clydebank and the miners of Pennsylvania, no less than Threadneedle Street and Wall Street, will do well to take notice of the portent. The difference between the French Revolution and the Revolution in Russia is essentially this, that the one began and ended in politics, whilst the other has developed into economics. For Napoleon to establish the First Empire was, for this reason, comparatively easy; in a way, he buttressed the movement for a return to law and order for which the nation was craving, after the horrors of the orgy of the guillotine. But, to-day, to return to the Tzardom would be to take away the land from the peasants, and the factories from the operatives; and a nation of peasants and operatives will never listen to the wiles of a Koltchak, not even though he were a Napoleonic one. That is why the revolution of 1789 could be partially reversed; and that is why the revolution in Russia stands in spite and not by reason of the Red Terror.

This does not justify the Red Terror, it does not palliate one of the crimes of Lenine, but it does explain the failure of Judenitch and of Koltchak, and the growing failure of Denikin.

Now all of this contains a lesson which the Western world would be well advised to learn, and it is this, that the anarchist is only dangerous when you play into his hands. What was wrong with the policy of the Allies in Russia was simply that it was calculated to produce the maximum of irritation with the minimum of effect. They might have intervened in force and suppressed the Bolsheviki, which would have been easy, though troublesome and very expensive, or they might have kept their hands off, and left the anti-Bolshevist elements to work out the problem. As it was, they intervened in insufficient strength to accomplish anything definite, but with a sufficiency of interference to consolidate the Bolshevist resistance.

This would be bad enough if it stopped at the Russian frontier, but indications are not lacking that the same chaotic thinking is being applied to the solution of the economic problem elsewhere. If trouble is to be avoided governments must make up their minds to a definite economic policy, and not be content to drift from one panacea to another. Therein lies the real danger of revolutionary propaganda. But if the governments, while insisting sternly on obedience to law, will adopt broad measures of reform, the revolutionary will find himself entirely impotent. lesson of revolution.—Christian Science Monitor.

A very laughable comedy drama. This pretty young star plays the part of an usher in a fashionable theatre and has dreams of a romance with some eligible young man—with one of the many whom she shows to their seats.

Imitation Ivory.

Those who are interested in clay modelling will be glad to hear of a method discovered by means of which designs may be executed in imitation ivory. Mix equal parts of finely powdered eggshells and isinglass with enough alcohol to make a paste. The vessel containing the mixture should be warmed by placing it in a jar of hot water. The paste is very easy to work while moist, but hardens when dry and looks exactly like ivory. If it should harden before the design is completed, it may be softened by the addition of a little warm alcohol.

To Cure Insomnia.

On the theory that insomnia can be cured by lessening the moisture in the lungs, an Englishman has invented apparatus supplying warm, dry and sterilized air to be breathed.

No Free Program.

Paganini once received a pressing invitation to dine with notable company in Paris. A postscript to the invitation said "do not fail to bring your violin." The invitation was returned with Paganini's sentiments inscribed in these words "My violin does not dine."

MARATHON RACE TO BE FIERCE TEST

WILL RUN OVER A COURSE OF 26 MILES OF PAVEMENT

The Marathon race at the Olympic games at Antwerp, Belgium, next summer promises to be fully as severe a test on the stamina of the contenders as was the Stockholm-Sollentuna and return run at the Stockholm Olympiad in 1912.

It is proposed to run the 1920 Marathon from Brussels to Antwerp —a distance approximately twenty-six miles. The road over which the plodders will battle for the distance classic is an excellent one—for automobiles. The entire distance is paved with asphalt and Belgian blocks which are first cousins to cobblestones. This footing is not going to work any hardship against the chances of the Canadian and American representatives, most of whom are accustomed to hustling along over the city pavements, but it will be none the less easy on the feet and leg muscles of the contenders.

Course Followed by Huns.

The Brussels-Antwerp course follows the exact road over which the Huns marched in the fall of 1914 in their drive from the beautiful Capital to Antwerp; this feature of this race giving the contest a historical flavor, equalled only by the race won by Billy Sherring of Hamilton over the Marathon-Athens course, over which the immortal Greek soldier ran, after the battle of Marathon, to warn the Athenians of the Persians' intention of executing a flank attack on their city.

The Belgians plan to start the Olympic race from the outskirts of Brussels shortly after noon, the finish to be staged in the Stadium at Antwerp about three hours later.

For the first time in athletic history of the Olympic games the runners will be followed by airplanes. Belgian military aviators, all of them war veterans, will fly over the course and report the progress of the race to the waiting crowds in Antwerp.

In view of the fact that the Canadian Olympic Committee asked that the Marathon race be included in the athletic list, it is believed that they will make a special effort to send a large and formidable team of runners overseas for this event.

SERIOUS CHARGES VS. MANAGER JOHNSON

CLUB OWNERS DECLARE HE TRIED TO FORCE THEM OUT OF BASEBALL

New York, Dec. 22.— Arguments on the application of the New York American League club for the appointment of a commission to examine officers of the Cleveland club regarding Ban Johnson's interest in that club were heard today by Justice Vernon M. Davis of the State Supreme Court. Johnson's attorney claimed that a commission would be unnecessary. Decision was reserved.

Stock in the Cleveland club held by President Johnson was simply collateral for a loan made to the club by Johnson in 1915, declared his attorney, who also represented the Cleveland club.

A charge of a conspiracy on the part of Johnson and the owners of the five clubs "loyal" to him to force the owners of the New York club to withdraw from baseball was made by Charles H. Tuttle, attorney for the club. In support of the charge, Tuttle read portions of a letter, which he said the New York club obtained when Johnson's letterbooks were recently obtained under a subpoena. The letter, which it was said Johnson sent to the five club owners last August, declared: "It is my judgment that they (meaning the New York club owners, Tuttle said), should be retired from baseball."

ROWDY ELLIOTT GETS ANOTHER CHANCE

WILL REPORT TO THE ROBINS AT NEXT SEASON'S TRAINING CAMP

When the Robins assemble at their training camp in Jacksonville next spring Haorld Elliott, better known to National League fans at Rowdy, will be confronted with another opportunity to make good in the big show. The catcher was recently purchased by the Flatbush club from the Oakland club of the Pacific Coast league and Manager Wilbert Robinson is going to give him all the chance in the world to prove that he possesses real major league ability. With the possible exception of third base the catching staff is the weakest department of the Robins and it may be that the addition of Elliott will solve one of the rotund leader's problems.

Since Lew McCarty was traded to the Giants in 1916 the Flatbush club has been without a real first class backstop. Manager Robbie did not want to part with Lew, but the club was fighting for the pennant and a first baseman had to be obtained to replace the injured Jack Daubert. The trade brought Fred Merkle and Chief Meyers to Brooklyn and the team was successful in the fight for the championship. During the three last seasons, however, the absence of McCarty has been felt to no little extent. True, the Robins have several backstops, but unfortunately it is a case of quantity, not quality.

Last season Ernie Krueger started out as the first string backstop. Krueger is a smart ball player, a good batsman and shows excellent judgment in handling the pitchers. However he encountered great difficulty in pegging accurately to the bases, and for that reason he soon gave way to Otto Miller and Mack Wheat. Miller and the brother of Capt. Zach took turns in wearing the mask and chest protector, but neither strenghthened the weak part of the team to a marked degree. There is perhaps no other backstop in the National league, who knows the weakness of batters as well as the experienced Miller, but like Krueger he was unable to cut down rivals trying to steal. The throwing of Wheat, who is imbued with a quantity of ambition, was an improvement over his mates, but his batting was not any too heavy. In 41 games he compiled a batting average of .205. Miller's average for 51 contests was .226. Krueger played in 80 battles and was credited with a mark of .248.

Whether Rowdy Elliott, who was tried and found wanting by other major league outfits, can show any improvement over the playing of any of the three catchers who composed the staff last summer remains to be seen. Elliott was with the Cubs during the seasons of 1917 and 1918 and then was sent to the Pacific coast. In 1.17 he took part in 85 games and compiled a swatting average of .251 The following season with Killefer and O'Farrell awaiting the call of Manager Fred Mitchell, there was little chance for Elliott to get into action. He took part in less than fifteen contests and did not break into the official averages of that season.

JACK DEMPSEY WOULD MURDER CARPENTIER

SUCH IS OPINION OF MIKE O'DOWD WHO WANTS TO MEET THE FRENCHMAN

Mike O'Dowd, middleweight champion, has renewed his challenge to Georges Carpentier, the heavyweight champion of Europe. O'Dowd wants to battle the French fighter before any club that will put on the bout, and, morever, he does not want the wold with a fence around it for his end. O'Dowd is nearly as big as Carpentier and believes that because of the life he led during the war Carpentier will not be able to give Dempsey anything like a fight. Paddy Mullins, manager of O'Dowd is likewise confident of the result of a meeting with the Frenchman.

"O'Dowd is the logical American to fight Carpentier," says Mullins. "Dempsey is not the man to go against the Frenchman. That would not be a fight; it would be murder."

O'Dowd claims Carpentier made a poor showing against Dick Smith, a fighter he knocked out in three rounds during the interallied tournament.

ILLITERATE INDIA.

But Few of the Millions Are Able to Read or Write.

An English writer has called attention to the startling fact that 90 per cent. of the males and 99 per cent. of the females in India, whose population is placed at 315,000,000, are unable to read and write. The total number of illiterates is estimated at nearly 295,000,000. Says this writer:

"It is one of the glories of missionary enterprise in India that the percentage of illiterates, men and women, among Christian natives falls to 70 per cent. and 86 per cent. respectively. Perhaps readers will rather wonder that 70 per cent. of Christian men and 86 per cent. of Christian women should be illiterates than rejoice that the missionaries have succeeded in lowering the percentage in their own flocks 20 per cent. in the case of men and 13 per cent. in the case of women. And certainly it is a shocking thing that there should be in India 1,422,154 men and 1,613,811 women who are unable to read one word of the Gospels in which they have been instructed.

"But a few more figures will be likely to convert any inclination to blame missionaries for their failures into the desire to commend them for their wonderful success. For of children who attend elementary schools many of which, though not, of course, all, are under missionary control, between 83 and 87 per cent., according to the district selected, leave the school at the end of their time without being able to read.

"If we ask the reason for the appallingly high percentage of total failure it can be found in the confusion of Indian languages and alphabets. There are in India 17 distinct languages, with upward of 500 dialects. These are written in some 50 different scripts, each requiring from 500 to 1,000 types. The same language is often printed in three different scripts and the same script used for several different languages.

"I have not the slightest hesitation in saying that the mere learning of the alphabet must be out of the power of many lads of moderate ability. Indeed, it is a striking fact that it is immeasurably easier to teach a blind man to read in the specially prepared Braille type than to teach a man with sight to read. The first thing needed is a simple script, prepared on scientific principles, and recognized by the Government as the authorized script for all languages. But perhaps I ought not to have written 'the first thing needed.' The first thing needed is a great increase of interest in and knowledge of the whole problem here in England."

Suffer for Sins of Others.

"There is no sort of wrong deed of which a man can bear the punishment alone; you can't isolate yourself, and say that the evil which is in you shall not spread," says George Eliot in Adam Bede. It is only too true that we cannot bear punishment alone. And usually our mistakes entail worse suffering on those who love us than they do on ourselves. Just as on the other hand our successes and rewards bring more joy to our dear ones than to ourselves. "No man liveth to himself alone."

Arctic Light.

At noon of December 21, the shortest and darkest day of the year, we could easily detect a faint glow of light in the south. The true darkness of night is a result of the complete disappearance of all traces of twilight, which occurs when the sun reaches a point of 18 degrees below the horizon. Our latitude was 78 degrees 20 minutes, therefore the sun at this time was only about 12 degrees below the horizon.—From "Four Years in the White North," by Donald B. McMillan.

When Piano Was New.

The first public performance on a piano was at Covent Garden, London, 152 years ago. The invention of the instrument is credited to Cristofalli, an Italian; J. C. Schroter, a German, and Marius, a Frenchman. The first crude pianofortes were made early in the eighteenth century, but for many years they received no serious consideration from musicians. Johannes Zump, a German, established the first piano factory in England, and it was he who built the instrument that was used in Covent Garden.

Mica.

Mica, so named from its being easily divided into glistening scales, consists of silica and alumina, associated with magnesia, soda and lime in varying proportions. Thus we have potash mica, consisting of silica, alumina and potash; and magnesia mica, in which the alumina is partially replaced by magnesia, passing—as the proportion of magnesia increases—into soft talc, which is chiefly composed of silica and magnesia.

Cannot Photograph in Colors.

It seems a remarkable thing, considering the progress of the science of photography and cinematography, that color photography is still an undiscovered secret. There are processes by which a very natural camouflage of Nature can be produced, but the plate is yet to be made which will produce a landscape in autumn in all its wondrous tints, or take a portrait of a lady with the natural coloring of the hair, eyes, and complexion, with the various colors of her costume "in the manner as she lives."

Pennilion Singing.

Pennilion singing is quite common in Wales, and peculiar to the principality. It consists of an instrument playing over a tune in strict time and repeating it over and over again, while the singer or singers extemporize words to it in rhyme. The impromptu poetry must fit in with the music and is generally of an amusing character. The custom is quite common among the people, and the instrument used is their national instrument, the harp.

The Bible and Women Preachers.

Women preachers are taking comfort from the fact that one champion has discovered what they think is biblical recognition for them. In the prayer book version of Psalm lxviii, occurs the verse, "The Lord gave the word; great was the company of the preachers." The revised version of the Bible translates the passage thus: "The Lord giveth the word. The women that publish the tidings are a great host."

Never the Same Again.

Friendship is a vase which, when it is flawed by heat or violence, or accident, may as well be broken at once; it can never be trusted after. The more graceful and ornamental it was, the more clearly do we discern the hopelessness of restoring it to its former state. Coarse stones, if they be fractured, may be cemented again; precious ones, never.—Walter S. Loudon.

Better Than Medicine.

Remember that medicine is, for most part, nothing but the substitute of exercise and right thinking. And it does not take a great deal of either right thinking or fresh air to enable you to throw off any ordinary symptom of illness. All that is necessary is for you to hold in your mind the thought that you are both healthy and cheerful.

The Office Boy's Trouble.

The office boy had been sitting for hours at a typewriter, gazing vacantly into distance, and the force was becoming worried. "He's sick," suggested the kindly, old, gray-haired bookkeeper, but the blonde stenographer insisted there must have been some tragedy at home. The suspense ended when the lad suddenly turned to the fat claim clerk and inquired: "Say, Mr. Jones, how do you spell Thelma?"

One Strange Result of War.

Strange, unknown flowers are springing up in shell holes and dugouts over the scarred surface of No Man's land, and many are the conjectures concerning the strange phenomenon.

Botanists who have studied the strange plants have come to the conclusion that they have sprung from seeds buried in the earth for many decades. A well-known London botanist in a recent discussion said:

"It is known that seeds have been buried for upwards of 60 years without losing their power of germination. Seeds of corn and wheat buried with Egyptian mummies thousands of years ago have been planted out in the 20th century and have germinated in the ordinary way. It is quite possible that strange flowering plants—that is, strange to the local inhabitants—are now flowering in the French battlefields. The heavy shell fire which has torn up the earth may have created conditions for their growth after lying dormant so long."

Return of the Wanderers.

"I'm kind of afraid of universal prohibition," remarked Cactus Joe.

"But Crimson Gulch has improved visibly."

"Yes. When the Gulch went dry the worst element of our little burg went on over to that near-by gin mill metropolis, Coyote Center. With universal prohibition they're all liable to think they might be jes' as well off if they came back home."

Cattalo a Hybrid.

The cattalo is an animal one parent of which is the buffalo and the other the cow. The hybrids have been raised in considerable numbers on a cattle ranch in the Panhandle of Texas.

Useful as Well as Cheap.

Automobile oil is inexpensive, and useful for many household purposes; one drop will relieve a squeaking door hinge or a heavy running sewing machine; wipe it off with absorbent cotton.

Botha's Narrow Escape.

The Cape Town correspondent of the London Times says: Botha's death recalls a curious coincidence, not without historical interest, which I am allowed to transmit by Sir David Graaff, one of Botha's most intimate friends and political associates. A few days before the outbreak of war, Botha, who had been visiting Rhodesia, was on his way to Beira, whence he had booked a passage to Delagoa Bay en route to Pretoria. The Acting Minister in Pretoria had telegraphed to Botha on Saturday that there was no need for anxiety in regard to the European situation, as it was certain that Britain in any case would not be embroiled. As it happened Sir David Graaff had returned from a sojourn at a German watering-place to London on the Friday, and, though the British Cabinet's final decision had not then been taken, he formed the conclusion on the Sunday morning that war with Germany was inevitable, and telegraphed to Botha: "British Government declares war Germany to-morrow." In fact, the British ultimatum expired on Tuesday, August 4, midnight.

Sir David Graaff's telegram was received with incredulity in Pretoria but after some hesitation it was retransmitted to Botha. Botha afterwards said that he was puzzled by the apparent contradiction between Pretoria and Sir David Graaff, but concluded that Sir David Graaff was not likely to send so definite a statement without good reason. Accordingly he cancelled his passage on the German steamer and returned immediately via Rhodesia to Pretoria.

The steamer sailed from Beira on August 4, and was never afterwards heard of in South Africa. But for the almost accidental and wholly unofficial telegram from Sir David Graaff, Botha would either have disappeared, or, if the steamer ever reached Germany, would certainly have been interned. It is needless to suggest what a sinister interpretation might have been placed on such an incident in South Africa, or what untoward political consequences might have ensued.

First Actor to Play Hamlet.

A tercentenary of the year that is no less interesting in America than in England, although it might have passed unnoted and few would have known the difference, recalls Richard Burbage, the first actor to play Hamlet. The tradition comes down, although not unanimously accepted as reliable by Shakespearean scholars, that the description of the prince as "fat and scant of breath" was written in because Burbage himself was short and stout. The shortness and stoutness, however, are acceptable, but despite the apparent handicap Burbage seems, so far as one can judge by surviving report, to have been an excellent actor. Ben Jonson referred to him as "your best actor"; and another describes him, when not vocally holding the attention of the audience, as "never falling in his part when he had done speaking; but with his looks and gesture maintaining it still unto the height." In a modern performance of "Hamlet" there are probably details which could be traced back, player by player, to that "first night" performance in London at which Burbage embodied the character that Shakespeare had but just written.

The natural selection is usually the best umbrella in the rack.

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE IN LOCAL CHURCHES

BEAUTIFUL SERVICE OF PRAISE WAS LEADING FEATURE OF YESTERDAY'S WORSHIP

The Christmas message with joy and fellowship was proclaimed from all the churches of the city yesterday in sermon and in music. The chorus of the different congregations took advantage of the season to render that beautiful inspiring music that the Christmas season inspires. In several of the churches Christmas contatas were sung by the choirs and everywhere the grand old Christmas hymns were rendered with spirit by congregations and choirs alike.

The ministers everywhere spoke of the birth of the Babe of Bethlehem, upon which occasion the Christian world entered a new and brighter era. They spoke of the circumstances surrounding the historic event, the stable and the manger cradle. Many spoke of the message the angel brought to the shepherds, watching their sheep by night, and that wonderful angelic chorus, "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men."

The Christmas season should be and is the happiest and most joyful time of the year. It celebrates the birth of the Saviour who lived in that miraculous duality of man and diety and suffered, bled and died for the souls of all those who would believe in Him.

The Christmas decorations were also in evidence throughout the churches of the city. Red and green, the colors that devote peace and joy and the picture of the star in the East that guided the Wise Men to the Saviour's cradle, were displayed. Everywhere it was a wonderful day in the churches and this Cristmas, the second Christmas of peace, since following four years of war, will be ranked by everyone as the most joyful celebration the world has ever seen.

REV. JOHN GALT RESIGNS AS PASTOR OF THE GILMOUR MEMORIAL CHURCH

Popular Minister Has Accepted Call to Baptist Tabernacle, Kenora.

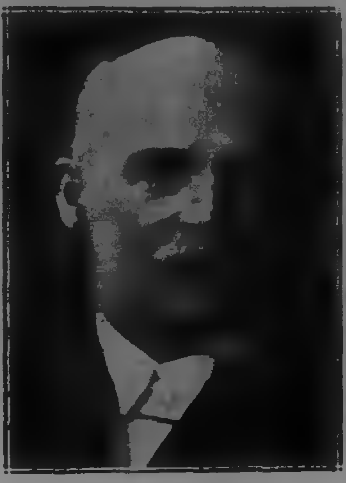
Rev. John Galt tendered his resignation as pastor of the Gilmour Memorial Church at the service yesterday to the great regret of the members of the congregation. This resignation was also announced at the service held in the Selwyn Church to the people of which Mr. Galt has ministered. He will leave this vicinity in a short time to become pastor of the Baptist Tabernacle in Kenora, an important charge.

Mr. Galt has secured the position solely on his reputation as a successful pastor, the congregation at Kenora extending him a call without having heard him preach. Leaders in the work of the church have also given him the highest recommendation for the new charge.

Mr. Galt is a Scotchman by birth, but spent seventeen years in London in various callings. When he immigrated to Canada his first charge was at Vankleek Hill in the Ottawa Valley, where he remained for three and a half years. He came to the Gilmour Memorial Church nearly four and a half years ago.

Mr. Galt is recognized as one of the successful pastors in the Baptist Church in Canada and his advancement to a wider field was always recognized as a question of time. During his pastorate in this vicinity, he has always taken an active interest in all affairs outside of the regular church work and the development of the community spirit has been one of his aims. His success in that respect has been marked. His removal from his present field will occasion unfeigned regret, not only among his own people but of the general public.

Mr. Galt won the first prize, $125 in cash, offered by the Presbyterian church for the best essay on "The Twentieth Century Minister," which was offered as a part of the present Interchurch Forward Movement. This success at once gave him a national reputation and probably accounts for his call to a wider field.



REV. JOHN GALT

CHIEF SCOUT'S MESSAGE

Government House,
Ottawa, Dec. 22, 1919.

The question is often asked, "What will be the future of Canada?" and the immediate reply is to point out the wonderful national assets of the country and the endless opportunities which it provides, but by far the greatest of all assets is the character of her citizens.

The history of Canada in peace and war is a record of continuous success, and it is for us in our generation to see that that record is worthily maintained.

One of our surest hopes lies in the Canadian of today. He inherits a great tradition. He has the instincts and qualities which have made British and Canadian citizenship what it is and as a Boy Scout he has the opportunity of training himself to make the best use of them.

The year now drawing to a close has been eventful, but we can look forward with ever increasing confidence, and as Chief Scout I am glad to have the privilege of wishing every Scout a happy Christmas and a most prosperous New Year.

(Sgd.) DEVONSHIRE,
Chief Scout.

PROCLAIMS HOME RULE FOR INDIA

HOME RULE THE GREAT ISSUE

LONDON NEWSPAPERS DISCUSS NEW MEASURE DESIGNED TO PEACIFY IRELAND.

GENERAL COMMENT FAVORABLE

BUT IRISH TIMES SAYS ERIN WILL REJECT THIS LATEST PROPOSAL.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 23.—Aside from one or two irreconciliable anti-Home Rule journals, the papers this morning give, on the whole, a favorable reception to the Government's new scheme for Irish self-government. None, however, expressed genuine expectation of the success of the plan. While it is recognized that the bill, the fourth Home Rule measure to be presented to Parliament, will be absolutely rejected by a large section of the Irish people and regarded with suspicion and distrust by others, it is contended it deserves to be fairly tried and considered.

The Daily News, a great champion of Home Rule and a severe critic of Lloyd George and the Coalition Government, says the offer as far as Englishmen can judge should not be rejected out of hand, assuming it to be honestly put forward.

The Chronicle says the measure appears to be generous, while the Daily Mail says it is a better scheme than any previous Government has produced.

The Irish Times says that for many reasons, some good, some bad, some wise and some mad, three-quarters of the Irish people will reject the bill. "We learn for peace, but in Lloyd George's offer we see not peace, but the sword."

While it is realised everywhere that no support of the measure may be expected from Ireland the hope is expressed that when English opinion has passed the same in law, men will ultimately be found in Ireland to give it effect and gradually evolve a peaceful settlement.

BRITISH COMMONS PROROGUED

King Retires Members From Attendance Until Feb. 10th.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 23.—The House of Commons was formaly prorogued by King George today until February 10th. In his speech his Majesty regretted that there is no improvement in the Russian situation dand no immediate prospect of the establishment of constitutional government. After reference to the agreement with the Persian Government, the King declared that the visit of the Prince of Wales to Canada, Newfoundland and the United States had filled his heart with feelinsg of pride and satisfaction. He hoped that the warmth and kindliness of the greeting the Prince received in the United States would have the happiest effect upon the relations betwen the two countries. Referring to the finances he said that only by strict economy, sustained by increased production, could the country maintain its historic position in commerce and finance.

WARDEN McINTOSH WILL STAND AGAIN

TWO NAMED TO OPPOSE HIM FOR REEVESHIP IN NORTH MONAGHAN.

The following nominations were made in North Monaghan today:

For Reeve—John McIntosh, the present Warden; H. B. Rye, Herbert Forster.

All of the three laid their platform before the electors and asked for support.

For Deputy Reeve—Fred Wilson, Thomas Henry.

For Councillors—Torrin Lillico, Robert Dobbin, Alfred Barnes, Fred Rowen, Bert Arnott, James Morrow.

McINTYRE, TAYLOR, DUNCAN, GORDON, ARE NOMINATED FOR THE MAYORALTY

Two First Mentioned Will Make the Race—Mayor Duncan is Out of it and Mr. Gordon Was Not Present to Express His Intentions.

The following four nominations for Mayor were received at the City Council chamber this morning:

William Hall Taylor, proposed by Albert Cuffe, seconded by Frederick Finnie.

George Newcombe Gordon, proposed by M. Sucee, seconded by A. Saunders.

George H. Duncan, proposed by J. J. Turner, seconded by W. J. Oke.

Archibald A. McIntyre, proposed by J. J. Hartley, seconded by J. W. Meyers.

Ald. Taylor's Address.

At the conclusion of the nominations the candidates were called on to address the electors. The first on the list was Ald. Taylor, who declared that he would stand for election, and if elected to the position of First Magistrate of Peterborough he would endeavor to discharge the duties of that high office for the weal of the whole community, irrespective of class or creed.

Ald. Taylor, as chairman of the finance committee, made a lengthy statement of Peterborough's financial standing, proving that it was on a firm basis in spite of criticism to the contrary.

Ald. Taylor, in his platform as presented to the electors this morning, favors more extension of the street railway. He feels that satisfactory arrangements can be made with the Hydro Electric for these extensions that would be a decided benefit to the city.

In conclusion, Ald. Taylor declared that he would devote all the time necessary to tne office for the uplift of the city, industrially, commercially and expansively.

Mayor Duncan Advises.

After the conclusion of Ald. Taylor's address Mayor Duncan was called on to speak to the electors. He declared that for the past two years, and in fact for the past twelve years, he had done all he could for the benefit of the city. He emphasized the large amount of work that was ahead of next year's mayor. The bridge is not half finished, and the sewage disposal plant, which will cost at least $150,000, must be built. Then the paving of George street south will occupy the attention of the new Council and new Mayor.

Mayor Duncan suggested to the electors and to next year's Council that they elect Ald. Phelan to the Council and to the chairmanship of the Board of Works to finish his excellent services of the past year.

He thought that for the Utilities Commission, Mr. Hicks' services should be appreciated and that he should be returned to office. For the other vacancy he suggested that the efficient work of Mr. Bradburn as Mayor entitled him to election on the Utilities Board.

As for Mayor, "let them fight it out," declared Mr. Duncan. But he urged the citizens to choose a good one, as the work before him will be extensive and of considerable importance to the city.

Alderman McIntyre.

The next speaker was Ald. McIntyre, who spoke of his long services to the city as an alderman. He had spent all his term of office in an endeavor to benefit the citizens of Peterborough, and, if elected Mayor, would devote his energies along the same lines.

For the past year Ald. McIntyre has been chairman of the manufacturers' committee, and with the assistance of the Mayor and Council six new industries had located here.

Ald. McIntyre stated that it was at his suggestion that the city asked the Dominion Government for the $50,000 grant for the new Hunter street bridge. They were successful in obtaining this and it was of great benefit in the work.

"I know what is ahead of Council next year," declared Ald. McIntyre. He then went on to refer to the different problems that he would have to face next year, if elected. The bridge will have to be finished, the sewage disposal plant must be constructed, and the housing problem will occupy the attention of Council. Ald. McIntyre, if elected, promised to promote every plan by which the interests of the city may be advanced. The Board of Trade and the City Council must get together to lower the high cost of living.

Then, anything like misunderstanding between Labor and Capital, Ald. McIntyre said, should be extinguished. He claims to be both an employer and a worker and understands the situation from both sides. In conclusion, he stated that, if elected, he would do everything in his power to further the best interests of the city.

Mr. Gordon was not present at the meeting, and nothing was learned of his intentions with regard to staying in the race.

LIST OF NOMINEES FOR SCHOOL BOARD

A long list of nominations for the Board of Education was received at the City Council chamber htis morning, including all the members whose terms of office expire this year.

The following is the list of those nominated:

Joseph William Worth, proposed by J. A. Aylmer, seconded by W. C. Switzer.

Mrs. Kate E. Morris, proposed by W. H. Hill, seconded by Thos. Barrie.

Dr. Frank C. Neal, proposed by W. G. Ferguson, seconded by J. John.

Garfield O. Cameron, proposed by W. G. Morrow, seconded by J. J. Turner.

Edward George Patterson, proposed by W. H. Bradburn, seconded by Robert Hicks.

E. Bruce Fowler, proposed by W. H. Bradburn, seconded by W. G. Morrow.

Dr. Edward E. Harvey, proposed by M. Sucee, seconded by A. Saunders.

Claude H. Rogers, proposed by J. J. Turner, seconded by Thos. Barrie.

J. Mendel Greene, proposed by J. J. Turner, seconded by W. J. Oke.

A. J. Bolwell, proposed by J. J. Hartley, seconded by Jas. Garside.

Alexander Morrison, proposed by James Garside, seconded by A. A. McIntyre.

Speeches Postponed.

Mr. Worth, as the first nominated, was called on to address the electors, but stated that since all those nominated were not present it would be unfair for him to place his views before those present. He volunteered, however, to come before any body of citizens and explain his position on all matters pertaining to the business that will come before the Board of Education.

The other candidates present appeared to take the same view and after Mr. Turner had explained that he did not nominate Mr. Duncan for a third term simply to flatter him, but because he considered it would be for the benefit of the citizens at large to have the Mayor finish the work he has so ably commenced, the meeting adjourned with the singing of the National Anthem.

Mlle. Oberline Maillard, aged 30, for 30 years a French teacher at Tacoma, Wash., left her life savings of $20,000 to the French Government for the "sole benefit of invalid and disabled soldiers of France."

WARDEN McINTOSH, who is again a candidate for Reeve in North Monaghan.

TRAINING VETS FOR VOCATIONS

BOARD AT PRESENT HAVE LARGE NUMBER OF SOLDIERS UNDER INDUCTION.

COURSE IS NOT COMPLETE

MEN GIVEN START IN SOME LINE IN TIME REFERRED TO.

Much has been said about the Vocational Training of the returned soldiers but even yet the general public have failed to grasp just how big a thing this is. At the present time the Vocational Training Board have under training sixty-seven minors, and one hundred and ten returned men suffering from some disability.

Now, the training offered comes under two headings; those who have been placed with an industry to learn a vocation and those who have been placed for training with some private institution, such as the colleges. Of the minors under training with the local branch, 31 are with these private institutions and 36 with different industries. There are 81 of the disabled men with industries and 29 with private institutions.

In a recent interview, Gen. Sir R. Turner V. C., points out what he considers one weakness of vocational training, namely, that a returned soldier only gets six months training in the traed he proposes to follow, "and is launched out, half equipped into the labor market, the Vocational Training Board washing its hands of any further responsibilities for him."

This is an entirely erroneous statement. It is granted that in the beginning, the vocational training made a few mistakes, but under the new present system, the Vocational Training Board do not try to teach a man a trade in six months, realising that such a thing is an impossibility. The men are in some cases apprenticed to the trade they desire, to follow, and receive Government assistance until such time as they are proficient to "carryon" as a full-fledged operator in whatever branch they are taking up but in most cases they are taught simple operation which can easily be acomplished in six or eight months. They find out if the man has really attained a proficiency in his trade, and if so, place him with some firm, which they do through information received from their employement Bureaus, etc. If for any reason the man is not considered proficient he is given further training.

Then there is another side to consider. If a man takes up vocational training and after completing his course he finds his disability keeps him from following it up, he is retrained. No one could accuse Gen. Turner of not having the interests of the returned men at heart, but it undoubtedly would be a help to the Department involved, if a careful consideration of the object discussed were made before such erroneous statements were given out.

Over 70 per cent of the men trained are given jobs suitable to their [illegible] which is a fact that requires no comment.

TRADES COUNCIL DELEGATES ENDORSE MRS. MORRIS FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Name Four Union Men for City Council and Two for Board of Education—Go Outside Ranks of Labor for Representatives of Utilities Commission

FOR ALDERMEN

L. Humber, Molder.

Fred Tuggey, Bricklayer.

T. W. Tedford, Carpenter.

J. A. Sharp, Patternmaker.

FOR UTILITIES COMMISSION.

E. F. Mason, for three-year term.

C. E. Sisson, for one-year term.

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION.

Mrs. Kate Morris.

A. J. Bolwell, President of Trades Council and Typographical Union.

Alex. Morrison, Electrician.

The above is the civic slate which the Trades Council agreed upon in special session last night. Every Labor candidate will be required to submit himself to the principle of recall, so far as the platform of the organization is concerned. This means that if an elected representative departs from the principles of the platform, his resignation, already in the hands of the Trades' Council, can be made effective by a majority vote.

The application of this principle was the occasion of considerable debate. Fred Tuggey, one of the aldermanic nominees, was opposed to the idea, as was J. J. Hartley and Ald. Crowe, while Ald. Gainey supported it. Ald. McIntyre believed that every representative elected should be left with a free hand.

When it came to selecting candidates for the two vacancies on the Utilities Commission, T. McMurray, carpenter, and Trades Council delegate, was put on the slate, but declined to become a candidate. It was decided to go outside Labor circles for candidates, and E. F. Mason and C. E. Sisson were endorsed. A ballot was taken as to which would be named for the long and which for the short term, Mr. Mason winning by four votes.

Mrs. Kate Morris was endorsed as candidate for the School Board, and the others placed on the ticket were A. J. Bolwell, president of the Trades Council, and Alex. Morrison, of the Electrical Workers.

It was announced that there are in the city 1,034 women entitled to vote at the municipal election.

The meeting was a very representative one, about fifty delegates being present.

ROBERT HICKS IS RENOMINATED FOR THE UTILITIES COMMISSION

Ex-Mayor Duffus is Also Named for Three Year Term--Five Prospective Candidates to Fill Vacancy Caused by Resignation of T. F. Matthews.

For the first time in a number of years there are two vacancies to fill in the Utilities Commission at the New Years election. The regular term of Mr. Robert Hicks has expired and a member has to be elected for a three year term. Then the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. T. F. Matthews leaves another place that will be filled for one year by the choice of the electors. The nominations were as follows:

For regular term: Robert Hicks, proposed by W. H. Moore, seconded by Walter J. Oke.

Joseph J. Duffus, proposed by W. T. Hall, seconded by Theodore McWilliams.

To fill vacancy caused by resignation of Mr. T. F. Matthews: Chas. Everett Sisson, proposed by Gordon K. Langley, seconded by E. R. Shirley. William Herbert Bradburn, proposed by J. J. Turner, seconded by Walter J. Oke.

Josep J. Duffus, proposed by Theodore McWilliams, seconded by W. T. Hall.

John Edgar, proposed by James Hamilton, seconded by Wm. H. Lyt[illegible]

George H. Duncan, proposed by E. R. Wilson, seconded by Ald. Hamilton.

At the conclusion of the nominations and addresses by the prospective candidates for mayor had addressed the electors. Mr. Hicks, Ald. Edgar and Mr Bradburn spoke.

Mr. Hicks stated that he considered it a double honor to be nominated to the Utilities Commission and to receive this from such an old and faithful servant as Mr. W. H. Moore.

Mr. Hicks reviewed the work accomplished by the Commission since his election in 1914. In spite of the greater expense due to the war time conditions the people of Peterborough received their water supply at the same rate now as in 1914. In spite of the fact that $15,000 had been expended on more remunerative improvement, the Utilities Commission has been an asset and not a liability to the city.

Mr. Hicks praised Mr. T. F. Matthews for his services to the city as chairman of the Utilities Commission, and declared that the people owed Mr. Matthews a debt of gratitude. He also gave credit to the work of Mr. Fiske. He declared that Peterborough had the services of one of the best authorities on electrical matters in the province.

If re-elected, Mr. Hicks promises to do his part in carrying out the efficient programme laid out by Mr. Matthews and the Commission in the past.

Mr. Bradburn stated that he did not come prepared to make any lengthy statement of the affairs of the Utilities Commission, because he knew Mr. Hicks would do that. He did say, however, that he was optimistic for the future growth and prosperity of the city. With the citizens co-operating with the Mayor and Aldermen, Peterborough could become a great city.

He stated that everything he possessed was wrapped up in Peterborough and he would do all in his power to further the interests of the city at large.

Ald. Edgar would not commit himself as to whether he would run for the position on the Commission or not. If he did so, and were elected he would as he did in the past as an alderman, use his best judgment in deciding matters of public interest and benefit.

He heartily recommended the citizens to vote in favor of both bylaws to be submitted at the municipal elections.

MEASURE MARKS HISTORIC ACT

KING GEORGE PROCLAIMS NEW HOME RULE BILL FOR INDIA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Londno, Dec. 23.—King George issued a proclamation today announcing the new measure giving India larger degree of self-government. The proclamation characterizes the Government Bill as an historic act, giving representation long desired by the natives. It calls for the determination of the people and officials to work together for the common purpose of making the new plan of Government a success.

The King expressed concern over the grave economic position of a large part of Europe. The task of restoring credit and giving industry a new start there was one of the first conditions of a settled peace, he said. The task, however, was too large for any nation to undertake, unaided. He referred to the large sum placed at the disposal of the Supreme Coincil for the relief of immediate necessities but that sum was nearly exhausted and further measures of relief and reconstruction could only be undertaken as a result of joint action by all the nations interested in the restoration of international commerce.

LABOR CONFERS WITH CABINET

EIGHT UR DAY; 44 HOUR WEE

PREMIER DRURY PROMISES CONSIDERATION OF VARIOUS POINTS RAISED.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rollo, Doherty, Biggs, Nixon, Raney and Bowman. The necessity of Legislation fixing an eight-hour day and a forty-four-hour week was urged on the Cabinet and the adjustment of the hours of farm labor advocated. John Flett, Hamilton, advocated the appointment of a Labor representative on the Hydro Commission, while R. H. Hessel, London, urged raising the school age to 16 years.

Other demands included exemption from income tax according to the number of children, a clear definition of intoxicating beverages, and right to the 2½ per cent. beer.

Premier Drury promised consideration of the various claims.

NEW LIQUOR REGULATIONS.

THERE IS NOT the slightest doubt as to the sentiments of the majority of the men and women of Ontario on the question of prohibition; that is if the popular verdict as expressed at the polls really means anything. Two months ago Ontario voted itself into the dry column. The ballot was comprehensive and covered every possible phase of the temperance question. The Prohibition Act was endorsed by an overwhelming majority, that, too, at a time when there was an embargo on imports. The people turned down every opportunity held out to them to secure a relaxation of this drastic legislation. They rejected the proposition for the sale of beer and wine in government agencies or in standard hotels. They turned down proposed government agencies for the sale of malted and spirituous liquors. It is true that the question of importing liquor was not directly passed upon, but is it not safe to assume the attitude of the people on this issue, people who voted as the electors of Ontario did on the referendum?

As a war-time measure the importation of liquor into Ontario and other dry provinces was forbidden by order-in-Council. That embargo has now been lifted in accordance with the promise made when the order was issued. It was understood then that the prohibition on importation would expire with the signing of peace. The Federal Government had no other constitutional course before it. It has been established by the highest legal authority in the Empire that the various Canadian provinces have unbounded jurisdiction in the matter of dealing with the liquor traffic. If they wish to adopt prohibition, to make it realy effective by shutting out importations, if they are minded to outlaw not only the traffic, but the commodity itself, and to make its possession illegal, then the way is open. A majority vote settles every one of the issues here presented.

Ontario certainly finds itself in a peculiar position today. The Ontario Temperance Act is to a great extent nullified by the lifting of the embargo on imports. Quebec can pour a tide of liquor into this province, and American distillers and brewers can dump their surplus stock upon this province when its sale becomes illegal in the United States early in the New Year.

There is relief in sight for Ontario. If a plebiscite is taken on the importation issue and a majority declare against this branch of the traffic, then importations will be prohibited by Federal enactment. The present Provincial Government is avowedly in favor of bone dry temperance laws. The plebiscite will be submitted to the people with all legal expedition, and the result is not difficult to forecast. The maojrity upheld prohibition on October 20 last. That majority will not now nullify the vote then recorded.

It is announced with what looks like official warrant that the Drury Government will bring in further drastic legislation, outlawing liquor entirely and making its possession under any circumstances, except as a medicine or for certain other prescribed purposes, an offence. That would look like the fair and logical course to pursue, severe as the enactment may appear. The possession of any article the home manufacture of which is forbidden and its importation banned, should not be protected by law. The right to hold property is decreed and protected by the State. That decree can be suspended and that protection withdrawn at any time.

The authority that penalizes a man for carrying a flask of liquor in his pocket, even if its importation is permitted and its purchase through this channel perfectly legal, that makes it unlawful for a man to keep legally acquired liquor in his office, his woodshed, his stable or his garage, could surely outlaw in the same way a stock of liquor in private house or cellar. Especially so if there was a ban on the making or importation of such stock.

ALD. GARSIDE RETIRES.

ALD. GARSIDE, whose term expires at the end of the year, refused an endorsation by the Trades Council for another term. The alderman, giving every man his just due, has during the past year tried to the utmost of his resources to do his duty as light was given him and to be just in his treatment of all classes and interests. If he made mistakes occasionally these were errors of judgment which any man is liable to commit. The alderman was accorded a hearty vote of thanks by the Trades Council, and he retires to private life with the respect that men earn by a conscientious discharge of what it is given them to perform.

CONSCRIPTION FOR CIVIC SERVICE.

SOME WORTHY CITIZENS have an aversion to the performance of jury duty, mainly, perhaps, because enforced absence for a few days interferes with their private business interests. Only a percentage of any nation will volunteer for military service. Few men like to perform statute labor in payment of poll tax.

But the State by coercion overcame all these scruples. If a man, when called upon, fails to appear for jury duty, the penalty is severe. If he defies the order of the authorities to put in the time allotted him for working on the public highways, he knows what he may expect. The State, when it deems that public necessity warrants such action, can force a man into uniform, put a gun in his hands and send him to the first line trenches. After all, the individual is really the servant of a higher authority which he helps to create.

There is a universal complaint that the best citizens in any community refuse to render public service for various reasons, chief of which, however, is likely to be a mere selfish regard for their own private interests. But if the State can conscript men for ury and military duty and the like, why not select men for public office by ballot and make it obligatory upon them to do as they are chosen?

THE POT AND THE KETTLE.

FROM THE EARLIEST records of humanity, members of the race have always been indisposed to assume the responsibility for their personal transgressions, but seek for a scapegoat. Eve blamed the serpent for her downfall; Adam alleged that his fall was due to the temptation of the woman who had been given to be with him in the garden. In the present age Satan himself is still regarded as the source of all evil, even though grace may have been given to fight him.

Toronto is doing an immense illicit business in liquor. Hundreds of bottles—imported or smuggled—from Montreal are confiscated every day, and it is safe to assume that hundreds of others are never discovered. The Toronto Globe declares that for this condition the metropolis of Quebec is to blame. It is another case of "the serpent beguiled me."

Even if in Montreal the manufacture and traffic in liquor is legal, while it is under a legislative ban in Toronto, there is no law to compel the thirsty of the latter city to violate the law either by smuggling directly or dealing in goods that have been illegally brought in from another province. If Montreal is willing to sell, then it would appear that Toronto is just as ready to purchase. Montreal may make the sale under the impression that the goods are to be devoted to lawful use. Toronto has no such excuse when it invests.

If Montreal is a kettle in the eyes of the temperance people, then Toronto must be willing to accept the role of the pot in the drama.

A NEW LAW NEEDED.
(Toronto Globe.)

THE PETERBOROUGH Review editorially calls attention to "a sad case in this city in which an indigent father has been thrown upon a charitable institution although he has children who are well able to provide for him." It adds that "the managers of the institution in question are naturally anxious to know if there is not some way in which the children can be compelled to take care of their father." The Review, believing that some such statute must exist, states that it communicated with the Provincial authorities at Toronto and was informed that there was no Ontario law under which children in a position to do so were required to care for their aged parents when the latter were in need.

Such an enactment ought to be placed upon the Provincial statutes without delay. It may well have been that our legislators in time past deemed it to be unnecessary; that they felt assured that the promptings of filial appreciation and affection—to say nothing of the sentiments of ordinary humanity—would more than meet all cases of misfortune experienced by mothers and fathers in their old age. Such confidence was natural and commendable. But in isolated cases it appears to have been misplaced. There are children—creatures—who must be handled by law.

In dealing with such it will be best to make the law insistent and rigorous. It should be designed and drafted to reach offenders who rightfully are held in contempt. Its purpose is to require from miserable specimens of humanity such behavior as even the animal world yields voluntarily and gladly. There is no call to consider the feelings of those who will be amenable to this law. For they have none.

Make the law quickly. Make it harsh. And see to it that its penalties are substantial and relentlessly applied.

HOUSING PLAN PROVES POPULAR MOVE

Those who pooh-poohed, when the idea was launched, that the Ontario Government housing scheme could be made a success should either hibernate or confess they were in error. Those, on the other hand, who opposed the scheme on the ground that the province of the government was merely, in the narrow sense of the term to govern, might be permitted to walk to and fro in the land. They may possibly learn something from the object lessons taught. And they can get object lessons in practically all parts of the province, to the effect that but for the launching of the Government housing scheme the problem of securing homes would have been much more difficult for a great many citizens than it has been.

He who may have any doubt on the subject should visit the housing branch of the Provincial Bureau of Municipal Affairs in Toronto. There he will find data which will at least illuminate his mind, even if it does not dissipate his prejudices.

At any rate, whether or not his mind is illuminated or his prejudices dissipated, the data will satisfy any fair-minded mind that the venture has by no means been a failure.

Data compiled, showing the result of the operation of the scheme to the end of October, reveal the fact that 91 municipalities, Peterborough included, in the province have come under the provisions of the Ontario Housing Act. "But that may mean little or nothing," might venture the pessimist. Of course it might. As a matter of fact, every municipality in the province might have come under the provisions of the Act, and yet nothing practical might have been accomplished.

But a great deal that is practical has been done. In the first place, 52 of the 91 municipalities appropriations, amounting in the aggregate to $10,620,000, have already been made. But what is more important still, over sixty municipalities are actually engaged in building homes for their respective residents, while besides a large number that had been completed there were at the end of October about 1300 nearing completion. Next spring the scheme promises to be functioning with even greater rapidity, the arrangements which the various municipalities have already made providing for the construction, in the aggregate, of about five thousand dwellings.

Of course, this costs money. By the end of 1920 it is estimated that the province will have loaned $20,000,000 to those engaged in home building under the provisions of the Housing Act. But being loaned on interest, it is an investment and not an expenditure. As a matter of fact, the Government is practically taking the place of a mortgage company. For example, on a $3000 house, repayment is made at the rate of $20 a month, said sum providing for payment of both principal and interest. In twenty years the owner will have his home paid for on terms which are easier than would be the payment of rent for a dwelling of similar character. In other words, the Government is making an investment upon excellent security, while on the other hand the workman is buying a home under conditions more faborable than would be possible under ordinary conditions. The man who owns his home, having thereby a stake in the country, is likely to be a better citizen than be who is a tenant subject to the whims of a landlord.

Mainly About People

Already the women of England are taking prominent places in public life. Lady Astor won a parliamentary election and has taken her seat in the British House of Commons—the first woman to sit there. And has been elected to preside over the civic government of Manchester.

Although it has a population exceeding half a million, Manchester is comparatively a new city that has grown up with the progress of cotton spinning and weaving, which is the staple industry of the place. It has been the seat of a bishopric since 1847, of a university since 1880, and it has had a Lord Mayor since 1893. A woman now holds the office, and the city, therefore, has a Lady Mayoress, not because her husband is Lord Mayor, but because in her own right she is Manchester's Chief Magistrate.

Mrs. Fox was elected by a substantial majority, her support coming chiefly from the Labor Party of which she is a member.

The City Hall in which Mrs. Fox will preside is said to be the finest in England. It was erected in 1877, and contains valuable decorated panels by the well-known artist, Madox Brown.

According to the census of 1911, Manchester then had a population of 716,000. The city returns ten members to the House of Commons.

ALD. McINTYRE ANNOUNCES HIS PLATFORM FOR MAYORALTY

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

I have served ten years as a member of the City Council, and on the record which I have made in that time I now feel justified in offering myself as a candidate for the Mayoralty. I have, during my aldermanic service, always worked for the interests of the city as a whole, and have never been the tool or servant of any interest or faction. I pledge myself to continue this policy if I am elected to the position of Mayor. To advance the general welfare of the city as a whole will be my constant aim. This course will be all the easier to follow because of my firm conviction that the interests of all classes are identical, that it is impossible for one to prosper if another is neglected.

I have been endorsed by the Trades Council in this city, but this does not imply that as Mayor I would work for the interests of Labor alone. Let any citizen read the municipal platform of that organization and I will defy him to find anything there that it is possible to interpret as inimical to the prosperity of Peterborough or as the promulgation of a selfish interest. I believe that Labor and Capital here, as elsewhere, must be brought together, must be made to understand each other, before the highest standard of prosperity can be attained. Labor conditions and Labor's relation to Capital must be stabilized. Unless this is done, Peterborough cannot hope to secure the industries without which future growth and development are impossible. Outside manufacturers seeking a change of location, invariably desire to know the industrial relations that exist in the city which they have in mind as a future field of endeavor. The existence of harmony between the workers and the employers is one of the best inducements that can be offered.

My official record will bear me out when I say that I have always stood for economy in so far as such a policy was consistent with progress. From that principle I will not depart if the electors place me at the head of the civic administration. The tax rate must be kept within all reasonable bounds.

I recognize the present high cost of living as one of the most serious problems that confronts the country today. The Federal Governmnet has conferred upon the municipal councils of Canada special powers to investigate local conditions with a view to correct any injustice that may be deemed to exist. If I am elected Mayor I would be willing to set this machinery in motion and do anything within the authority of the city government to secure relief for the people.

Peterborough is known as a manufacturing city, and its future growth depends upon the further development of its industrial life. At present the city has about reached the end of its tether in this regard on account of the scarcity of houses due to the almost entire suspension of building operations during the four years of the war and the high cost of material since the signing of the armistice. There can be no increase in the army of workingmen until suitable residences are found in which to house them. I have supported in Council the steps taken to establish a Housing Commission under the authority conferred upon municipalities by the Legislature. This plan will be developed by the Council of 1920, and if I am elected Mayor I will give it all the support of which I am capable. I believe that the propositon is the best solution of the problem, that it is a plan that will work out for the best interests of employers and employes alike. It will provide the former with more skilled labor and will give the workingman a chance to secure a home of his own on the best available terms. The city in which the working classes own their own residences is the city in which there is stability of industrial conditions.

A word now as to my record. During the ten years in which I have held the position of alderman I have served under such distinguished civic administrators as ex-Mayor Best for two years, one year under ex-Mayor McWilliams, two years under ex-Mayor Rush, one year under ex-Mayor Buller, two under ex-Mayor Duffus, and two years with Mayor [illegible]. I have in that time held important positions as chairman of committees. I have been, respectively, chairman of the Power Committee, of the Property Committee, and of the Board of Works, presiding over the latter body two years ago, since which time I have been chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee. Such an experience is my justification for offering myself now for the position that is the highest gift in the power of the people to bestow. As the head of the Manufacturers' Committee I have always exerted myself to secure the industrial development of Peterborough, and during the present year six new industries have been brought to the city, certainly a gratifying record.

My ambitions as a citizen and an alderman have been to keep the city of Peterborough in the foreground. If the voters honor me by electing me Mayor, I will never weary in my efforts to make the city bigger and better by the employment of all honorable means. I will do my utmost to stamp out class jealousy, realizing as I do that nothing worth while can be obtained without co-operation. On my record I make this appeal for a further and greater expression of confidence in my public service, expression of which you have been generous in your bestowal upon me in the past.

Yours for a bigger, a better and a happier Peterborough.

LAKEFIELD HIGH SCHOOL CONVERSAT

Lakefield, Dec. 23. — On Friday evening the pupils of the Lakefield High School held their seventh annual conversat. About two hundred pupils and ex-pupils were present at the school and spent a most enjoyable evening.

The concert room was very appropriately decorated with white streamers and flags, while the color scheme for the lunch room was gold and black, the school colors. The class room through which the promenaders passed was made to appear like a young forest.

A very interesting event of the evening was the unveiling of a bronze memorial tablet, which was donated to the school by Mr. John Ridpath of Toronto, an ex-pupil of the Public School, by Miss Elmeta Hull, sister of one of the boys, who made the supreme sacrifice. The names on the tablet which was the work of Mrs. R. H. Alford, are: Wilfred Hull, Sherman Mahood, killed in action; Roydon Wilson, Keith Cumberland, reported killed; Charles Armstrong, M. M., Oswald Brooks, M. M., Alex Burgess, Victor Bullock, Willard Coon, Eldred Cumberland, Percy Davis, Alex. Graham, Sam Grylls, Samuel Hockaday, Stanley Hill, Joseph Hill, M. Quinn, Thomas Simpson, Thomas Sutcliffe, C. S. Carter, A. H. Baker, former principal of the school.

Rev. P. L. Jull was called to the platform during the unveiling. Rev. Dr. W. Archibald acted as chairman. The programme given was:

Mr. Kenneth Madill.—Piano selection.

TELLS HOUSE OF COMMONS HE IS CONFRONTED BY DIFFICULT TASK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 22.—Lloyd George was ready at the opening of Parliament today to announce the details of the Government's Irish Home Rule Bill. This measure, it is believed, will give a large amount of autonomy to Ireland.

Task Is Difficult.

Lloyd George addressed the House of Commons this evening on the Irish question. In opening his address he remarked on the extreme difficulty of his task. "It is difficult, indeed," he said, "after such a discreditable outrage as has just been perpetrated in Dublin."

SYNOPSIS OF PROPOSED BY-LAW AND TERMS OF AGREEMENT

The Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough purpose to pass a By-law to aid the Canadian Aladdin Company, Limited.

The purpose of this By-law is, by way of bonus, to convey to the company the following lands, namely: Park Lot Number Three and the North one half of Park Lot Number Two in Township Lot Number Thirteen in the Twelfth Concession of the Township of North Monaghan, now within the limits of the City of Peterborough, said land extending Easterly only to the Western limits of the roadway of the Grand Trunk Railway, and also if at any time for a period of Five Years, commencing the 2nd day of December, 1919, the City intends to sell the remaining half of said Lot Number Two and Lot Number One in said Twelfth Concession, the Company will have thirty days to purchase the same for a price of Ten Thousand (10,000.00) Dollars or part of the said lastly mentioned lots on a proportionate basis of the said sum, but if the Company exercises this last mentioned option the City is to have the right to retain at least Two Hundred (200) feet frontage on Monaghan Road.

The By-law also purposes to fix the assessment of the said Company (including business taxes, but excluding school taxes and local improvement rates) for a period of ten years from July first, 1920 at Five Thousand (5,000.00) Dollars; said fixed assessment to include the lands to be conveyed and the buildings, machinery, railway sidings and manufacturing plant thereon.

The Agreement provides that the Company will erect a building on the lands conveyed, with dimensions of One Hundred by Two Hundred Feet for manufacturing purposes, and that manufacturing operations will be carried on for a period of ten years, commencing the first day of September, 1920, and if the Company ceases to carry on said operations the Company shall pay to the City Five Hundred (500.00) Dollars for every year in which the Agreement is not complied with.

The Company also agrees to expend on the erection of said building, and the equipment, machinery, etc., the sum of Seventy Thousand (70,000.00) Dollars. A copy of the proposed By-law and the Agreement may be seen at the office of the City Clerk.

TAKE NOTICE that the foregoing is a true synopsis of a proposed By-law of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough to be submitted to the votes of the electors on the same day and at the same hours and places as the annual election for the Municipal Council.

AND that the 31st day of December, 1919, at Eleven o'clock in the forenoon at the City Clerk's office in the said Municipality, has been fixed for the appointment of persons to attend at the Polling Places and at the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

AND that the 2nd day of January, 1920, at the hour of Eleven o'clock, in the forenoon, at the office of the City Clerk, is the time and place appointed for the final summing up of the votes by the Clerk.

AND that if the assent of the electors is obtained to the said proposed By-law it will be taken into consideration by the Municipal Council of the Corporation of the City of Peterborough at a meeting thereof to be held at the expiration of one month from the date of the first publication of this notice, and that such publication was made on the 9th day of December, 1920.

DATED this 9th day of December 1920.

CONDEMNS PURSE OF CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHT

PRESIDENT OLYMPIC COMMITTEE DOES NOT APPROVE OF DEMPSEY-CARPENTIER CONTEST.

Geneva, Dec. 23.—Baron Pierre de Coubertin, president of the International Olympic committee, has sent a letter to the Swiss press condemning plans for a boxing bout between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier. He says he objects to the size of the purses involved and expresses the opinion that the money could be more usefully employed in aiding sufferers from the war. Baron de Coubertin says he believes the fight would be immoral from a financial point of view.

Hope that the encounter will not happen unless there is a complete change in conditions, is expressed by the writer.

EVANS SUGGESTS SOME NEW RULES

AMERICAN LEAGUE UMPIRE PLANS CHANGES THAT WOULD ASSIST THE GAME

Define the status of a substitute player who enters the game as pinch hitter or fielder without informing the umpire of the substitution.

A clause which makes getting on the rubber by the pitcher without the ball in his possession a balk.

A rule that does justice to the batter who hits a ball over the fence or into the stands, in the final or extra inning, and yet fails to get credit because the run of some player on the bases decides the game.

A clause that will prevent disputes that now arise as to the status of a runner who scores when a preceding runner has failed to touch a base on his way to the plate.

When the infield is drawn in for a play at the plate, and the batter hits a ball that gets by the first line of defence, no further play being possible by any member of the infield, such a ball should be considered in play if it comes into contact with the person of the umpire back of the infield.

When a batter hits a ball that is fair when it passes over the fence or into a stand, it should be considered a fair ball. All jurisdiction over it should end when it passes out of the playing field, instead of compelling the umpire to watch its course until it disappears.

With first and second base, or first second and third base occupied, any attempt to bunt a ball that goes fair should not be regarded as an infield fly, though the attempt results in a fly ball that goes to the infield.

Define just what the phrase "held the ball" means, in connection with a play in which an infielder touches a base runner.

Clarify the rule that governs the coacher at third base, so that the rule will have no application on any ball hit out of playing territory, which really renders a play on the base runner impossible.

A batsman should be considered as having illegally batted a ball only when he hits the ball with both feet outside the lines of the batter's box.

Determine the best penalty to inflict when a catcher interferes with a batsman.

A rule that will clearly state that a base runner who holds his base shall have the right to advance the moment a fly ball strikes the hands of a fielder.

W. H. TAYLOR

To the Electors of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In accepting nomination as mayorality candidate in the coming election, allow me to express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to assure all citizens alike that if elected to the dignity of first magistrate of this important city of Peterboro I shall endeavor to exercise such high office for the weal of the whole community, irrespective of class or creed.

At this time it seems fitting that reference should be made to our city's financial standing, especially so in the face of that "blue-ruin" criticism which appeared in the press last week. I have been Council's chairman of finance the past two years, and believe conditions do not warrant of pessimistic views of Peterborough's financial future. In 1919 debentures issued by this city totalled but $31,508.18 in all, and they sold one set at par, four sets above par, and at from 5½ to 5.80 per cent. interest. The exact figures are as follows:

The placing of the above debentures was left in the hands of City Treasurer Adams and myself. We readily disposed of them on the terms above quoted, and such disposition in the state of the money markets, I think, supports my contention that Peterborough's financial standing is quite sound, and that her security is gilt-edged

The city's total debenture debt is $2,552,237.64 as against an assessed property value of $15,743,506. But it must be born in mind that for this debt Peterborough has been modernized with public conveniences such as none of you would wish to do without. Then the city owns its own waterworks, the debt for which included in the total of two and a half millions is $623,200. All of our debentures are of from 20 to 30 years life, which distributes the burden of payment over more than one generation, and sinking funds against their maturity are provided, so that from time to time debenture debts will be retired, thus easing the financial situation.

Now I ask you to note that the city's debenture debts are distributed under two heads, first, those chargeable against the general rate, amounting to $1,287,186.38, and secondly, those which are for self-supporting and revenue producing utilities, such as our waterworks and Hydro-electric, together with local improvements chargeable against frontage. These latter class of debentures take care of themselves so to speak, and in estimating the city's debt on general grounds, one should only take those items chargeable in the general rate, amounting to $1,287,186.38, against which we have a sinking fund of $287,612.91. This leaves the actual general debenture debt of Peterborough $899,573 47, a net debt per capital of $40 extended over long periods.

Three years ago, ladies and gentlemen, I pledged myself to support extensions of the street railway system, but the Hydro-electric Commission could not undertake such while the war was on, and nothing was accomplished in that direction until this year when the commission was persuaded to lay tracks from Charlotte street, along the Monaghan Road to Patterson street, and to put in operation two new cars. This improved the service somewhat, but it is not enough, the end I have in view if privileged to serve you as mayor, is further extensions south to Lunsdowne street, north to near the Normal School, and over the new bridge to East City, with perhaps a belt line service. In fact, Sir Adam Beck has a proposition to sell the railway to the city at a price and on such terms as well, he guarantees make the railway system self-supporting and provide interest on the debt and a sinking fund with which to retire the city's bonds given in payment for the system. The proposition looks good to me were it not coupled with a provision that the city must also purchase the gas plant with the railway. For this proposed city ownership of the gas plant might saddle us with imure expenditure for new machinery and appliances. The it would be wise to not undertake for a year or two yet. However, purpose to leave no stone unturned to connect by steel rails all sectio of the city with its business an manufacturing establishments, that workmen and girls may ha easy access to their employm whether they live in the north, sout east or west.

Ladies and gentlemen, we have [illegible] of resources and opportunitie Let us unite in taking advantage [illegible] British and American indu [illegible] are seeking location in Cana [illegible] this is an opportune time [illegible] reach out after more factories. I am offering my services to t[illegible] city by request of a large num[illegible] of ratepayers and respectfully ask [illegible] co-operation of all citizens to sec[illegible] my election. If elected I will dev[illegible] to the office of mayor whatever ti[illegible] is needed and above all will se[illegible] every interest alike, recognizing [illegible] privilege for any particular class, [illegible] a square consideration for [illegible] In conclusion, I might say that my opinion this city needs a shak[illegible] up in its public spirit, a get-toget[illegible] movement for general progress [illegible] increased citizenship, a unison of [illegible] dividual and organized interests [illegible] common bond of community fell[illegible] ship which will make for munic[illegible] uplift, industrially, commerci[illegible] and expansibly. Free Trade A Menace To The Farmer

"What is the political situation, Mr. Burnham?" the Federal member for West Peterborough was asked.

"Probably you know as much about it as I do. The farmer is in the saddle, but I doubt if he will back up the free trade policy of the middle west, voiced by Mr. Crerar. You see if we have free trade then Canada can import wheat from outside and Australian wheat, the equal of any in the world for all purposes, is today 1.25 f.o.b. Australia and 1.35 at the port of Montreal. With present day wages the Canadian farmer could not get along with that price, not the Ontario farmer at any rate.

Free trade is, of course, all right if the prices of everything, labor included, can get down to the level in Canada of the country imported from. Though a convinced protectionist. I am quite willing to have free trade if the people want it. We will then have the price of everything in Canada what it would cost us to get it from somewhere else. For example, steel rails and cootie labor from China and India with wages from ten to fifty cents a day for the poorest and the best. Do we want this? I hope not. There is something better than cheapness as the U. S. and France have found out.

Mr. Crerar says we must keep our young men from going to the U.S. Now the U.S. has a far higher tariff than we have. We must raise our tariff, therefore, not lower it. I am glad the farmer is getting interested. He is vitally concerned in the stability of this country. He, of all men, should be conservative."

AMNESTY APPLIES TO TWELVE THOUSAND

DRAFT EVADERS IN OTTAWA AND KINGSTON DISTRICTS NUMBER 1,578

Ottawa, Dec. 23.—It is anticipated that a proclamation will issue and that thereafter the jail authorities of Canada will be notified to release prisoners held as draft evaders or as offenders against military law. Thereafter also prosecutions pending against offenders who have succeeded in remaining at large will be dropped and the skulkers from justice will be permitted to emerge from their hiding places, and once more mingle with their fellow men. Probable disfranchisement of such men is the last punishment remaining.

Confusion Over Order.

There appears to be some confusion as to the application of the new order; it does not include internment prisoners. These are being dealt with gradually by process of deportation and but few now remain in the Dominion. There are many aliens, not interned, who have been required to report to the authorities. None of these is affected by the amnestry order for the reason that peace with the enemy has not yet been proclaimed.

Those included in the amnesty are evaders of the Military Service Act deserters from the expeditionary forces, and offenders of all sorts against military law. Evaders or defaulters under the Military Service Act are under the jurisdiction of the Department of Justice and have been dealt with by the courts. In the Western Provinces, however, they have been dealt with by the mounted police.

It is estimated here that approximately 40,000 persons are affected by the amnesty. In the seven Eastern military districts alone there are estimated to be 12,308 defaulters under the Military Service Act still at large. By military districts they are as follows:

London 10.
Toronto 1,387.
Ottawa and Kingston 1,578.
Montreal 3,981.
Quebec 3,342.
Halifax 1,845.
St. John 165.

Over 1,380 Investigations

For offences under the Military Service Act a total of 13,143 were apprehended or dealt with by investigation, 8,994 being actually apprehended, and the majority convicted and 4,149 having been dealt with by investigation.

Mounted police figures for the Western Provinces are not at present available, but they would considerably swell the total. Militia figures dealing with offences against military law are also unavailable.

The Justice Department is not in possession of figures showing the exact number in jail. It is, however, very small, as the majority of those convicted paid their fines readily and were released. It must be noted that quite a number of those listed as defaulters in any one military district may have enlisted elsewhere and some may even have found a grave in France.

There will be music in the Tea Room To-morrow Afternoon from 4 to 5:30. Mr. O. Gliddon, pianist; Mr. Buck, of Toronto, violinist.

SHE BELIEVES IT SAVED HER LIFE

MRS. O'BRIEN DIDN'T HAVE A SINGLE WELL DAY IN FIVE YEARS; TANLAC RESTORES HER TO HEALTH.

"I actually believe this Tanlac has saved my life," is the remarkable statement of Mrs. Grace O'Brien, who resides at 18 June Street, Halifax, Nova Scotia, Canada.

"I hadn't seen a well day in five years until I took Tanlac," she continued. "The agonies I suffered from stomach trouble made me almost wish I was dead many a time. In all those long years of suffering, I haven't known what it was to enjoy a meal, and I was afraid of the pain that I knew it would bring me. Even a piece of dry toast would upset me so that I would be in misery for hours, and when I tried liquid food, it would sour on my stomach. When I would try to eat, my food would feel like a rock in my stomach and would sour and form gas that rose up in my throat and almost cut off my breathing. Pains all through the pit of my stomach sometimes kept me awake at night walking the floor and I finally got to the place where I was so weak and nervous and run down that I couldn't even dress myself. When I would try to dress in the morning, I have fainted away many a time, as I would be so weak that I couldn't stand on my feet. If it hadn't been for my two daughters I don't know what I would have done, as they had to take care of me and the house.

"The first bottle of Tanlac didn't seem to make much improvement in my condition, for I had suffered so long that my troubles were hard to reach. I began to feel like eating after the second bottle and as soon as I could eat and digest my food I felt myself getting stronger. I kept on until I have now taken four bottles and it is remarkable how I have improved. The pains through my stomach have disappeared entirely and the gas has quit forming. I have a good healthy appetite and can eat meat, onions, in fact anything I want and it builds me up and I enjoy every meal. My strength has come back until I can get around and do almost as much housework as my daughters can. I have gained ten pounds and am picking up all the time, and when night comes I sleep without a pain and wake in the morning feeling like a different person. I really believe Tanlac has saved my life and I am glad to tell everybody about this wonderful medicine."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

WANT BANKS OPEN TILL TWO O'CLOCK

FARMERS WILL REQUEST MANAGERS TO DO BUSINESS LATER ON SATURDAYS

A resolution was passed at the meeting of the local branch of the U. F. O. last night which will be forwardede to the Provincial Executive and from there to the Bankers' Association requesting the banks to remain open on Saturday until two o'clock.

The farmers claim it is impossible to have all their business transacted by 12 o'clock and they are often left with considerable money and no place to deposit it. They also find it very inconvenient to be unable to cash their cheques after twelve o'clock on Saturday, the day the majority of them take to transact their business in the city.

The farmers feel that if this change could be arranged it would benefit them greatly and would not interfere with the work in the bank. Their resolution will be taken to the Peterborough bank managers and if any local arrangement can be made the U. F. O. will try to have it brought about.

GAMBLERS USE LEONARD'S NAME

Benny Leonard, lightweight champion of the world, is trying to discover the identity of certain New York gamblers, who it is rumored, cleaned up nearly $80,000 on the result of his bout with Mel Coogan in Jersey City last week. In some way the gamblers learned that Leonard intended to score a knockout if possible Telegrams bearing Leonard's name as the sender were directed to sporting men in various cities advising them to bet that Coogan would stay the eight round limit. Confederates of the New York gamblers then got busy with wagers on a knockout and they got their money down in bundles. Leonard stopped Coogan in the second round and many betting men were stung.

Leonard denies that he sent telegrams to anybody before he met Coogan. He is not in the habit of providing advance information to gamblers or friends. Consequently, he is trying to find out who were the persons that used his name in a successful frame up to swindle the unwary.

CROWN ATTORNEY BEGINS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Dec. 23.—Opening his address to the jury in the case of R. B. Russell, charged with seditious conspiracy, A. J. Andrews, crown counsel, voiced his disappointment at the fact that the defence counsel did not see fit to analyze the evidence. It would be for the jury to decide whether this failure was not because of the impossibility of finding anything in the evidence pointing to the innocence of the accused. Andrews claimed the indictment was legal. Words were seditious when they tended to provoke a breach of the peace.

Analyzing the indictment clause by clause, he said there was not one word in it stating that the accused had attempted to overthrow the government.

S. S. CHILDREN HELP THE UNFORTUNATES

PUPILS OF PARK ST. SCHOOL SEND CHRISTMAS CHEER TO VETERANS.

The annual Christmas entertainment of the Park Street Baptist Sunday School, took place a few days ago. This year it took the form of an offering more than that of receiving.

On Tuesday evening last the entertainment for the cradle roll and primary classes was held. Mr. James I. Maybee, the superintendent, occupied the chair. A short programme of solos and recitations by the juniors was given, also a short talk by Mr. W. H. Moore, after which the children were each given a bag of candy and oranges.

On Tuesday night the entertianment for the intermediate and senior members of the school was given. The basement of the church was packed. A good programme was given, consisting of solos, recitations, dialogues, also a play a "Scene in the Y.M.C.A. in France, by a number of our returned boys, which was very much enjoyed. The offering by the children on both evenings was given in aid of the Children's Aid Society.

The meeting was brought to a close after everyone had received a bag of candies and oranges. A cordial invitation is extended to all to meet and attend the Sunday School, every Sunday afternoon at 3 p.m.

;; THE ANGEL SONGS ::

(Mrs. A. F. Calder.)

Once when the Star of Israel's Stem,
Effulgent rose in Bethlehem;
A Light to lighten, with bright ray
His people to the realms of day,
A Babe of lowly virgin born.
On that first joyous Chirstmas morn,
The glad Evangel angels told
To Shepherds on Judea's wold;
Loud chanting, in their earthward flight,
To God be Glory in the height,
Then sweet the notes benison flow,
Peace, and goodwill to men below

Oh, may the cadence of that song,?
Melodious roll the spheres along,
And far beyond the gay yule tide,
It's influence sweet with us abide
A soothing solace may it be,
For all earth's pain and misery,
Till love to God, to men good will,
Kindness and peace, each bosom fill,
Like Him, who Heaven's bright bliss resigned,
To be the Saviour of mankind,
The Prince of Peace, to whom we owe
All land and honor here below.

REGRETS LEAVING PETERBOROUGH CITY

Mr. H. J. Zacks, having disposed of his Ladies' Ready-to-Wear Furs and millinery business, 422 George street, to Mr. B. Chesler, will shortly leave for New York city. In leaving this city, Mr. Zacks carries with him the memory of twelve years' pleasant and cordial business relations with Peterborough citizens, and he takes this opportunity of expressing his hearty appreciation of the same. He regrets that business interests in America's great metropolis necessitates his removal from Peteroborugh and the consequent severance of many happy ties, both in trade and socially. But Mr. Zacks takes pleasure in recommending to his hundreds of customers a successor in Mr. Chesler, who will continue the business at 422 George street on the same dependable lines which attracted to this long-established store a large and ever-growing patronage. In the future as in the past, this business house will be found the home of square dealing and high grade ladies' wear at live-and-cut-nie prices.

As a parting farewell Mr. H. J. Zacks asks the aceptance by one and all of his very best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a happy and prosperous New Yaer.

TECHNICAL EDUCATION IN PETERBORO

(By J. W. Worth.

Heretofore we have, herein Canada, concentrated our efforts too much upon what we have been pleased to call an all-round education, but which has really suited our growing generation more for office or professional work.

While we are all anxious that our children should have a good all-round education, there are many subjects in which they are given a detailed tuition that would be just as useful to them if they were given a superficial knowledge of the subject, so that he or she will not appear absolutely ignorant of everything outside their chosen vocation in life.

Personally, I am of the opinion that pupils desiring to take a technical course should be able through an examination to pass into the technical school a year earlier than pupils who wish to go through the Collegiate, as at present, to follow a commercial or professional career. My reason for thinking so is, that anybody taking a technical course needs to get out into practical life earlier than the one who takes a commercial or professional course.

Those who are following a technical career will agree with my opinion outlined above, knowing the amount of practical knowledge that has to be acquired, some may be acquired, by part education in a factory of the technical branch chosen, but not all, by any means. The theoretical part of technical education, while absolutely necessary is only half of the education required.

It is gratifying to see thet awakening interest in technical education shown by the people and government of Ontario, and we can live in hopes of great things in the near future.

After these general remarks on technical education, I wish to refer to its application to Peterborough.

Wewill naturally have to start on a smal scale and gradually develop to larger proportions. In starting small we must teach our pupils in the branches of industry for which Peterborough is noted, and develop into further branches as other branches of industry become numerous in the city.

It appears to me that at present we could not do better than take up the following six branches which I think would cover the major portion of the industries in this city, viz: Electricity, Mechanics, Chemical Science, Textiles, Dressmaking and Millinery.

In suggesting technical education applicable to Peterborough, I want to make it possible for the young men and women of Peterborough to find suitable and remunerative employment at home instead of having to leave their homes to get work in some office in Toronto or Montreal One of the regrettable features in Peterborough at the present time is the fact that a great many of our young men and women have to leave the city to get suitable employment, and homes are only fully united at holiday periods. It is still more regrettable, when you know that many of our industries have to get their managers and formen from the United States or Europe.

Technical education is to the fore in Peterborough and the question will undoubtedly have to be tackled by next year's school board, I have therefor in this short article endeavared to show the citizens a few of my views on technical education and also a few of the matters that will be presented for the Boiard's solution.

JAPANESE NOW FILE PROTEST

ANOTHER HITCH IS REPORTED TODAY IN PEACE CONFERENCE AT PARIS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec 24.—Japan's representative on the Supreme Council has objected to the form of the mandates under which former German colonies in the Pacific would be administered Time has been asked to refer the question to the Tokio Governmen Meanwhile the Council's adoption of the mandates is in abeyance.

The Japanese delegate found that the mandates for the Pacific colonies gave Japan less advantages than she enjoyed in those colonies under German rule. Details to which the representative objected were not disclosed, but it is assumed that the question of migration of Japanese to the colonies, which would come under the mandate of Australia was involved as well as the economic advantages the Japanese formerly enjoyed under the most favored nation clause

CHILDREN RUSH PAST POLICE AND SOLDIERS

FOURTEEN THOUSAND CHILDREN TURN BIG FESTIVAL INTO A RIOT

New York, Dec. 24.— Thousands of uninvited children for whom no gifts were provided crowded their way into the Seventy-first Regiment Armory tonight and threw New York's largest "children's Christmas festival into a riot. During the height of the uproar fourteen thousand youngsters were in a mad scramble for their share of presents, which were stacked upon tables for distribution to seven thousand needy "kiddies" who had been invited.

Police reserves from six precinct stations, aided by the Armory detail of soldiers, were unable to check the wild onrush. Several women fainted and scores of children, some of them on crutches, were bowled over as the youngsters rushed about the floor.

OPEN SWITCH CAUSES SERIOUS TRAIN WRECK

SIXTEEN YEAR OLD BOY CONFESSES TO HAVING CAUSED THE DAMAGE.

Kingston, Dec 24.— Frederick Scales, aged sixteen years, has confessed to opening a switch on the C. P. R. at Verona, alowing a passenger train to crash into some freight cars on a siding.

As a result of the efforts of Engineer James Colquhoun, Kingston, who remained at his post, the speed of the train was materially reduced before it struck the cars, which were loaded with stone, so the accident was less serious than it might have been. Some of the passengers and trainmen were severely shaken up.

Mrs. C. U. Gillespie, Whitby, was injured about the face, and Conductor Craig, Kingston, was hurt about the knee.

Scales was arraigned in Police Court and remanded for a week. His arrest was the result of investigations made by nspector Moore, Toronto, who was assisted by nvestigator Harper. Discovery of tracks in the snow from the switch to the Scales home led to his arrest.

HOLDS STRONG HOPE FOR FOUR RUSSIANS

MR. GORDON RETURNS FROM OTTAWA AFTER PRESENTING ARGUMENT.

Mr Gordon returned from Ottawa this morning after passing through a blizzard which made the train several hours late.

Mr Gordon said that the prisoners he defended he believes will have their sentence commuted to imprisonment, and they will not suffer capital punishment The Minister of Justice, the Honorable C J Doherty, made an appointment in the morning to hear Mr. Essery on behalf of his client, and also to hear Mr. Gordon, but was summoned to a meeting of the Cabinet by Sir Robert Borden so the interview was terminated until after lunch when the Minister of Justice heard argument on behalf of the prisoners. Mr. Gordon said he though that the four prisoners would receive imprisonment and would not be hanged, but that the one Tom Konek, who is alleged to have fired the shot which killed Phillip Yanoff was in a different position, and the Minister had not reached a conclusion as to what he should do with his case

Mr. Gordon said he was extremely well pleased with the kind courteous treatment he received from the Minister of Justice who would take no other appointments and let everything stand in order to hear the argument in this case.

Heffernan's Team.

Mr Gordon said the big hockey game in Ottawa last night made the streets and the Chateau Laurier deserted and Frank Heffernan was the most popular boy on the ice. He had gathered his new team together in forty-eight hours, which met the Senators on heavy ice. The experts, who know the game best, prophesy that the St. Patricks will make the best showing of any of the professional teams as soon as they work together and have a chance to make good.

PRINCELY CHRISTMAS GIFTS

Mayor Of Detroit Donates Nearly Two Millions To Charity.

Detroit, Dec. 24.— Mayor James Coudens has announced a Christmas gift list to charity of $1,950,000. The money is to go to nurses and children's institutions.

The Michigan Hospital School for Crippled Children will receive $1,100,000 of this amount; $650,000 will go for a new nurses' home, $125,000 to the Children's Free Hospital, and $75,000 to St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum.

Coupled with $100,000 donated to the partiotic fund last November, and $62,000 given to the same fund earlier in the year, the Christmas list brings the Mayor's known gifts to charity during 1919 to $2,112,000.

JUSTICE TEMPERED WITH CHRISTMAS SPIRIT

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.— Justice tempered with the gospel, in peace on earth good will towards men, came as a sensational conclusion to trial today when found guilty on the seven counts, R. B. Russell, the Winnipeg striker, was allowed his freedom until Saturday morning so that he could spend Christmas with his friends and not behind iron bars. This is the first time in the memory of many of the oldest lawyers in Winnipeg folowing the constitution, an accused has been allowed to remain free after a verdict of the Jury. Russell will be brought up for sentence on Saturday at 10 a.m. It was announced that the defence will appeal from today's decision to the Manitoba Court of Appeals, argument to take place as soon as possible.

Lawyers in Accord

Russell's temperary freedom was made possible by A. J. Andrews, K. C., Crown Counsel, who heartily seconded the request made by Robert Cassidy K. C., defense counsel. The Judge, Crown Counsel and Jury, showed little personal elation at the successful conclusion of the prosecution. The air in the court room was one of amity. It was charged with a feeling that a very unpleasant duty had been honestly and conscientiously performed. The leading Crown Counsel walked to where accused sat in the box and put out his hand. Russell grasping it and shaking it heartily. The prisoner did not flinch as the verdict was announced.

PRICE OF COAL IS INCREASED

THIRTY-FIVE CENTS A TON ADDED TO MEET EXTRA COST OF PRODUCTION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Chicago, Dec. 24. — The announcement was made today by several fuel companies of an increase in the retail price of between thirty five cents a ton on all coal mined since the settlement of the strike to make up for the fourteen per cent wage increase granted the workers. According to one dealer this only applies to contracts containing a clause providing for the passing along of any increase in the mining cost Those who have no contract for coal will get it at the government price but as most operators have their entire output sold under contract, the increase wil be pretty general.

STANLEY CLYSDALE IS SET AT LIBERTY

MAGISTRATE IMPOSES NO PENALTY ON ACCOUNT OF PECULIAR CIRCUMSTANCES

Stanley Clysdale was found guilty of fraud by Magistrate Dumble this morning but on account of the peculiar circumstances surrounding the case, was allowed his liberty upon making restitution and paying the costs of the court.

Mrs Clysdale, mother of the accused, stated that up to about a month ago she had had an account in the Bank of Montreal here, and her husband had one in the Bank at Fenelon Falls.

She swore that she had given permission to her son to draw money in her name any time he needed a few dollars. He had done this once before in Fenelon Falls Witness swore that the accused did not know the account in the Peterborough bank had been all used.

A peculiar circumstance noted was that the son wrote the name Clysdale almost the same as his mother. He signed his own name in the same way so any thought of attempted change of hand was dismissed.

The cost of the court was $10.10.

PRICE OF MILK IN TORONTO

Wholesale Price As Determined Last Fall Will Stand.

Ottawa, Dec. 24.—Commissioner Murdock and Mr. Duncan of the Board of Commerce left last night for Tornto, where a Judgment will be given today as to the wholesale price of milk.

It is expected that the board will rule that the price shall stay where it is, at $3.10 for an eight-gallon can. The price was settled on last fall by a joint committee of producers, dealers and consumers.

Others producers protested that the price should be $3.35, and before the Board of Commerce counter claims were made by consumers that the price should go below $3.10

RUSSELL FOUND GUILTY ON ALL SEVEN COUNTS OF INDICTMENT

Jury in Winnipeg Strike Case Out Nearly all Night—Presiding Judge in Summoning up Deals in Detail With Soviet Form of Government

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Dec. 24.—The jury reported this morning that R. B. Russell was guilty on all seven counts on which he stood indicted. The first count was seditious conspiracy, the next five were for committing overt acts, and the seventh that of committing a common nuisance. n

Judge Metcalfe addressed the jury in the Russian sedition trial until midnight, after which Counsel Cassidy enterd a number of objections The jury were then locked up for the night, to report at 10:30, today.

Judge Metcalfe in his address told the jury that a sympathetic strike was illegal, intimidation was illegal, and that agitation to spread dissent in the country was illegal.

Judge Sums Up.

In summing up, Justice Metcalfe expressed an opinion regarding the soviet form of government. There was no objection, he said, to a man thinking that the Russian soviet government was a good one, so long as he did not intend to convey to others the desirability of the institution of such government in Canada. When a man constantly attacked the Canadian form of government and put before the "plugs" the desirability of the Russian system in Canada, the jury, exercising their common sense, might infer that he was trying to introduce that system into Canada. It was up to the jury, his lordship said. "Would they like it, would they resist it, would it be likely to cause a breach of the peace. If it would, in a public sense, it would be seditious."

ANOTHER PLEBISCITE AT FIUME

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Dec. 24.—In Consequence of doubts regarding the first plebiscite at Fiume, another was taken Sunday, which resulted in 75 per cent of the votes being cast in favor of the Italian Government's proposals relative to future occupation of the city, according to the Giornale D'Italia.

PREMIER BORDEN ON EMERGENCY BOARD

"It would be impossible for the Government to build up an organization equal to yours within the very limited period that will elapse before demands are made for assistance," says Sir Robert Borden in a letter to W. F. Nickle, K. C., honorary secretary of the Patriotic Fund, relative to the handing over to that organization of the Federal Emergency Fund for the relief of unemployed ex-members of the forces. The Prime Minister's letter follows:

"My Dear Mr. Nickle:

"May I take this opportunity of expresing to you my profound satisfaction that the Canadian Patriotic Fund has agreed to undertake the administration of the appropriation provided by Parliament for the relief of ex-members of the forces, who through no fault of their own, are unable to secure employment during tha coming winter.

"My pleasure is intensified when I recall the wonderful effort and still more wonderful accomplishment of your organization during the period of endeavor and fulfillment which has not been surpassed in any country of the world. This record is due to the untiring enerby and enthusiasm of the many public-spirited citizens of Canada, both men and women who have devoted themselves to this work. It would be impossible for the Government to build up an organization equal to yours, within the very limited period that will elapse, before demands are made for assistance.

Services Appreciated

"We are assured in asking you to undertake this responsibility of the administration of this appropriation, known as the Federal Emergency Fund, for ex-members of the Forces, the Government is placing the matter in safe hands; and have no doubt whatever that the members of the various local committees of the Canadian Patriotic Fund will understand the situation and will add still further to the debt which the citizens of Canada owe to them for their unselfish and unremitting efforts in the past. Will you please convey to them from all my colleagues and especially from myself our warm appreciation of their willingness to undertake this patriotic and highly important duty in co-operation with the Government.

"It is thoroughly understood, of course, that the co-operation of the Canadian Patirotic Fund with the Government, in this duty, will not in any way interfere with or affect the original or present control or activities of your organization, in the disbursement of moneys derived from public subscriptions. The arrangement which you have accepted relates soleley to the administration of the appropriation provided by Parliament, as above mentioned.

THE FIRST CHRISTIAN MARTYR.

AS THE MOST illustrious mother the world has ever seen cradled her Babe in the manger, she must have painted for Him a bright mental picture of future greatness. The wise men of the East, drawn to the scene by astral magnet, laid rich gifts at His feet and worshipped Him as One Who had been born for the performance of great deeds in the world. The mother's dreams were of future kingly stage for her offspring.

Growing up, the Son braved every temptation of earthly ambition and faithfully followed the course it had from the beginning of time been appointed for Him to run. He did His duty regardless of what that meant to Himself. That doting mother lived to see the throng take up stones to cast at Him as a blasphemer, and saddest of all, to witness His ignominious death, crucified like a common felon between two thieves and with the multitude mocking Him in His aogny.

He was the first martyr to Christian duty. But the example which He set has found many a follower. Hundreds of Canadian young men are filling untimely graves in Flanders today because they left the flowery paths of ease to follow the rocky road of self-sacrificing duty.

THE SPIRIT OF CHRISTMAS.

THEY SEEM TO BE possessed of the true spirit of Christmas over in the Park Street Baptist Church, where they are always doing something which shows that they have not heard the Divine message in vain. At their Sunday school entertainment the pupils were taught that it is more blessed to give than to receive, and the little people brought gifts for the unfortunate inmates of the Children's Shelter, who, but for such kindly acts as these, would share in none of the joys of the holiday. "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these ye did it unto Me." If the Sunday school pupils the country over are drilled in such ideal precepts as these, it will not be long until the spirit that temporarily pervades the world every Christmas season will last from one end of the year to the other.

This old world would become encrusted with selfishness but for the annual arrival of Christmas. Even the Scrooges relax at that season and become to a great extent even as other men. People greet each other with unwonted cordiality. Feuds are for the time forgotten. The churches hold special services of praise. Humanity appears to catch its breath for a fresh start up the trail. But, alas, all these tendencies toward a higher existence all too soon fade away.

Newspaper writers and dealers in modern literature who admit that their main stock in trade is fiction have been writing Christmas essays and poems for years. They will resume this pleasant avocation one year hence, if they are still spared. Preachers will take up the familiar theme and will weary not in their efforts to do well. But the trouble is that the spirit is never vigorous enough to survive through the year, and it never will until the rising generation are imbued with the doctrine that is instilled into the hearts of the scholars in the Park Street Sunday Schol.

Four dark Christmas days hung over the world. They were days of war and bloodshed. Rachel wept on every side. The earth was sombre with mourning for the martyred heroes in the battlefield cemeteries. The roar of guns drowned the music of the Christmas carol. Earthly peace became a memory.

One year ago, the civilised world, at rest from war, celebrated Christmas with renewed zeal. We were supposed to stand on the threshold of a new era. The war-shattered world was to rise from the ruins in a new image. Civilized nations were to form a league to preserve the peace for all time to come. The weak were no longer to be oppressed and the days of the national bully were supposed to be ended.

Alas for human hopes! The Christmas of 1919 finds the world still bleeding from its wounds. The victims of the war all around us are still suffering. There is want in the war-wasted countries of Europe. If the world was insane for four long years, it has not yet emerged from the convalescent stages. Perfect earthly peace is still a prospect, good will toward man yet a vision.

The spirit of Christmas inspires many a kindly deed. At that season the poor and the needy are remembered by the more fortunate, and the hungry are fed. But why not make this spirit perpetual instead of putting it on and off as a man dons and then sheds his Sunday clothes to take part in public worship, the church attire of so many simply representing the working upon them of spiritual grace? The poor are with us always and their needs are perennial. A banquet at Christmas does not afford physical sustenance from one year's end to another. Members of the human family should be real brothers and sisters always. There is no excuse for other conditions, such as may be pleaded on behalf of the benighted heathen. The Christian world has the benefit of the Divine message, and, best of all, of the Divine example.

THE NEW HOME RULE BILL.

GLADSTONE attempted in the closing years of his public life to solve the Irish problem by granting home rule to that race. He failed through the opposition of the House of Lords, and went to his grave disappointed in the greatest task any British Premier ever set himself to perform. Asquith, taking up the same mission, accomplished something. The Constitution was amended so as to render the Lords practically powerless to interfere further with the work of the legislators who were directly responsible to the people. According to the amendment, any measure carried twice in the Commons and rejected by the Lords became law without the consent of the latter if passed a third time by members of the lower House. The very fact that it was possible to carry such an amendment was significant of the change that had come over the spirit of the British people since the days of Gladstone.

Asquith's Home Rule Bill ran the gauntlet of these various stages and was finally adopted in 1913, on the understanding that it was to take effect at the beginning of the year 1915. From the operation of that bill Ulster was to be excluded until such time as the people of that section voted for a change of status. The British Commons provided against possible coercive legislation by the new Irish Parliament by retaining the right to veto any law passed by the powers at Dublin.

This bill, like every other human enactment ever devised, failed to give general satisfaction, the people of Ulster leading in the opposition to it. Still, the masses of the Irish race accepted it, and the tremendous majority which it received from the British members at Westminster encouraged the hope that this vexed question had been settled for all time.

The enforcement of the Act was delayed for one year by mutual consent on account of the war. It is still a dead letter on the statute books. The delay created in Ireland a new party, that asked not for autonomy but for absolute independence.

Lloyd George, an ardent supporter of the Asquith Home Rule Bill, has introduced a new measure in the House dealing with the same problem. His plan is based upon that of the Government of Canada. Ireland is to be divided into two provinces, each with a Parliament of its own, these separate legislative bodies to appoint a council, which would occupy the same position as the Canadian Senate. Both provinces are to continue to send reresentatives to the British House of Commons.

The British newspapers generally concede that the new plan is a fair offer to Ireland, but despair of its acceptance for the reason that it will fail to prove satisfactory to both elements in the population of Ireland. That any measure ever enacted by a Parliament would do so is really too much to hope for. Even the British North America Act, created as it was by conferences that lacked to a great extent the bitterness of racial rivalry, failed to placate very province or individual brought under its operation, although the consent of each was finally obtained. If the problem of Confederation had been delayed in Canada until today, what would be the attitude of the Western Provinces in the present temper of the people in that section of the Dominion?

Whatever may be the fate of the Lloyd George Bill, home rule for Ireland is still far from sight. If the new measure is to survive two vetoes by the House of Lords it will be at least three years before it can be fully adopted and another year before it can be given effect. In view of past recent experiences in the same line, Ireland is not likely to be placated even by the most tempting prospect of liberal terms. Delay is always exasperating. Hope deferred will make sick the heart of any nation.

The entire tendency of the times, as a result of the war, is toward a fuller measure of self-determination for all separate national entities. The Maltese are to be granted home rule by the British, and the same gift is to be conferred upon India. The United States having placated the different factions in the Philippines, is about to withdraw its sovereignty from those islands and permit the people to work out their own destiny. Cuba, while a vassal of Spain, was deemed by the latter power as incapable of self-government. The natives were held to be shiftless and fitted rather to give an exhibition of self-extermination than determination. Cuba got her chance, and now that island is happy and prosperous, its per capita wealth exceeding that of almost any country in the world.

AS A BUSINESS PROPOSITION.

THE RATEPAYERS of the city have been urged to support the bylaw for the purchase of Riverside Park, chiefly on what may be called sentimental grounds. The property is to be used as a playground for the adults and children of the city, and for this purpose the location is ideal. Lying as it does near the centre of the city's populaton, it is within easy reach of the masses.

There is, however, another and a more material aspect to this question. The proposed new park may be made an asset to the city just as it has been to its present owner. It is possible that sufficient revenue may be derived from it to pay the interest on the purchase price. It will be used, in a measure at least, for athletic purposes for ten years or more by the terms of sale. Any athletic association that charges an admission fee to its games or exhibitions will be required to pay either a rental for the use of the grounds or a percentage of its receipts, the same system which prevails while the property is under private ownership. The young men of the city who are devotees of manly athletic sports, and there are hundreds of such, the lovers of baseball who turn out in crowds to every game staged at the park, the workingmen who use and will continue to use the resort for their Labor Day holiday, will prove the best workers on behalf of the bylaw, even though they may be prevented by lack of property qualifications from actually voting for it. It is the one place of its kind that is within easy reach of the majority of the residents without the necessity of using the street cars.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

A MERRY CHRISTMAS to everybody.

THE MAN who nominates the candidate proposes; the elector, however, disposes.

WILL THE ELECTORS now do their duty and turn out to the polls on New Year's Day?

THE GERMANS are beginning to see light at last. They now admit that the Lord turned the tide of battle against them.

CIVILIZATION and modern education cannot be regarded as a complete success while there are those left who write it "Xmas."

THE HAPPINESS which it brings to childhood is the best of all warrants for the celebration of Christmas in the good old way.

CONSIDERING what is at stake, there should be more public interest shown in the nomination meeting that was held last night.

MEMBERS OF municipal bodies show a disposition to select their own associates, a duty, or privilege, that should be left to the electors.

A GOOD SLOGAN for the local candidates—"Give me a voice in the government of the city, and I care not who makes the Provincial or Federal laws."

SHOE MANUFACTURERS and the makers of the modern suit case and club bag could probably explain the present shortage of paper if they chose to speak out.

A SONG OF THE NATIVITY

(By Rev. G. E. Ross.)

Oh, Thou Celestial Muse, whose hand Divine,
With inspiration tuned the living lyre
Of Milton, breathing through his song a fire,
That burns to ashes this poor harp of mine,
And still, to Him in yonder stall I'd sing.
While yon strange star flings round His infant head
A radiance through that lowly cattle shed,
And gilds with light the cradle of my King.

Floating afar, like murmurings of the sea,
Away beyond the Galilean hills,
The song of angels all the world thrills,
And Heav'n's deep organ blows in harmony.
"Star of the East" fling far thy silver beam,
Illume the Magi's weary path to Him,
Who comes Himself the world's Rising Gleam,
Christ of the ages, Babe of Bethlehem.

Hail, Magi! is there room for one like me,
To stand a little while beside the King?
The gold and frankincense ye give, the angels sing,
My song I'd bring to Him and bend the knee.
Oh, Thou Eternal One, Whose presence bright
Illumes the ages and dispels the gloom
That hangs around man's pathway and his tomb.
Dayspring from on high dissolve the night.

Oh, dare I hold His wond'rous hand in mine?
That hand, in Glory, scept'rd from the dawn
Of vast Eternity, and on the throne,
Ruled, King Eternal, by His Power Divine.
Omnipotent among the Holy, He,
And He above the Mighty, was sublime,
The centuries, great rolling floods of time,
All change their courses by His own decree.

Thy bleeding hands, Oh Christ, shall yet remove Vast empires from their hinges at Thy will,
And Thou shalt govern the ages still,
And rule the sons of men by dying love.
See'st Thou the agonizing garden scene,
The traitor's kiss, the lash, the judgment-room,
The diadem of thorns and blood, the gloom
Around the Cross? Oh, Christ, Thy death was mine.

Behold the scarlet garb, the cross of shame;
Thy faultless hands Thou layest on the beam.
The hammer falls — the purple wounds — the crimson stream.
The world shall find Salvation in Thy Name.
And Thou shalt sleep in borrowed, costly cave,
'Twas borrowed sin that wrought for Thee this hour,
The hands of death Thou'lt rend by Thine own power,
And stand unquestion'd Victor o'er the grave.

Child of the ages: Soul of Prophet's fire:
No worthy bard may hail Thee "Stranger Born,"
While thousand million suns around Thee burn,
Thou Sun of Righteousness illumes their lyre.
A stranger in the world that from Thy hand
Sped on its burning way to do Thy will?
Speak, Jesus: Speak, and heaven and earth and hell
Will speed on lightning wings at Thy command.

Prince of the Nations: Babe of Bethlehem;
An humble bard would here an offering bring;
No song is mine, such as the angels sing;
Nor gold have I, nor frankincense, nor balm.
But I would bring to Thee my simple song,
And lay its love notes on Thy matchless breast,
Then speed away to do my Lord's behest,
Until He calls me to the Upper Throne.

EDITOR'S MAIL

VALUE OF CITY PROPERTY.

Editor Review: With your kind permission I would like to state that while I believe that the ratepayers and the citizens in general appreciate the reports and the statements in regard to the financial affairs of our prosperous city of Peterborough, and although these statements are based on the auditor's report, thanks are due to those gentlemen for the trouble they have taken to have them appear in the newspaper. The auditor's report finds its way into the hands of comparatively few of our citizens, and then it requires a certain amount of study and working out to get at the facts.

The contention of a numerous class of the ratepayers seems to be that our taxes have been increasing at a greater rate in proportion to the advancement of the value of our property or its earning capacity.

Let us see. For instance, a few years ago a dwelling valued at $2500 rented at $15 a month, or a total of $180 a year, assessed at about two-thirds of its value, taxes $20, or one-ninth of its gross earnings at the present time. The value of that property has increased $500 on account of improvements made by the city, thereby giving a direct return for taxes paid of $500, and a further advance by $500 spent in improvements, making the present value $3,500, rented at $25 per month on a gross revenue of $300 a year; taxes now over $80, or nearly one-fourth of the gross revenue. While the old rate was less than one per cent. on the cash value, or about one and a half on the assessed value, the present rate is nearly two and one half on the cash value, or over three per cent. on the assessed value, or a rate of six per cent. on the increased value of $1000.

If we stop here the comparison seems odious, but we must take into account of the $500 increase in value by reason of city improvements and for the $500 expended on improvements by the owner he receives an increase in the rent of $10 a month or 12 per cent. on the amount thus expended after providing for the extra taxes.

This instance is a fair sample of an extensive list covering a period of over fifteen years.

I leave the reader to draw his own conclusions. It seems to me that it is not difficult.

Thanking you in advance for space, I am,

Yours respectfully,
M. H. QUINLAN.

Mainly About People

Unquestionably the highest civic honor in the English-Speaking world is that attached to the position of Lord Mayor of London. As an elective legislative body the aldermen and mayor of London rank practically second to Parliament itself. On part of the site of the great city of London to day there stood a town in the days of the Roman occupation of Britain. It grew rapidly under the early Saxons, and had become the chief place in the kingdom, when the Normans reigned. Large Liberties and powers were conferred upon its citizens by successive governments, and through centuries of change those liberties and powers have been jealously guarded.

The first Lord Mayor, Henry Fitz Aylwin, or Henry of London Stone, was elected for life, and held the office for twenty-five years. In modern times the office has been an annual one, and at the recent election Sir Edward Ernest Cooper was chosen Lord Mayor.

He has long been associated with the civic government of London, and served the public in several high offices before being elected Lord Mayor.

Sir Edward was Sheriff of London in 1912-13, and later Lieutenant of the city. He was created an officer ofthe Legion of Honor in 1913, and in the following year received the Officer Order of the Crown of Belgium. He takes an interest in art, and is chairman of the committee of the Royal Academy of Music.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

A 400 DISPLAY OF ALARM CLOCKS

Displays that quadruple the sale of the goods featured and finally prove so successful that they have to be moved to another store in order to counteract congestion at a single counter are numerically few—but that's just what happened when the Evans's Drug Store, of Philadelphia, installed its "alarm clock window."

A large clock dial four and one half feet in diameter, was erected in the back of the window, and instead of the usual hour numerals, alarm clocks were attached to the twelve spaces just inside the border of the dial. Two clock hands, operated by electricity, spun rapidly around, reminding the public of the fact that time flies, and bells attached to the fixture beneath rang at irregular intervals. The twelve small clocks inserted in the dial were of different shapes, sizes and models, while other clocks were grouped around the face of the giant alarm.

"The display was certainly the best clock feature we ever staged in our windows," stated Mr. Borgos, manager of the store. "We sold many more clocks than we expected to, and quadrupled our timepiece business during the month the display was on. In addition, it served to attract a vast amount of attention to the store generally and a good proportion of this naturally gravitated toward other objects, resulting in increased sales in many other lines.

"The window proved such an all-round success that we had to have it moved to our other Market street store, where it is repeating the success it made here."

PATRONS SEE "MARK-DOWN" MAN AT WORK

"The Mark-Down Man" has always been a good deal of a myth in the public mind—sort of a John Doe—whom everybody knew, but nobody had ever seen. But the Diamond Co., of Providence, put him into a high silk hat and formal afternoon clothes and set him to marking down prices where everybody could see him. Now Providence people, like well-behaved children who grasp the Santa Claus idea thoroughly, are satisfied that there is such a person.

The occasion of the appearance of the "Mark-Down Man" was the eleventh birthday of the Diamond Co., when a sale was launched, covering every department of the store.

At each department visited, while crowds followed him about, the "Mark-Down Man" slashed prices with a huge blue pencil. He commenced work at 9.15 in the morning and from then until 5 in the afternoon was in more than fifty departments. The event, which was announced with full-page advertisements in all the papers proved a successful one.

The store, during the big sale which just closed, has been divided into two teams, the "Reds" and the "Blues," and a score of the sales made by each team was kept, the result being recorded each day on a big clock on the main floor of the store.

This method proved very successful, the clerks taking much interest in the drive. Results made record figures in sales totals, the store executives report.

FINDS ONLY 1 PERSON IN 100 DISHONEST

"Ninety-nine out of every hundred men are honest," believes Henry Lipman, manager and credit manager for the Union Store in Indianapolis.

"We have to look out for the 1 per cent, of course," says Mr. Lipman. "There is one good reason why professional crooks don't come into our field very much. That is the fact that a garment is seldom negotiable. A piano or a handsome rug can be stored away for a year or so and then brought out and sold at a good price. Obviously, that plan wouldn't work in the clothing field.

"We operate our business on the basis that a man or woman who has lived here for six months will live here for six months more. That might seem a rather dangerous assumption on the face of it, but it works out all right. It might be argued that a person could put on an overcoat bought on credit and just slip out of town for all time. Well, you'd be surprised to know how difficult any one will find it to leave a town without leaving some trace behind. Anyway, there aren't many such persons.

"In fact, the main thing is simply to find the person who owes you. If you can locate a debtor, you can collect from him. We manage to locate them. As for the 1 per cent of the public who may be dishonest, any credit man probably has a tickling sensation in the back of his brain whenever he runs across any of them.

"It takes a person a week to open a credit account in a department store. Any one can open one here in a minute. And our losses will be so small that our faith in human nature will be justified clearly."

KEEPING TABS ON THOSE WHO "LOOK"

When people come into Oster Bros. Furniture Store in Birmingham, Ala. look around for a while and then hand the salesman that time-honored promise, "we may come in later and buy," they are not allowed to walk out and "lose themselves" so easily.

Instead, the salesman asks them, before leaving, if they will not permit themselves to be nominated to membership in Oster's "Booster Club," which carries no fees and no obligations. The answer is invariably "yes," whereupon the customer is then handed a little book containing ten "booster coupons" and asked to distribute them among her friends about to buy furniture. By offering the book the salesman is enabled, without embarrassment, to secure the customer's name and address, which must appear on the book. Each coupon is good for one dollar on a ten-dollar purchase, and for each coupon turned in the "booster" gets a nice present.

By means of these books, which are all numbered, Oster Bros. keep tab on every "looker" and even if the prospect does not distribute any coupons Oster Bros. write her at intervals inviting her to make another inspection trip to the store. As a rule, however, at least one of the coupons eventually finds its way back. The firm immediately write the "booster" and ask her to drop into the store and receive her gift. When she does they naturally have an opportunity to inquire into her furniture needs and in this way put over a lot of extra sales.

"Father, you took a science degree at college, didn't you?" "Yes, my boy; I spent two years on science." "When you look in a mirror the left side of your face appears to be the right side and the right side seems to be the left. The looking-glass reverses it, doesn't it?" "Yes, my lad." "Then, why, papa, doesn't it reverse the top and bottom of your face in the same way?"

About the Diamond.

The diamond is the hardest stone known. Its name (French, diamant) is derived from the Greek adamao—untamable. The word was probably attached to the stone because it conveyed the idea of invincible hardness. No acid will scar it; no solvent will dissolve it. Ages may pass without dimming the luster of its adamantine face.

Male and Female Swimmers.

Swimming comes easier to women than men because the specific gravity of their bodies is less than those of men. The proportion of flesh is greater in the body of a woman than in that of a man and the proportion of bone is less. Therefore the woman is lighter in proportion to her size and floats more readily. This gives her an advantage as a swimmer.

Women Doctors.

It was in 1874 that the London School of Medicine for Women was founded. This was the first of its class. Shortly afterward women were allowed to take the medical degree of the Universities of Dublin, London and Durham. But it has been in more recent years that the fair sex in large numbers have ventured to practice.

Few Things Really Count.

A man can pile up a palace of marble and live the life of a pauper within it, or he may be able to build only a hovel and yet live a princely life within its poor walls. The things that can really help or hinder a human soul are, after all, comparatively few.

Penon de Coron.

Few persons besides Chinese traders visit the forbidding shores of rock-bound Penon de Coron. The rugged beauty of its towering cliffs, with their dark and jagged outlines against the southern sky, is lost upon the natives, who see them only as a source of revenue. By swinging from ropes or climbing ladders they scour these rocks for the tiny nests from which are concocted the famous bird nest soup. These nests they sell to oriental traders by thousands, who come regularly to barter for this delicacy of Chinese fare.

Trees of Sorrow.

The Persian "Trees of Sorrow" are so called because they bloom only at night. When the first star appears in the sky the first flower opens and as the evening advances more and more buds burst into bloom until the lovely tree appears to be one vast flower. It has a delicate fragrance not unlike the scent of the evening primrose. As the dawn approaches the flowers begin to fade until by sunrise not a bloom is to be seen.

WOMEN CROOKS.

London Is Mystified by Doings of Mayfair Thieves In Skirts.

Whose are the master minds behind the astounding epidemic of crime which has recently startled London? Jewel robberies and fur thefts on an unexampled scale have been reported to Scotland Yard during the last three or four weeks, and the smartest minds of the Criminal Investigation Department are baffled by the facility and ease with which successive coups have been accomplished. It is women who are playing an important role in connection with these uncanny mysteries of the West End. The ultra-fashionable woman thief has come into her kingdom, and Scotland Yard is becoming more and more mystified at the extraordinary success which attends her daily enterprises.

The war infused a new spirit of adventure, daring and resourcefulness into the woman crook, and things which in former times she hesitated to attempt are now mere commonplaces in her daily life.

What manner of creature is the woman crook of Mayfair? She is not the petty pickpocket, the purse snatcher, of whom one reads in the Police Court reports; on the contrary, she is a cultivated, accomplished, travelled adventuress, a woman of affairs, who dreams no dreams, but deals in hard facts. You would never guess these women adventurers for what they are.

Take a peep with me into one of the many fashionable Mayfair flats, where live the genuine women of fashion—and the spurious. A well-gowned woman is sitting on a comfortable sofa warming her silk-clad feet before a fire. The walls of the room are hung with fine old prints, the brocade curtains, the carpets, the lacquer writing desk, all savor of the refined, cultured society woman. And the woman herself. To look at her you would think she was sitting there planning a dinner party or a week-end visit. As a matter of fact she is working out in that quick brain of hers the details of one of the most daring jewel robberies ever foisted on a great city.

A knock at the door. A manservant ushers in a well-groomed young man, and retires. The two sit chatting comfortably together on the sofa, for all the world like brother and sister. By and by the woman rises, adjusts her cloak, which the man holds out for her, and rings a bell. "My car." Down the steps, past the silent footman, into the glittering landaulette, and—off into the whirl of traffic. Where are they bound? Maybe it is to some West End restaurant, perhaps to the dark alleys and streets of Limehouse Chinatown.

They watch the doings of the big thieves and the little, the master crook and the petty purse snatcher, and bring their reports daily to the master brain. Hence your crackswoman is always posted with details—she knows who is planning fur robberies, and who has eyes on diamonds, who would filch motor-cars, and who will receive stolen goods. She knows. That is the great point, and those whom she watches realize this to the full. Blackmail is a handy weapon to the woman with the master mind. She has but to command aid—it is hers. If it is refused? Well, there is that little matter of the theft of a pearl necklace.

Not even the most astute investigator at Scotland Yard is at times aware of the superwoman crook, for she trades under a variety of aliases, while her manner of living disarms suspicion.—London Express.

As to Sugar.

Murmuring housekeepers and protesting breadwinners who clamor for more sugar, are told to wait until the "rainbow" sugar is received, when the shortage will be relieved. This product of many colors is daily awaited. In the meantime not a little discussion is going on as to the style and origin of a somewhat unfamiliar compound. Older folk are talking of the "red" sugar used in the "watermelon" cake of other days; some speak reminiscently of Lisbon, "moist," Demarara "foots," Muscovado, and other old-time names of sugars. The "rainbow" is new to the present generation of sugar consumers, but that a colored sugar is not by any means new is evident from a passage in "Old Cookery Books and Ancient Cuisine" by W. Carew Hazlitt, which reads:

"The exact date of the first introduction of the latter (sugar) into England continues to be a matter of uncertainty. It was clearly very scarce, and doubtless equally dear, when, in 1226 Henry III. asked the Mayor of Winchester to procure him three pounds of Alexandria sugar, if so much could be got, and also some rose and violet-colored sugar; nor had it apparently grown much more plentiful when the same prince ordered the sheriffs of London to send him four loaves of sugar to Woodstock."

Only Males Throw Stones.

A stone thrown through the window of a moving railway train and wounding the passengers with broken glass, leads the Lancet (London, Eng.), to say "It was presumably thrown by a boy; the fusion of the sexes has not yet got to the point of producing a girl who can throw a stone. Throwing seems to be a natural impulse in boys, or rather, we should say, the desire to hit a moving body with a missile is universal among them, but the impulse should be guided in the direction of wickets rather than trains."

No Talking that Night.

"I can let you have a room on the top floor, sir, if you don't mind sharing it with another gentleman," said the boarding-house lady.

"All right. But do you suppose the gentleman will retire early? I'm in need of sleep, and don't want to be disturbed."

"You'll probably be able to get a good night's rest before the gentleman comes in, sir. He's been stopping with us every September for six or seven years, and this is the first time he's ever made the trip without his wife."

Condition to Avoid.

The dangerous moment in life comes when men begin to over-value the past at the expense of the present. It is the moment of religious controversies, for ancestor worship, for narrowing in, for exalting one set of people and excluding another. When we reach it, it means that we are growing old. But we need never reach it.—Exchange.

Almost Universal Symbol.

The swastika symbol has been found depicted on tombs at Hissarlik, near ancient Troy; on Buddhistic inscriptions in India, in Etruscan necropolises, on coins of Gaza and Corinth; on rock carvings in Sweden, and on Celtic stones in Britain. In America in pre-Columbian times, it was in common use by the aborigines.

To Preserve Letters.

The following method of preserving the legibility of pencil writing is valuable: Steam the letter until quite limp, then brush over with a solution composed of equal parts of milk and water. Hang it up until nearly dry. Then press it between two sheets of blotting paper with a hot iron.

Art of Chinese Gardeners.

Chinese gardeners sometimes plant statuettes of tiny men firmly in posts, just like real plants, and then train live evergreens to grow up over these statuettes. The vines thus form a kind of robe for the statuette men, their white faces and hands protruding from the green leaves.

Madness of the Moon.

So far as we can gather, there is no foundation for the old belief that the moon affects the mind and brings about madness in some people. The idea may have originated from the word "lunatic," which is derived from "luna" the moon.

ALD. McINTYRE ANNOUNCES HIS PLATFORM FOR MAYORALTY

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBOROUGH:

I have served ten years as a member of the City Council, and on the record which I have made in that time I now feel justified in offering myself as a candidate for the Mayoralty. I have, during my aldermanic service, always worked for the interests of the city as a whole, and have never been the tool or servant of any interest or faction. I pledge myself to continue this policy if I am elected to the position of Mayor. To advance the general welfare of the city as a whole will be my constant aim. This course will be all the easier to follow because of my firm conviction that the interests of all classes are identical, that it is impossible for one to prosper if another is neglected.

I have been endorsed by the Trades Council in this city, but this does not imply that as Mayor I would work for the interests of Labor alone. Let any citizen read the municipal platform of that organization and I will defy him to find anything there that it is possible to interpret as inimical to the prosperity of Peterborough or as the promulgation of a selfish interest. I believe that Labor and Capital here, as elsewhere, must be brought together, must be made to understand each other, before the highest standard of prosperity can be attained. Labor conditions and Labor's relation to Capital must be stabilized. Unless this is done, Peterborough cannot hope to secure the industries without which future growth and development are impossible. Outside manufacturers seeking a change of location, invariably desire to know the industrial relations that exist in the city which they have in mind as a future field of endeavor. The existence of harmony between the workers and the employers is one of the best inducements that can be offered.

My official record will bear me out when I say that I have always stood for economy in so far as such a policy was consistent with progress. From that principle I will not depart if the electors place me at the head of the civic administration. The tax rate must be kept within all reasonable bounds.

I recognize the present high cost of living as one of the most serious problems that confronts the country today. The Federal Governmnet has conferred upon the municipal councils of Canada special powers to investigate local conditions with a view to correct any injustice that may be deemed to exist. If I am elected Mayor I would be willing to set this machinery in motion and do anything within the authority of the city government to secure relief for the people.

Peterborough is known as a manufacturing city, and its future growth depends upon the further development of its industrial life. At present the city has about reached the end of its tether in this regard on account of the scarcity of houses due to the almost entire suspension of building operations during the four years of the war and the high cost of material since the signing of the armistice. There can be no increase in the army of workingmen until suitable residences are found in which to house them. I have supported in Council the steps taken to establish a Housing Commission under the authority conferred upon municipalities by the Legislature. This plan will be developed by the Council of 1920, and if I am elected Mayor I will give it all the support of which I am capable. I believe that the propositon is the best solution of the problem, that it is a plan that will work out for the best interests of employers and employes alike. It will provide the former with more skilled labor and will give the workingman a chance to secure a home of his own on the best available terms. The city in which the working classes own their own residences is the city in which there is stability of industrial conditions.

A word now as to my record. During the ten years in which I have held the position of alderman I have served under such distinguished civic administrators as ex-Mayor Best for two years, one year under ex-Mayor McWilliams, two years under ex-Mayor Rush, one year under ex-Mayor Buller, two under ex-Mayor Duffus, and two years with Mayor Duncan. I have in that time held important positions as chairman of committees. I have been, respectively, chairman of the Power Committee, of the Property Committee, and of the Board of Works, presiding over the latter body two years ago, since which time I have been chairman of the Manufacturers' Committee. Such an experience is my justification for offering myself now for the position that is the highest gift in the power of the people to bestow. As the head of the Manufacturers' Committee I have always exerted myself to secure the industrial development of Peterborough, and during the present year six new industries have been brought to the city, certainly a gratifying record.

My ambitions as a citizen and an alderman have been to keep the city of Peterborough in the foreground. If the voters honor me by electing me Mayor, I will never weary in my efforts to make the city bigger and better by the employment of all honorable means. I will do my utmost to stamp out class jealousy, realizing as I do that nothing worth while can be obtained without co-operation. On my record I make this appeal for a further and greater expression of confidence in my public service, expression of which you have been generous in your bestowal upon me in the past.

Yours for a bigger, a better and a happier Peterborough.

GETTING READY FOR NEW WORKS

PATRIOTIC FUND AT MEETING LAST NIGHT REORGANIZE FOR BUSINESS.

THE DISTRIBUTING COMM TT

WILL EXTEND HELP TO THE VETERANS UNABLE TO FIND WORK.

At the meeting held Monday night at the rooms of the Patriotic Fund, detailes in connection with taking over the work of the distribution of the Federal emergency appropriation were arranged. The order-in-Council, under which the work is carried on, was consulted and the regulations gone over and discussed. As a conclusion it was felt that with the very thorough arrangements made at Ottawa, and with the assistance of the information and service branch of the S. C. R., now in the city, men out of work and presenting themselves for action could be helped during the winter months.

The distribution committee to handle details were appointed, being practically the same men as constitute the committee of the Patriotic Fund, having that department in charge, are Messrs. W Buller, Wallace Bunton, Walter Stocker, Henry Rush, Henry Stabler, F H. Dobbin, Sergt. Sidney Whatley and ex-Pte. Thomas Williams; Mr. Buller as chairman and Mr. Dobbin as secretary. This committee will arrange to meet on a separate evening and take up business only as connected with the distribution.

The suggestion is again repeated that men wishing to apply should see in the first instance the management of the information and service branch of the S. C. R., the Ontario Unemployment Bureau, Charlotte street, and state the case. Then attention can be given by the Patriotic Fund, acting for the administrator. The funds to be disbursed, it should be clearly understood, are not Patriotic Fund funds, but the money set aside by the Government for purposes of assistance to ex-members of the forces out of employment. All this talk about charity can at once be dismissed. No thought of such should be entertained. All over the country the unemployment problem is imminent. The taking back into the working ranks of over 300,000 men has almost flooded the labor market, so far as employment that may be carried on during the winter months is concerned. The Government makes to the ex-soldier, if hampered by lack of employment, a gift. It should be availed of in the spirit in which it is offered.

TO IMPOSE LIMIT ON STOCKS OF LIQUOR

DRURY GOVERNMENT CREDITED WITH ANOTHER NOVEL TEMPERANCE IDEA.

Toronto, Dec. 24.—It is learned from an authoritative source that the Ontario Government will not propose an amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act making it illegal for persons to have liquor in their domiciles, but will so amend the Act as to limit the amount that may be kept in one's private residence.

It is understood the Government has been advised that it has not the power to make Ontario absolutely bone dry, as that would be tantamount to interfering with inter-provincial trade.

Therefore, the Government has practically decided to limit the amount of liquor that residents of the province may have in their possession. The present plan is to limit the amount of beer that may be kept in a person's home to five gallons and the amount of whiskey or other spirituous liquor to two gallons.

Between January 1 next and the time this proposed law comes into force Ontario people may import all the liquor they can get from Montreal or the Old Country, but they must drink it all or get rid of it in some other way before the proposed amendment to the Ontario Temperance Act goes through the Legislature. Otherwise all liquor in private cellars in excess of five gallons of beer and two gallons of the spirituous variety will be confiscated, and the owner will be liable to a fine.

The question of asking the Legislature to petition the Dominion Government to submit a plebiscite to the people of Ontario on the question of prohibiting the importation of liquor is now in the air. Unless the temperance people urge the introduction of such a resolution it is considered unlikely that the government will move it.

ALD. W. H. TAYLOR FOR MAYOR

W. H. TAYLOR

To the Electors of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In accepting nomination as mayorality candidate in the coming election, allow me to express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to assure all citizens alike that if elected to the dignity of first magistrate of this important city of Peterboro I shall endeavor to exercise such high office for the weal of the whole community, irrespective of class or creed.

At this time it seems fitting that reference should be made to our city's financial standing, especially so in the face of that "blue-ruin" criticism which appeared in the press last week. I have been Council's chairman of finance the past two years, and believe conditions do not warrant of pessimistic views of Peterborough's financial future. In 1919 debentures issued by this city totalled but $31,508.18 in all, and they sold one set at par, four sets above par, and at from 5½ to 5.30 per cent. interest. The exact figures are as follows:

The placing of the above debentures was left in the hands of City Treasurer Adams and myself. We readily disposed of them on the term above quoted, and such disposition in the state of the money markets, I think, supports my contention that Peterborough's financial standing is quite sound, and that her security is gilt-edged.

The city's total debenture debt is $2,552,237.44 as against an assessed property value of $15,743,506. But it must be born in mind that for this debt Peterborough has been modernized with public conveniences such as none of you would wish to do without. Then the city owns its own waterworks, the debt for which included in the total of two and a half millions, is $623,200. All of our debentures are of from 20 to 30 years life, which distributes the burden of payment over more than one generation, and sinking funds against their maturity are provided, so that from time to time debenture debts will be retired, thus easing the financial situation.

Now I ask you to note that the city's debenture debts are distributed under two heads, first, those chargeable against the general rate, amounting to $1,287,186.38, and secondly, those which are for self-supporting and revenue producing utilities such as our waterworks and Hydro-electric, together with local approvements chargeable against frontage. These latter class of debentures take care of themselves. to apeak, and in estimating the city debt on general grounds, one shou only take those items chargeable the general rate, amounting to $1 287,186.38, against which we have sinking fund of $287,612.91. Th leaves the actual general debentu debt of Peterborough $899,573.47. net debt per capital of $40 extende over long periods.

Three years ago, ladies and gen lemen, I pledged myself to suppo extensions of the street railway sy tem, but the Hydro-electric Commi sion could not undertake such whi the war was on, and nothing was a complished in that direction unt this year when the commission w persuaded to lay tracks from Cha lotte street, along the Monagha Road to Patterson street, and to p in operation two new cars. Th improved the service somewhat, b it is not enough, the end I have view if privileged to serve you mayor, is further extensions south Lansdowne street, north to near th Normal School, and over the ne bridge to East City, with perhap a belt line service. In fact, Sir Adam Beck has a proposition to sell th railway to the city at a price an on such terms as well, he guarantee make the railway system self-sup porting and provide interest on t debt and a sinking fund with whic to retire the city's bonds given i payment for the system. The pro position looks good to me were i not coupled with a provision that th city must also purchase the gas plan with the railway. For this propose city ownership of the gas plant migh saddle us with more expenditure fo new machinery and appliances. Ther it would be wise to not undertake i for a year or two yet. However, purpose to leave no stone unturne to connect by steel rails all section of the city with its business an manufacturing establishments, s that workmen and girls may hav easy access to their employmen whether they live in the north, south, east or west.

Ladies and gentlemen, we have a city of resources and opportunities. Let us unite in taking advantage of them. British and American industries are seeking location in Canada and this is an opportune time to reach out after more factories. Don't let us be too conservative in our views, but adopt broad and democratic principles in a united effort to stimulate trade and industrial activities, to furnish employment for a greater and growing number, and to enhance the community's prosperity in general.

I am offering my services to this city by request of a large number of ratepayers and respectfully ask the co-operation of all citizens to secure my election. If elected I will devote to the office of mayor whatever time is needed and above all will serve every interest alike, recognizing no privilege for any particular class, but a four-square consideration for all. In conclusion, I might say that in my opinion this city needs a shaking up in its public spirit, a get-together movement for general progress and increased citizenship, a unison of individual and organized interests in a common bond of community fellowship which will make for municipal uplift, industrially, commercially and expansibly. Such is my objective in aspiring to office as mayor and leaving myself in your hands.

I extend to one and all best wishes for a Merry Christmas and a Ha New Year.

Yours very truly,

W. H. TAYL

For Board Of Education

After strong pressure from influential quarters, I have again consented to accept a position on the Board of Education, if it be the will of the electors to place me there. If my best business ability is considered necessary to help complete the work which is already in hand it is at the service of the citizens for another term. A good substantial vote behind me would look as though what I have tried to do has been appreciated.

Let PHELAN Finish His Work!

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

Ladies and Gentlemen:

I am again a candidate for the position of alderman. I have endeavored to serve you faithfully in the past, and if you will favor me with re-election I will continue to give you my best services.

During the year that is closing I have been chairman of the Board of Works and in that position have given practically all of my time to the construction of the new Hunter street bridge and to the preparations for the installation of Sewage Disposal Works.

If you believe my knowledge of these matters will be useful in the coming year, I ask you for an opportunity to see these works finished. To these important works as well as to the general business of this city I will devote my close attention if you should favor me with re-election.

Permit me also to take this opportunity of thanking my friends for the confidence reposed in me in the past, and to express the wish that all may enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Yours respectfully,

HARRY PHELAN.

HENRY FORD TO PAY $8 TO $12 DAILY

AUTO. MANUFACTURER'S EMPLOYES HEAR PLEASING CHRISTMAS MESSAGE FROM FIRM.

Detroit, Dec. 24.—For the past three years the fifty-two thousand employees of the Ford Motor Company plant here have been paid a minimum wage of six dollars a day. Even men who did nothing more than sweep the floors, draw down their thirty-six dollars a week for eight hours' work, while some of the older employees were in receipt of $7 for their day's work.

Now comes more good news. A plan is under consideration whereby the minimum scale is to be made $8 with the maximum $12 for all employees. For a long time Henry Ford, who has often been termed an idealist by his close friends, has entertained an idea concerning the way in which the huge profits his factory has been making, should be turned to the advantage and benefit of his employees.

In a nutshell, the motive underlying the motor king's activities in the matter of obtaining absolute control of all the stock in his company, was in order that he might put into effect these ideas and ideals, unhampered by the objections of minority stockholders.

The turning back of profits into production, wages and reduced prices for the finished product has been the mainspring of the Ford idea and this he now begins to see his way clear to do. By next summer Mr. Ford believese he will have paid off the $100,000,000 he borrowed with which to buy out minority stockholders and that he will then be able to go ahead with his altruistic plan of paying his huge army of employees the highest uniform wages of any concern in the world.

Hydro For Hastings.

A large number of citizens attended the public meeting in the town hall during the week. when Mr. Iler, an engineer of the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, addressed the meeting. explaining the details of the estimates which were submitted to the council recently. Mr. Iler stated that by developing our own power here the rate per horse power would be reduced to $20. If the proposition is endorsed by the ratepayers, he said, a commission of three citizens would handle it. It is expected that another meeting will be held in the near future to further consider the proposition.

He declared he stood for the platform of the Trades and Labor party the principles that were for the advancement of the city at large. He was very optimistic about his success and believes at the end of 1920 he will be able to stand before the people and tell of the great things he accomplished during his term of office as the resent aldermen could do, while appealing for re-election.

He appologized for not addressing the meeting as ladies and gentlemen because he had been informed some of the aldermen were old women disguised in men's clothes.

Ald. Garside declared that he had changed his mind and would run for alderman as an independent candidate. He will continue to do as he has always done if re-elected, stand for what he thought was right no matter what abuse he received for so doing.

The Ideal Bathtub for Baby

EDDY'S Indurated Fibreware Washtub is just the thing for baby's bath. Besides being light, easy to handle and unbreakable, it has a surface which cannot cause injury—no cracks, no joints, no nails or rivets. It is moulded in one piece and unlike wood, it cannot splinter or come apart. It is much superior to metal because it cannot dent or rust. Metal tubs quickly absorb heat and are liable to scald baby's skin, even after cold water is added. In a like manner, metal if cold will strike chill to the skin and also cause the water to cool quickly. Eddy's Indurated Fibreware does not radiate heat or cold and is quite safe. For the same reason it keeps the water warm longer.

CONDITIONS ON ONTARIO FARMS

The following is a summary of reports made by agricultural representatives to the Ontario Department of Agriculture:

While several representatives state that too many cattle are going to market in a lean condition, others report some fine baby beef being sold, Dufferin quoting as high as 23½ cents a pound being paid.

There is an increase reported in the quantity of milk going to powdered milk factories and other condenseries. Prince Edward states that judging by the prices paid at auction sales, milk cows are increasing in value, and adds: "The demand of two local condenseries, which are planning to operate for the first time this winter, and that of local creameries, and responsible for a large number of our dairy farmers adopting winter dairying."

Grenville reports that buyers from Syracuse and Liverpool, N.Y., have been purchasing both pure-bred and grade Holsteins in various parts of the county in large numbers and at fair prices, from calves to fairly aged cows, and also a few bulls.

Hogs have been freely marketed. Little pigs in Brant are described as being a drag on the market at $4 each.

Fresh eggs are comparatively scarce and very dear. Simcoe county reports prices to the farmer as ranging from 65c to $1 a dozen, but that dressed poultry for the holiday season are plentiful.

Middlesex complains that apples are not keeping well. Prince Edward reports that 15,000 barrels of apples have already been brought into that county from Nova Scotia for canning purposes.

Very little grain is moving except at auction sales. Hay is being sold at from $20 to $24 a ton in the older portion of the province, and at from $25 to $30 a ton in the northern districts.

Brant reports that most of the clover seed raised in that county has been disposed of already.

Speaking of handling supplies, the Prince Edward representative says: "Farmers are now accustomed to being organized in groups and ordering feed and other supplies by the carload."

: : AT THE EMPIRE : :

Tony Valiero, a son of romantic Italy, has accumulated two thousand American dollars from the sales of the clay statuary in New York's little Italy. For years Tony had dreamed of the time when he could go into the West—and when the time came for his departure, Tony had with him a little newsboy whom he had saved from arrest for stealing an apple.

He had learned, too, that the boy's name was Tony.

Into the glare of the Royal saloon in the distant cattle town of Red Butte came Big and Little Tony, the most bizarre pair that the frequenters of the lawless place had seen in many a day. Big Tony tried to win friends by the politeness route, and he succeeded in making an enemy of Durant, the strongest man in Red Butte. Tony's entrance into the saloon had been marked by two amazing incidents. First, he was kissed by the Belle of Red Butte, and few moments later he was knocked flat by its bully.

Kate Billings, the belle, admired above all things a man who could fight. But underlying her nature was the soul of one of the sweetest women in the West. And her mother was an Italian.

A year in the West wrought wonders with Tony and transformed him into a lion, which wakened from its sleep and raged among its enemies. After an encounter with the bully, Tony's prestige among the men of Red Butte is secure but there follows a complication that was beyond Tony's reckoning— the affection of Kate Billings. But fate and love untangle the threads and bring them happiness in "The Sleeping Lion," featuring Monroe Salisbury, which shows for the first time at the Empire Theatre, Thursday.

BRITISH GET GOOD BACON AT ACTUAL PRICE

ARRANGEMENTS COMPLETED BETWEEN THAT COUNTRY AND U. S. PACKERS.

Chicago, Dec. 24.—In answer to a protest that the high cost of bacon was fixed by the American packers, the British food controller announced that arrangements had been made by the British commission now in the United States whereby regular supplies of good bacon at actual cost of hogs would be furnished henceforth.

Packers Sought Orders.

Those in Chicago in close touch with the British commission say the arrangement was made months ago for the bacon. It was a case of the packers going to the British for the orders instead of the British seeking the packers, as has been the custom for several years and since the war started.

"The arrangement with the British was at the cost of hogs with a fair margin of profit," said E. A. Cudahy of the Cudahy Packing Co. last night. "Packers in Chicago and the West were given the orders, the quantity being from 70,000,000 to 100,000,000 pounds every three months. The stuff has been exported right along from week to week.

Goods To Neutrals.

"There has also been a good business with Germany, and in the last three months 300,000,000 pounds of lards and meats have been sent to that country. We are extending them credit, the business being on the basis of 25 per cent. down, 25 per cent. in three months, 25 per cent in six months and 25 per cent. in nine months. Neutrals have also taken a great deal of stuff. As to the future outlook we expect to see a good business."

CHRISTMAS celbrationARO

The annual Christmas tree and entertainment of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School took place in the Sunday school hall last evening.

At 5 o'clock the primary classes partook of tea and from 6 to 7:30 the juniors and intermediates sat down and thoroughly enjoyed the repast.

At 7:30, Mr. McKone, superintendent, occupied the chair, and a most enjoyable program was given. A set of lantern slides dcidedly funny was explained by Mr. McNab, assistant superintendent, followed by piano solos by Miss Irene Breckenridge, Miss Bertha Hill and Miss Jean Willgar. Miss Dorothy Clark rendered a solo. Master Jack Allison and Miss Evans gave recitations. "The Coon Choir," consisting of sixteen boys from the Hustlers Class, sang two plantation songs, after which the children received their presents from the Christmas tree.

The evening's entertainment was brought to a close with singing "God Save the King."

LEFT HAND PITCHERS ARE AT A PREMIUM IN THE MAJORS

Every Championship Team for the Past Decade Has Had at Least One Southpaw—Good Ones Will be Difficult to Secure Next Season

The left handed pitcher in major league baseball has been the victim of more or less heckling since the game began. The eccentricities of the individual have been charged against the species. Baseball history will, however, attest the worth of the southpaw and records since 1902 show that few teams have achieved the pinnacle of baseball fame without at least one good left-handed pitcher.

It was the wonderful work of Dick Kerr that enabled the White Sox to give the Reds a fight in the recent world's series. Kerr, too, contributed his share to the winning total of the Sox throughout the season, and he saved many a tottering game for which he received no official recognition. From the first the port-siders have rounded out the winning combination. It was the wonderful work of George Mogridge that clinched third place for the Yankees in the closing stage of the pennant race while Herbert Thormahlen contributed his share.

When the complete history of the baseball season of 1919 is written some part will be devoted to the failure of the Cleveland team, and undoubtedly the lack of capable left-handers will be the cause ascribed. James C. Dunn, chief owner of the Indians, is prepared to go to any reasonable means to add power to the pitching staff of his team. He has no fewer than fourteen pitchers on the roster and I know that if he could acquire title to one first-class pitcher he would not hesitate to give five of his trading stock.

Five Will Remain.

Five of the Cleveland pitchers are not on theh market. Stanley Coveleskie, Jim Bagby, Slim Caldwell, Elmer Myers and Uhle will be retained unless something unforeseen in a baseball way interferes. This means, then, that Guy Morton, Fred Coumbe, Tony Faeth, Ed Klepfer, Tom Phillips, Otis Lambeth, Red Torkleson and Johnny Enzmann may change uniforms for the benefit of the Indians, should any deals come up in which they might be used.

It is more than likely that Mr. Dunn will have to comb the minor leagues with a fine-toothed comb to discover a left-hander of real ability. The best in the American League are not for sale. Chicago has Williams and Kerr, and it is not likely that Gleason would spike his chances for repeating the 1919 triumph in the Johnson circuit by disposing of either one. Hughie Jennings would not consider a trade involving Dutch Leonard, Detroit's leading south-paw. Carl Weilman is one of the best of St. Louis, while Pennock, of Boston (considering Ruth as an outfielder) tops the Red Sox. None of these men is for sale, and Huggins surely would not consider a sale for Thormahlen or Mogridge.

The trading market at this writing is very dull. None of the club managers is willing to part with any of their players for a cash consideration, and there is not the slightest disposition to even consider trades on a player-for-player basis. This condition is not entirely true because of the strained relations in the American League. The National League owners and managers are holding fast to what good players they have, and nobody wants the stock available.

Consider briefly what the left handers have done in baseball. In the dim red dawn of the world's series era the Athletics had Rube Waddell and Eddie Plank, while the Pirates had Jessie Tannehill and Eddie Doheny. The Athletics and Pirates never met in the series, which was not played until 1903. In 1902, however, the demand for such a meeting began.

George Wiltse was one of the mainstays of the Giants in 1905, National League pennant and also the world's title. The Athletics had Plank and Waddell. The following year Jack Pfeister, of the Cubs, and Doc White and Nick Altrock, of the White Sox, battled it out for supremacy. Pfeister and Killian starred for the Cubs and Tigers, while Killian and Leibold pitched well for the Tigers and Pirates respectively in 1909.

So through the succeeding years, in every pennant race, in every world's series, the left-handers have done nobly their share. Plank, Bressler, Pennock, Marquard, Sallee, Ruth, Russell, Danforth, Sherrod, Smith, Nap Rucker and Heuther may be named a splayers who have gained their full measure of fame on the diamond with their port wings.

JACK DEMPSEY IN THE MOVIES

WILL PLAY PART IN "DEAD AND ALIVE" THAT WILL NOT INTERFERE WITH TRAINING

Jack Dempsey, heavyweight champion of the world, has affixed his signature to a motion picture contract by the terms of which he is to be starred in a forthcoming serial to be produced by thte Pathe organization.

Dempsey made his debut at the Robert Brunton studios in Los Angeles a few days ago and began work on a serial which is to run 15 episodes, entitled "Dead or Alive." The story was written by Frederick Chapin and Harry Hoyt and the production will be directed by Robert Brunton, who has up to this time been producing feature productions for the screen.

Jack Kearns Dempsey's manager, says his motion picture engagement will in no way interfere with the champion's plans for meeting Carpentier, the French champion. Dempsey is not content to rest on the laurels gained at the time he donned the championship belt by wrecking Jess Willard on July 4. He thrives on occasions between matches, and after glancing through the scenario that has been prepared for his screen debut he said that his work in the serial would be one of the training features for the big match to come.

Dempsey in his new motion picture role is cast as a sturdy young athlete who is working his way through an eastern college. The action begins in the college town, and is carried to the western country that gave the hard-hitting Dempsey to an admiring world. Of course it gives the star every opportunity to display the prodigious strength for which he is famous. It is said that the serial will be seen in theatres towards the end of February.

THREE CORNERED DEAL IN THE AMERICAN

NEW YORK AND DETROIT MAKE TRADE OF THEIR YOUNG MATERIAL.

New York, Dec. 24.— Despite the factional war in the American league the rival managers do not object to trading with each other. Miller Huggins, Yankee manager, has released Third Baseman "Babe" Pinelli, a Pacific Coast league third baseman, to the Detroit club. Pinelli never played with the Yanks, was oncе with the White Sox.

The Pinelli deal is a three-cornered one. The Detroit Club sends Pitcher Willie Mitchell tothe Vernon club for the infielder. The Yankees, on the other hand, obtained some of the Detroit youngsters Warren Collins, a pitcher from the Texas league, and Lefty Miller and Murphy, from the Canadian league. Murphy is a right-handed pitcher.

The Star Trail

By IZOLA FORRESTER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

If Walt had not been young and trusting he'd never have answered the advertisement, but when you've spent your life in western Nebraska, personally conducting squads of cattle from range to railroad station, and thereafter riding with them and punching them into submission to an all-wise Providence, you're apt to be in a receptive condition for romance.

Walt was. From the first day when he found the advertisement he knew the star path his feet must tread. He was sitting on a baggage truck in the cool shadow of the Three Bears express office, peacefully sleeping. Runty, the agent, laid over his face a copy of the Omaha Eagle. When Walt wakened his glance wandered idly over its want columns. It was down among the "Personals." Walt read it over carelessly at first, then carefully, looking up once to gaze at the demure but forbidding face behind the telegraph office window. Then he read over the ad again.

WANTED — YOUNG EASTERN WIDOW, blonde, twenty-four, wishes to correspond with western ranchman, not over thirty. Object matrimony.

He held the newspaper firmly in both hands. There was no reason why he should not answer the appeal. He didn't have a ranch all his own, but Bill and he had been good partners with the Triple Star outfit. The house wasn't so bad—three rooms and a lean-to. He'd fix it up for her, chuck all the old clutter he and Bill had put up with, and send up a load of mail-order honeymoon things for her to make her know she was welcome.

Here Walt took a second look at the unfriendly face at the window, but the girl never turned her head or noticed his existence. Presently he sauntered around into the station doorway and leaned over the little partition at the ticket office. Could he have a telegraph blank, please? Cherry did not glance up at all, just passed one to him coldly. He spent half an hour writing his message, took a long drink from the water cooler and handed the telegram to her to count up.

"Send it off any time it's handy," he remarked, trying to be nonchalant also. Cherry ran her pencil over it.

Dear Madam: Seeing your ad in Omaha Eagle I am hereby presenting myself with honorable intentions. Have 752-acre ranch, in partnership with one Bill Owens. No money in bank, but credit hereabouts and with mail-order firms. Height six foot one inch; weight 160. If satisfactory will wire fare. Wanseeta, Neb.

JAKE SOLOMAN, Proprietor

"Night message?" asked Cherry pleasantly, as she drew her pencil through "Dear Madam."

Walt resented her air of aloofness and lack of curiosity. He hauled out a pigskin wallet and extracted a yellow bill.

"Send it now and get it there this afternoon. I don't care what it costs. Any corrections to suggest?"

Cherry's blue eyes looked him over slowly, in one sweeping summary of his apparent shortcomings as an ideal suitor, and shook her head aggravatingly, with a certain little curl to her short upper lip. Some months previously she had been courted assiduously by Mr. Ramsdell, and being the only attractive and desirable girl in a radius of forty miles she had failed to take his offer at its proper valuation. Walt waited grimly until she had dispatched the message, then rode away with a new aggressive tilt to his hat and a sinking feeling in his heart at the desperate step he had taken.

In the days of waiting for his answer he haunted the telegraph office. Cherry was likewise postmistress, and Bill warned him of his danger.

"It's just as dangerous hanging around some female you've been once attached to as it is getting measles the second time. I wouldn't put it past Cherry a bit to try and get ahead of the eastern widow and think she's doing something mighty smart."

But Cherry held serenely to her own course of action. Instead of being scornful she became sympathetic and rather remorseful. When she found Walt poring painfully over a mail-order catalogue that guaranteed to furnish a honeymoon equipment at so much per room she aided him instead of laughing. Walt found himself deferring to her taste in snowflake curtains and golden oak sideboards. It was Cherry who suggested cutting out the phonograph and putting in a studio willow set instead, and a low bookcase. Walt had hesitated over a red velvet set.

"It isn't becoming to blondes," she said thoughtfully.

Walt's gaze traveled to Cherry's brown, short curls and wide, brown eyes, alert as a squirrel's, and for one instant he thought of how she would look surrounded by the studio willow set. He leaned over the little wooden barrier between them eagerly, forgetful of windows.

"It's awfully good of you to tend to all this stuff for me, Cherry. I'd never thought of that fireless cooker or the washing machine or that line of things. You know there wasn't any real reason why we didn't—well—didn't get married ourselves, only you seemed unwilling."

Cherry's bowed head gave no sign of attention; she was getting the signal for the incoming train on the eastern track.

"Cherry, girl"—Walt felt all caution leave him suddenly. "I ain't any hand at delivering speeches, but I can't stand it, seeing you here day after day. You're just the only girl in the world for me—"

Cherry swung past him with the mail pouch over her sholuder, laughing softly, her eyes filled with mischief. After the express had passed on, and he carried in the new pouch, he helped her while she sorted the mail, humming to herself, not a love song but one of the range riders' ballads he had taught her.

And suddenly she paused, holding in her hand a letter addressed to Mr. Walter K. Ramsdell. There was also a large and promising catalogue for him. He opened them dubiously, but with a grim determination to his mouth and jaw. Cherry read the letter over his shoulder.

Dear Correspondent: We were much pleased to receive your wire, and would refer you to our catalogue, hoping you may find a suitable object for your affections. Trusting to receive your valued order at an early date, we are,
Sincerely yours,
MEYER & NORRS.

Walt lifted a baffled face to Cherry, and she laughed.

"I knew you'd get one. Lots of the boys have answered that ad."

"And you let me send that telegram?" he demanded.

"I wanted to have you ride over often, Walt, so I could see you," she whispered. "And I did choose the willow set, you know."

DROP THE TERM "WOODLOT"

Government Authorities Favor the Word "Woodland" When Used in Reference to Farm Forestry.

The increased interest in private forestry, particularly with reference to farm forestry, has brought about the general acceptance of the term "woodland" or "woods" instead of the original one of "woodlot," according to the forest service.

A large proportion of the woodland in the eastern United States is in irregularly shaped tracts, spreading out over ridges, ravines, slopes, swamps, and poor lands, whereas "woodlot" carries the idea of a small-sized, regularly shaped, and, in a large section of the country, fenced tract. When applied to the large or irregularly shaped tracts, it is obvious that the word inadequately describes the conditions. "Woodlot" probably originated in New England and seems fairly well established there. So long as only conditions like those in New England were considered, "woodlot" was accepted as adequate, but in the last few years farm forestry has been developing rapidly throughout the country.

"Woodland" and "woods" are more satisfactory, more expressive, and avoid the possibility of creating confusion in the minds of the people over most sections of the country where the word "woodlots" has never been in local use.

Cleaning Your Plow.

Many plows, even those that have been well covered with oil or axle grease, fail to scour readily when first taken into the field. The following method is being used by many farmers to overcome the inconvenience attending the use of a plow that fails to clean off quickly: The plow is taken to the nearby branch or creek and drawn a few times through the sand or gravel beds that invariably are found along water courses. It usually takes but a few turns to cut off the rust or hardened grease. Under no circumstances does the sand stick to the plow, no matter how rusty it may be; and if the gravel does not contain large stones the plow will not be dulled.

Triumph of Modern Ingenuity.

A common nail is an excellent illustration of the difference between old and new methods. Formerly the metal was cut into strips and then forged into shape with hammers. Today they are made of steel and are lighter and stronger. Strips are cut with steam shears and fed into automatic nail machines.

FEW TAKE ADVANTAGE OF FREE VACCINATION

ONLY THREE PRESENT THEMSELVES AT THE OFFICE OF THE M. H. O.

The smallpox epidemic evidently has not even in a slight degree frightened the citizens of Peterborough. Yesterday afternoon Health Officer Dr. McPherson remained at the office of the sanitary inspector to give free vaccination to all who wished to take the treatment. One young man visited the office, and he did so because he wished to go to the Province of Quebec and could not do so without a vaccination certificate.

In the evening, Dr. Neal, who took the place of the M. O. H., was slightly more fortunate, applying the vaccine to two volunteers, making the total number of vaccinations to date three.

Seven Cases.

There are seven cases of smallpox in the city at the present time, one being reported during the last week.

The opportunity for free vaccination will be granted to the general public this afternoon and evening, and also on Friday and Saturday. It is expected a larger number will present themselves after the holiday.

WHAT LABOR IS TRYING TO DO

(By Thomas Tooms, M.L.A.)

It may be of interest to the people of Peterborough during the period of reconstruction to know what Labor is really trying to do. It should be borne in mind that labor is not what has been claimed in the past, a mere commodity. It is human power. It expends itself for the purpose of maintaining not only its life, but the life of those dependent upon it, which is, of course, the whole world. In pre-war times labor was given as little as possible and degraded. Out of the labor market, like a great pen of slavery, came the millions to be sacrificed, men, women and children alike.

Now, Labor is trying to make this sacrifice impossible, and to place itself upon the basis where it belongs, where it can secure from the world recognition of its services. It is struggling against the waste of human life, of human abilities and capacities. It sees great rewards going to the few and a bare existence to the multitude. Workers of Canada recognize that the man with the dollar can overrun Canada irrespective of moral character. Labor has better ideals, and looks forward to the time, therefore, when it shall be honored. Gambling in human life must cease and a new ideal maintained.

We look for a moral and intellectual advancement, giving us a certain hold on the principles of good living. We look for shorter hours of work, because we know by experience that long hours have a tendency to stifle the intellect, impair the energy and vital organs of the body, and reduce the opportunities for physical and mental development. The International Labor Movement does not discriminate in creed or color, but unites in one common bond to preach the emancipation of the workers, preaching the sentiment of love and brotherhood, which is a stepping-stone to a higher civilization.

BOWLER AMENDS HIS CLAIM VS. EDITH REDMAN AND ALBERT VASS

Plaintiff, Still Suffering From Shocks, Again Faints in Witness Box Under Cross Examination—More Witnesses on Behalf of Bowler.

The case of Bowler v. Redman and Vass that caused considerable interest during its first hearing recently, came before Judge Huycke again this morning on account of some amendments submitted by the plaintiff to his claim of conspiracy, fraud and unfair influences, including the promise of marriage.

The first witness called was the plaintiff, Timothy P. Bowler, who told of coming out from England at the age of nine years, under the care of the Barnardo Home.

Under examination by Mr. Hall, witness told of different places where he had worked since coming to Canada. The only education he received was lessons in the evening once or twice a week from Mrs. Shepherd, a lady for whom he worker for several years. He also told of many places he had worked between when he stopped working for Mrs. Shepherd and his enlistment.

Mr. R. R. Hall put witness through a very thorough and vigorous examination lasting over an hour, with the object, as he explained, of ascertaining whether witness was really as ignorant as he made out to be during the time he was previously giving evidence.

He stated that the reason he came to Peterborough was because he knew Mrs. Blodgett, having met her eighteen years before at Mrs. Shepherd's home.

"Did you ever have any receipts?"

"No; I never done my own business; Mr. Shepherd used to do my business."

"How long were you getting that money saved up?"

"Seventeen or eighteen years."

"How much did your car cost you?"

"$5.58."

"How much money had you in the bank?"

"$125."

Witness admitted that he had not tried to enlist, and that Mr. Blodgett, his employer, had applied for exemption. He had gone to Kingston and drilled there. Then he went to England, and later spent two months in France, when he was wounded.

"On your return from France did you say anything to Mr. Vass or Mrs. Redman about your car or the money in the bank?"

"No, but I saw the car."

After this part of the examination witness sat down, shaking violently, and was cvarried from the court room by Secretary Whatley of the G. W. V. A., in a state of unconsciousness.

Mrs. Blodgett.

Then Mr. Gordon put Mrs. Blodgett into the witness box.

She told of having his money transferred from the Bank of Commerce at Oshawa to the branch at Peterborough.

"Why did you do this?"

"Because Bowler was not capable of attending to his own business."

She told of saying in the presence of Mr. Vass that although Bowler might be a little simple-minded, he knew enough to work and have over $200 in the bank.

She told of seeing Mr. Vass and Mrs. Redman driving out together alone with a chestnut horse.

"Did Bowler ever say he thought he was being done out of his money?"

"After he came home he told me he could not get the money back."

"Was that after he had visited at Vass's on his return?"

"Yes, it was."

"Did Vass ever have conversation with Bowler?"

"Yes, and he was teasing and making fun of him to his face."

"What about?"

"About how much Mrs. Redman thought of him, and other things like that."

Elder Dummitt.

The next witness called was Elder Dummitt, son of Wm. J. Dummitt. He swore that Mr. Vass had been on intimate terms with Mrs. Redman during the time the female defendant was keeping house for his father. Witness also swore that on one occasion when he and his brother and sister were playing in the room and Vass had said to Mrs. Redman, "Bowler is going overseas. That will be a good chance for you to get his money." Witness did not know who Bowler was at that time, but the incident was firmly implanted in his mind.

This concluded the case for the plaintiff except the conclusion of Mr. Hall's cross-examination.

PEACE TREATY BETWEEN GERMANY AND ALLIES EFFECTIVE WITHIN TWO WEEKS

Conference Begins in Paris Next Week to Discuss Preporatory Measures—Allies Determine to Insist on Germany Signing the Protocal With Provisions Regarding Compensation for Sinking of Warships at Scapa Flow Unchanged.

(Special Correspondence.)

Paris, Dec. 26.—A conference will begin here early next week between Allied and German delegates on measures preparatory to putting the peace treaty into effect, it was announced today. Sessions will be held under the presidency of General Lerond, member of the French delegation. Herr Von Comson will head the German delegation, and British and Italian delegates will arrive here Monday to take part in the deliberations.

Reply to German Note.

Berlin.—The Allied reply to the latest German note regarding the peace treaty proticol was published here today.

The first paragraphs of the reply express satisfaction that the German Government shares the point of view of the Allies that dispositions of the treaty of peace are applicable from the moment of the treaty's entry into force, whether ratification by the United States has or has not occurred.

What Germany Admits

The Allies take not that Germany admits in principle that no contracting party can refer to non-participation of the United States in the first deposit of ratification documents as ground for questioning any stipulation of the treaty.

Third paragraph expresses the determination of the Allies to insist upon demanding the signing of the protocol with provision, regarding compensation for the sinking of German warships in the Scapa Flow unchanged.

The fourth paragraph deals with the wilingness of the Allies to reduce the tonnage demanded if it is proved that the demand vitally endangers Germany.

Verify German Figures.

Paris, Dec. 25.—The final date of the repeatedly postponed exchange of ratifications of the treaty at Versailles now depends upon the speed with which the Allied missions in Germany can verify the German figures of available floating dock tonnage demanded by the Allies as compensation for the sinking of the German warships at Scapa Flow. The Associated Press was informed to this effect today at the headquarters of the German peace delegation.

Baron Von Lersner, head of the German representatives, said he thought this would take at least a fortnight, if no longer in view of the difficulties of transportation in Germany, and the detail involved in verifying the figures.

ALD. McINTYRE FAVORS HOUSING COMMISSION

Ald. Edgar in addressing the electors gathered in the Council Chamber on nomination evening declared that he was surprised that Ald. McIntyre in his mayoralty address had stated that he favored the forming of a Housing Commission for Peterborough. Ald. Edgar emphatically declared that Ald. Crowe was the only Labor member of the Council who voted in favor of the Commission.

Ald. McIntyre, in spite of this declaration, reasserts that he is in favor of the Government Housing plan and stands for its adoption in this city.

What Ald. McIntyre was not in favor of was that the 1919 Council should appoint and force upon the 1920 Council a commission the personnel of which they might not approve. Ald. McIntyre still stands by his action and declares that it does not in the least intimate that he is against the forming of a commission because he does favor it and always did.

But trains bearing American Red Cross supplies succeeded in getting beyond the fighting lines. American Vice-Consuls Ray and Hansen are reported safe.

DOMINION PARLIAMENT TO MEET ABOUT THE MIDDLE OF FEBUARY

Session is Likely to be Brief Owing to Absence of Premier Borden—Question of Federal Authority to Deal With Labor Problems.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 26.—Preparations are being made for the opening of Parliament about the middle of February. There is a general desire among the members, in fact it has been expressed in a "round robin" to the Government, that the session open as early as possible with a view to prorogation not later than May. So far as present indications go, the sessional program is not likely to be heavy. Lord Jellicoe has intimated to the Government that his report on the proposed Canadian naval policy will probably be ready next week. It is unlikely, however, especially with the Premier absent, that any ambitious scheme will be laid before the House.

Dealing with Labor.

Whether legislation will be submitted to carry into effect the main conventions adopted at the International Labor Conference will largely depend on the ruling of the Department of Justice on the question of jurisdiction. A curious legal tangle has arisen. There is doubt whether the conventions adopted at the International Conference at Washington are valid. The conference was called under the aegis of the League of Nations, but until the Treaty of Versailles is formally ratified and comes into force the League does not exist. To meet the situation the governing body of the International Labor office has been authorized to reconvene the conference, if considered necessary, after the formal ratifications of the treaty. The conference would hold a second meeting in London or Paris. The proceedings would be purely formal, and the conventions and recommendations passed at Washington would be approved.

Has Parliament Jurisdiction?

There remains a question now before the Department of Justice as to how far the Dominion Parliament has authority to pass legislation limiting the hours of labor. Among local legal authorities the view is held that if the proposals were one of legislating from the beginning, so to speak, the jurisdiction would lie with the provincial legislatures. A new situation has arisen, however, as a result of the Versailles treaty. In that treaty, Canada, along with other nations represented at the Peace Conference, formally recognized the principle of the eight-hour day. Such being the case, it might be argued that the Dominion Parliament has jurisdiction, seeing that the proposal would be one giving effect to an international treaty. There is not a doubt that Labor men in interviewing the Government in the New Year, will press for Federal legislation.

In preparation for the session the various departments now have their estimates well under way, and it is expected they will be much higher than in previous years. In one department it is stated that the increase will be as high as forty per cent, mainly as a result of the increased cost.

WILL DELIVER SHIPS TO GREAT BRITIAN

PRESIDENT WILSON MAKES ANNOUNCEMENT TO THIS EFFECT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Dec. 26.—By direction of President Wilson, former German passenger ships of the Imperator group now in New York harbor, are to be delivered to Great Britain's shipping board, it is announced today.

Imperator Delivered.

The vessels were those assigned to the United States after the armistice for the repatriation of the American troops, and directed by the Inter-Allied Naval Council to be turned over to Great Britain under armistice terms. The Imperator has already been delivered to the British. Delivery of these ships to Great Britain was delayed as the shipping board wished to obtain the use of American owned oil tankers formerly under the German flag.

QUESTION OF PATRONAGE FACES THE FARMER GOVERNMENT AT TORONTO

Assistant Claims the Appointment to Bursar of Ontario Hospital for the Insane.

London, Ont., Dec. 26,—Another field for controversy over the merits of patronage appointments is developing in London for the United Farmers' Government as a result of the impending selection of a man for the post of Bursar of the Ontario Hospital for the Insane.

Assistant After It.

The job, which is worth $1,800 a year, and which carries with it a handsome residence maintained by the Government, was vacated by the recent death of Mr. James C. Hazard. His assistant, an employe of the asylum for forty years, is David Rogers, and Mr. Rogers wants the job. His friends are aiding him, and are claiming the rights of promotion for seniority and competence. If patronage is truly abolished in Ontario, they state, he will get it. He has been in charge during the illness and since the death of Mr. Hazard.

A number of farmers in different parts of Middlesex are said to be engaged in buttonholing representative men and members of the Legislature who are active in the United Farmers' movement.

Woman Has The Job.

They were asking that Hon. Mr. Nixon, the Provincial Secretary, be warned not to be as hasty in reaching a decision as they claim Hon. Mr. Raney was when he gave the Registrar's job to Miss Minnie Walker a few days ago. Yesterday Miss Walker received the official notification of her appointment, and it appears that despite the threatened insurrection of the farmers of the riding, she has the $3,500-a-year position clinched.

JAILED OFFICERS, LET CONVICTS OUT

Toledo, O., Dec. 26.—One of the most daring jail deliveries ever accomplished in this part of the country occurred here, when six men called at County Jail, exchanged Christmas greetings with three deputy sheriffs on duty, overpowered and locked them in a cell, then liberated four notorious burglars and safe-blowers. In the fight that followed the arrival of the visitors, Leo Noonan, a deputy, was shot through the left breast. Hearing the commotion, Sheriff John Mathias rushed from bed to investigate, and was promptly carried off to the cellar and imprisoned.

The ten men then walked leisurely out of the jail, and, although an alarm was quickly given, no trace of them had been found up to a late hour.

APPEAL FOR SAFETY FOR THE SOCIALISTS

CENTRAL POWERS ASK ENTENTE GOVERNMENTS TO PUT END TO SLAUGHTER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Dec. 26.—Appeals to World Workers, especially British, French, and Italian Socialists, asking that the Governments take steps to stop alleged "slaughter" of Communists and Socialists in Hungary, are being sent out by the Cantral Government Board of austrian Social Democracy. It is asserted that whereas five hundred victims were charged up to the Bela Kun Regime, more than ten times that number have been executed on conviction at a Drumheid Court Martial on "Flimsy Warrants," issued with an alleged connivance of Admiral Horthy, at present in command of the Hungrian Government troops. Entente Governments are jointly responsible for present occurrences the appeal declares.

WAGON AND CAR COLLIDE

A nasty street accident occurred this morning at about half-past eleven, when a horse and waggon, driven by Cyril Wiggin, of 210 Dublin st. was run into by a Ford automobile, driven by Robert Knox of Apsley, (with License No. 91899) at the corner of George and Simcoe streets.

It appears that Wiggin was driving down Simcoe street when the auto coming from the norh, hit the horse broadside, cutting the horse about the legs and feet and breaking a shaft.

The owner of the automobile, Mr. Knox, told Wiggin to take the waggon to Fitzgerald for repairs, and he would pay for the damage.

ST. THOMAS BOY DIES OF SLEEPING MALADY

WAS UNCONSCIOUS FOR THREE DAYS BEFORE DEATH IN HOSPITAL.

St. Thomas, Dec. 26.— The thirteen-year-old son of Geo. Blackwell, who has been ill for the past ten days of sleeping sickness, died at the Isolation Hospital. The lad had been unconscious for the past three days after he was stricken with the disease. The health officers aretaking every precaution to guard the public health. The other victim, MOrs. Edward Axford, who lives in South Yarmouth Township, is still in a critical condition.

DRURY GOVERNMENT QUITE EXTRAVAGANT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 26.— Secretary J. J. Morrison, of the United Farmers of ODntario, and often thought of by those watching the march of U. F. O. events as a "power behind thet throne," today sharply criticised the system under which the present Drury Government makes appointments to the civil service of the Province.

Autocratic Bureau.

It is, he declared, merely a substitution of an autocratic bureau for the old system of patronage. The Government, he contends, should strike at the unreasonable high salaries which are at the root of patronage evil. The Government's action in promoting a woman to a $3500 position as registrar of Middlesex County, with London offices, he characterises as a decided extravagance. The salary, he declared, is $1500 more than it should be.

The U. F. O. secretary has lodged pungent protest against making such an appointment before the voice of the rural district has been heard.

NARROW ESCAPES IN BAD RY. WRECK

C. P. R. TRAIN BREAKS APART OWING TO A BROKEN SWITCH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Fredericton, Dec. 26.—A broken switch rod is said to have been responsible for the Canadian Pacific passenger train from Montreal, breaking apart and being wrecked as it entered thet Fredericton Junction yards this morning. Edward Barry, Enniskillen, baggage master, was the only person hurt to any extent. He suffered a broken wrist and lasceretion about the head. The express car was thrown across the tracks, while the baggage car chashed into a string of freight cars standing on the siding, and the second class car was thrown into a ditch on the other side of the track, where it rolled over.

A party of six Russians, two other persons and a news agent, were in the second class car, which was badly smashed, but all climbed out unhurt except for some slight cuts and bruises. Hospital authorities here stated that Barry's injuries were not serious. By using other tracks in the yard the C. P. R. officials say that traffic will be handled without much delay.

Halifax City Council raised the salary of E. L. Tracy, license inspector, to $2,500.

All Saints' Church, Edmonton, was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $60,000.

HELP THE HOCKEYISTS.

THE BROCKVILLE Recorder and Times thus pleads for the hockeyists in that town, and what it says should be applied to the situation here:

This year should see a revival in the interest shown in hockey in Brockville. The great winter sport should be boomed. There is nothing that adds to a better spirit in any community than support of home athletics. The game of hockey is one making for the uplifting of young physical manhood. We all heard of the success won in the war by Canadian athletes. They made undying fame on the fields of France and Flanders. The development of athletic manhood is something akin to a duty on the part of any municipality. The right conception of calisthenics is a prime part of modern education. Those possessing its true perspective are usually foremost in the class room and in the arena of public affairs. The officers of hockey in Brockville and those in the game need all the support they can get. Aside from moral support, they want the practical kind. If it is given, this winter will see a revival here of a very exhilerating sport. Help the boys along and thus add to the reputation of Brockville as an athletic centre.

THE HOME RULE PROPOSAL.

FOR YEARS the subject of Home Rule for Ireland has been a moot one in world politics. Differences have taken place; opinions differed in many respects. Nevertheless, the great principle of self-government for the Emerald Isle has not downed. It never will until Ireland, like Canada, is given home rule. There is no reason why Ireland should not have a government of its own. Other parts of the British Empire, such as Canada, Australia and South Africa, know of the beneficent results of responsible government. While no justification can be extended for the abominable attempt on the life of Lord French, the great matter of self-government remains. All true friends of Ireland deplore the attempted assassination of a few days ago. At present a proposal is made for home rule. The chief provisions are as follows:

1. Two parliaments to be created, one in the north and one in the south.
2. Council to be established at the outset, to form a connecting link between the two.
3. Irish representation at London to be reduced to forty members.
4. Each parliament to have taxation powers equivalent to those of the American state legislatures.
5. Income tax, excess profits, supertax, customs and excise to be retained by the Imperial Parliament until two legislatures are united.
6. Clause to be inserted protecting the minorities.
7. Legislatures to have constituent powers to create single parliament at any time. The consent of Imperial Parliament for union is not necessary.
8. Imperial Parliament to place £1,000,000 at the disposal of each legislature to cover initial expenditure.

RATIFICATION OF SUPREME INTEREST

A SPEEDY ratification of the Peace Treaty is the supreme interest of Germany. Obviously it is so from a military point of view since failure to ratify and the consequent punitive measures could only plunge Germany into deeper depths of misery. Less obviously it is so from the point of view of character. Germany has to convince the world that she can make an engagement and stick to it. The long delays to signing, accompanied as they have been by shallow excuses, have given strength to the more militarist section in every Allied country. They have encouraged the belief that Germany continues to be the Germany of the "scrap of paper" tradition, and has no sincere wish to make reparation. On a third ground, signature as quickly as possible is imperative. Without it no real beginning can be made with the rehabilitation of Europe, and Central Europe in particular must remain in the mire into which it is sunk. What the world wants from Germany is evidence of a good will to right, so far as she can, the wrong of which she has been guilty. The first step towards that is signature. After signature, should the carrying out of the treaty be plainly beyond the strength of Germany, modifications and concessions are not only possible, but are provided through the instrument of the League of Nations. It is nobody's interest to see Germany crushed in an economic sense. Rather it is the interest of all the Allies to see Germany recover her place in industry, for Germany is the debtor of all, and must be allowed to put herself in a position to pay. Every interest of the German people dictates signature.

SUPPOSE FARMERS' STRIKE?

LABOR RADICALS in the industrial centres speak and act as if the world depended entirely upon them, while they are independent of everything and everybody. Here is an editorial from a Western paper, "Successful Farming," which should convince even the most unthinking radical that he and his are dependent upon society as a whole, and without it he would starve, freeze or go naked. The editorial, in part, follows:

"We ask city workers to ponder a moment what might happen if the farmers should do what the workers are doing—demanding shorter hours and higher pay. The farmers are their own bosses, so they would not have to quarrel with anybody. They could hold out on strike until they got good and ready, for they can feed themselves.

"You working fellows, suppose for a moment that the farmers adopted the eight-hour day. It would cut down production at least half. Suppose they also set a price on their labor and their products based on an eight-hour basic scale. Where would you get your food? Only the rich could buy it at all, for the price would be prohibitive to men on strike. If the cost of living is too high now, how will lessened production affect it? How will increased cost of production bring down prices?

"If you city workers expect the farmers to go on feeding you at the old price, you have got to get back to work at the old wage and make it possible for the farmer to buy cheaper so he can produce cheaper. This is not a one-sided game. It takes two to play it, and if you city fellows quit, don't get sore if you go hungry soon. Either the farmers must do as you are doing, shorten the hours and demand higher pay, or else they must lengthen the hours and produce more without more pay.

"The farmers have been patient with you. When they lose their patience, look out. If they quit, who is going to feed you? What city workers have in common with farmers is not so much political as economic. What are you going to do about it?"

In many countries of Europe this year was half the usual amount, because farmers could not plant the average crops. Relief societies are now trying to save the children from starvation and tuberculosis. In the radical's heaven—Russia—farmers have gone on strike and refused to produce more than sufficient for their own needs. Possession of a piece of bread is now something to fight for.

SHOULD HELP CANADIANS TO RETURN.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Sir Edward Kemp's statement makes it quite clear that the Government is under no further formal obligation to those Canadian ex-soldiers—some 20,000 in number—who took their discharge in Great Britain and many of whom are now in distress over there, without means of returning to this country. The men have themselves to blame for their unfortunate position. It was of their own choice that they took their discharge overseas, the authorities having endeavored to discourage them from doing so.

While the Government was not in favor of the soldiers taking their discharge overseas, it effected a saving through doing so. One of the conditions on which discharge was granted was that the soldier acknowledge the loss of his right to free transportation to Canada. He was entitled to transportation should he remain mobilized until he reached this country. The equivalent of the cost of the passage home was not given him when he elected to take his discharge and remain in England. The Government, therefore, saved the cost of transportation.

Had the Government's desire in the matter been realized, all these twenty thousand Canadians would have returned to Canada as soldiers at its expense. So that to provide these men with transportation now, when their continued stay in the Old Country means great hardship to them, would cost the government no more than it was ready and anxious to spend on them in the first place. Should the fact that the soldiers themselves relinquished their claim on free transportation home stand in the way of their getting it now? As Sir Edward Kemp's statement recalls, there was considerable justification for the election of the men to discharge overseas. Repatriation was slow at best and by securing their discharge they escaped the tiresome, idle wait of weeks and months in military camps, the monotony of which was so great as to lead some of those who were enduring it to unfortunate indiscretions.

We think the people of Canada will feel that the country has not discharged its moral obligations to these men now stranded in England until those who desire it have been given free transportation to their homes.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

YOU KNOW.

(Kingston Standard.)

If the high cost of living would only take a drop like the thermometer did. How happy we should all be! (by "drop" we beg to say we are not referring to—well, you know!)

A MISTAKE EASILY MADE.

(Ottawa Journal.)

Tenants may be bright enough, but they cannot always tell early in the negotiations whether the landlord is offering his house for sale or merely quoting the rent wanted.

SURELY NOT THAT BAD!

(Kingston Whig.)

Something must be radically wrong when a murderer awaiting execution can kill two of his guards and seriously injure a third. There must have been great laxity in the Hamilton prison, comparably only with that in Toronto jail.

THE BEST MAN.

(Toronto Star.)

The Borden Government has determined to go back to the policy on which the House of Commons unanimously agreed in 1919—a Canadian fleet co-operating with the British navy. This also is the Australian policy. Australia being an island, with most of its population living near the sea, has gone a long way ahead of Canada, but we cannot do better than follow its example.

U. S. AND THE NEAR EAST.

(Brooklyn Eagle.)

It is a curious fact that the situation in Siberia has brought the Russian problem home to the United States and that Japan and this country are for the moment most concerned in it. The situation is a paradox. Such Russian non-interventionists as Senator Johnston of California, for example, are faced with the alternatives of acquiescing in the maintenance of American troops in Siberia or seeing Japan replace Kolchak in fighting the Russian Reds. If this country refuses to join with Japan in this enterprise, we cannot, with good grace, object to Japan going it alone. But the consequences of real and effective intervention by Japan would create a serious problem for us in the Far East.

Mainly About People

Adelina Patti, on one of her first visits to San Francisco, was the guest one evening at thte home of some people who were her intimate friends and had been her guests in her home in Wales. Anothter guest that Sunday evening was an ambitious young tenor, at Patti's request sang and nearly expired in thte excitement of the occasion, although he was generously praised by the great artist.

Then Patti discovered in the company two young fellows she ad heard on an overland train singing to their own banjo and guitar accompaniment. To their confusion she demanded that they must "oblige" and insisted that it was just what she wanted to hear when they protested that they sang only darky songs.

Instruments were produced and the young men began rather haltingly with the quietest and most sentimental songs they knew. Patti was not satisfied. "Those funny, lively ones," she demanded. They, encouraged, gradually worked into brisker songs, to Patti's undoubtedly genuine pleasure. She hummed along with them until theiy swung into a rattling medley, when she joined with full throated voice in these words:

Chillen, keep in de middle of de road,
Chillen, keep in de middle of de road
Doan turn onto de right,
Doan turn onto de lef',
Jess keep in de middle of de road!

Then, laughing and singing, she led the nonsense when the medley came to these words:

Shame, shame, 'tis an awful shame!
Landady's raised de rent, boarahs ain't to blame.
Chuck full of hungah,
Caint stay no longah—
Bye, bye mi honey, I'se a-gwine.

She sang these and other nonsense patter until she had the youngsters gas ping for breath. Then she declared enthusiastically, "I never before had suchr fun singing. I wonder what a concert audience would do if I gave an encore;

Chuck full of hungah,
Caint sing no longah!
Bye, bye, my honey, I'se a-gwine?

WIT AND WISDOM

"Husband, that Chinese waiter seems deeply interested in our Chinese room."

"Yes, he says he never saw anything like that in China."

"The pen is mightier than the sword."

"Yes," replied Senator Sorghum; "but a good typewriting machine properly managed may be mightier than either."

The Court—Considering that you are the wife of the prisoner, do you think you are qualified to act as a juror in this case?

The Lady—Well, your honor, if you will only give me a chance, I think I can convince the eleven other jurors that he's guilty.

She—Is it true that liquor will continue to be made surreptitiously?

He—My dear, that's all moonshine.

"That was a remarkable escape of Boreleigh's. It's a wonder he's alive to tell the tale."

"Yes, and a pity, too."

The Essential Feature.

Rastus had entered the recruiting office to join the army.

"Which will you prefer—a mixed or an all-black outfit " asked the officer in charge.

"No matter in the least, boss," said the negro, "jes' so it's got a band."

Haultain, Dec. 5, 1919.

Dear Mrs. Church:

We, the patrons and interested friends of the South Burleigh cheese factory have not let these thirteen years of faithfulness and capable service which you have rendered us in the capacity of secretary pass by unnoticed. Indeed, we have often thought of how favored we have been in having the services of one so able and faithful to perform such an important duty.

We have for a long time desired to find some way of expressing our appreciation of such valued service, and, while we do not think that in handing you this little token, we are in any way relieving ourselves of our obligations to you, yet we thought that some such token would tend to show you that we had appreciated your services and had learned to esteem you highly.

We not only appreciate you as the secretary of our factory, but our associations with you in other ways have caused us to have a very high regard for you, and we trust that we will be spared the pleasure of long continued associations and hope you will aways find us to be your valued friends.

Patrons of Burleigh Cheese Factory:

What the Major Knew

By DORA MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

For five months prior to his return with twelve hundred comrades from the Great Adventure, Floyd Hobart had not received so much as one letter from Beth. Yet as he sat in the train that was speeding him to the home town on a seventy-two-hour leave the second day after the docking of his ship, his heart was high and no carping finger of doubt plucked at his heart strings.

For Floyd was not the only soldier, by many hundreds, who had gotten no mail from home for weeks and months upon end, though many were the loving messages that had been sent them. And he knew the especial liability to loss of their mail that fell to the lot of men whose experiences were like his.

Hobart had been one of those soldiers whom the fates seem to conspire to keep away from their commands. Within a week of debarkation in France he had been detached from his company had sent to regional headquarters, whence had come a loud cry for help from expert accountants among the enlisted men to straighten out the tangled "paper work" of the organization. Thence he had been chased back to the port of debarkation on a hunt for some unaccounted-for military property.

Next came a transfer to brigade headquarters and an expert clerical job under which he chafed.

Then, all unexpectedly, the "big push," and for a month Floyd almost slept on a motorcycle as a dispatch-bearer, tearing over the roads of France and encountering every organization in his division but his own battalion, which had been meantime detailed to serve with the French.

Twice for a fevered hour he had gotten into the red flood of battle, each time with a different and stranger unit, and gone through the carnage unscathed. Then, back on the motorcycle, returning to division headquarters after delivering a highly important message to tha commander of a battalion just "going in," the end of the world, seemingly, had come out of the sky where a Hun bomber had evaded the vigilance of the American scouts—and Floyd had found consciousness on a train headed for a base hospital.

There he had remained for seven weeks while the two broken and mangled arms were restored to usefulness. After that a period in a convalescent hospital and one day an order to report again to division headquarters.

And all this time, and the rest of the time over there, without one word from home, not a sign from Beth—but who could wonder? Wars must be fought as best they may, and soldiers must be here or there as the exigencies of the service demand, whether one hears from the loved ones or not.

And Floyd Hobart was a soldier to the marrow of his bones. Too brave a soldier and too true a man to doubt the constancy of the girl who had promised to be his wife, just because her letters had gone astray.

So there was no shadow, no premonition of evil, no cloud upon the strong man's faith as the hurrying train carried him nearer and nearer to home—and to the happiness he had yearned for all this frenzied year.

Floyd had wired Beth Hardwick that he would arrive in the home town by the train on which he was traveling.

There were many people on the station platform as the soldier, first passenger to alight, swung from the car step, but his keen eyes found [illegible] erect and well-clad figure instantly. Then it was that the first warning came.

The girl had not yet seen him, and as she scanned the trickle of detraining passengers Floyd could see none of that eager anticipation, none of that joy of imminent welcome in her eyes, of which he had been so sure. Beth was pale, and worry had stamped itself upon her face.

In a moment more she had seen him and took a step or two in his direction as he hurried to her. But as she held out her hand to him there was apprehension, nervous gayety and a queer, unaccustomed air of defiance, all at the same time. Floyd's heart turned to lead within him.

"I'm very, very glad you're safely back, Floyd," Beth said—and even as she spoke, in a constrained, unnatural voice, Hobart saw that the little solitaire was gone from her left hand.

He drew her aside from the crowd on the platform. "I can see, Beth," he said. "Tell me about it. I've learned to stand things. Who is it?"

And Beth told him.

It was Fred Terrell, Terrell of Floyd's own company—Terrell the lawyer, who had come home from the training camp the week before the regiment sailed, utterly cast down because at the last moment he had been rejected by the medical officers on account of lamentably imperfect vision.

He had almost wept as he told Beth of the bitter disappointment a strong man suffers at being, against his protests and in conflict with his dearest hopes, compelled to stay out of so glorious a crusade.

Beth had felt so sorry for him! And then he had been so splendid afterward—had made such wonderful speeches urging on the growth of the people's will to victory, even consenting to enter politics, which he abhorred, so that he might, in the state assembly, lend his sturdy patriotic aid to the war governor!

And he had been such a miracle of kindness and consideration to Beth in her loneliness after Floyd had gone. And somehow Floyd away over there in the midst of the vast turmoil, engaged in such heroic things, seemed to need her so much less than this disappointed friend at home, who was denied the dearest aspiration of a patriotic young American!

And—ah, well, Floyd would understand. And, anyway, he must have far outgrown ordinary little Beth Hardwick!

Hobart took his sentence like the soldier he was. But he could not help wishing, bitterly, that the Hun's bomb had fallen a rod nearer.

It was Andrews, the major doctor, just returned to civil life, who bullied his bosom friend, Floyd, into confessing what it was that had robbed life of its sunshine.

There was no deceiving those wise surgeon's eyes. And two days afterward Doctor Andrews deliberately put himself into Beth's path.

"Young woman," he said, "I want you to come into Henri's with me and have a cup of chocolate. I've something cross to say to you." Laughingly Beth complied.

Andrews, who had been the medical officer in charge of Floyd's and Terrell's camp, talked straight and true. "Fred Terrell's mother is a splendid, proud American woman," he said at last. "It would have killed her to have it known that her son was a yellow dog. And so I let the word get back here that Terrell had been discharged for imperfect vision. As a matter of fact the fellow made the most frantic efforts to avoid the draft and when every claim for exemption was denied he had unsuccessfully appealed to his congressman and senator, he went into a blue funk and lost pounds of weight in a week. Up there at camp he was sick—really sick. His surgeon looked him over and finally passed him up to me. I wasted hours on him, trying to arouse his sense of manhood, and then, in utter disgust, I ordered his discharge. He would never have been of the slightest use to the army. The thing he was suffering from was ineradicable, ingrown cowardice. No one knows but you. I'm telling you, not only for your own little fool sake, but for Floyd's. Good day. I've got to see a patient—another patient. You've been pretty sick, too."

But Beth made a quick recovery. And when she and Floyd meet Terrell now she smiles at him—a very queer little smile.

CREVASSES HARD TO AVOID

Explorers in the Antarctic Particularly Troubled by What Are Known as "Devil's Traps."

Visitors to Switzerland alone can appreciate the dangers of crevasses in the ice sheets; but in the Antarctic they are more numerous and attain far greater dimensions than in Switzerland. They lie hidden under the snow and very often the explorer does not know that he is on a crevasse until he has traveled some yards, and then he hears a hollow sound. He will then wonder whether to go on or turn back, but experience has taught that the greater danger may be incurred by turning back.

Crevasses are peculiar to the ice sheets overland. They are nonexistent at the north pole because there the ice is frozen ocean. All Antarctic expeditions have had to negotiate the difficulties of crevasses, and sometimes their existence has compelled the explorers to make a detour of many miles.

Where land juts out into the sea or, to be more precise, into an ice sheet in the Antarctic, several crevasses will be found radiating from this point. Some have been known to be 50 yards wide and 2,000 feet deep. Instances are also found where a sledge has sunk half way through the ice roof and has been rescued with the greatest difficulty. In these cases the explorers were luckily roped to the sledge, but they had the uncomfortable experience of being suspended over a deep chasm.

Amundsen calls the treacherous snow which conceals a crevasse "The Devil's Roof."

EXERCISE FOR INDOOR WORKER

Six-mile Walk Per Day Not Too Much for Office Man.

"Exercise is almost as important in the conservation of health as is diet," says the New York Medical Journal in an editorial on "Walking and Working." "Sedentary workers," it says, "or those who lead an indoor life from compulsion or choice should take a certain amount of outdoor exercise daily with the same regularity and care that they take their food. A great many of the gastro-intestinal diseases which afflict sedentary workers and which frequently lead to serious disease are due to lack of or insufficient exercise in the open air. According to Dr. Leonard Hill, the well-known British authority, in a pamphlet on scientific ventilation issued by the British Medical Research Committee, sedentary workers should ration their outdoor exercise, which, in his opinion, should never be less than walking six miles daily or the equivalent in work in a garden or on the land.

"Unfortunately, the average sedentary workers does not ration his outdoor exercise in accordance with his bodily needs, but, as a rule, takes only that amount of exercise as going to and from work requires of him. Generally speaking, the measure of his daily walk is the distance between his home and the railway depot at one end and his office and the railway depot at the other. Proximity to a depot in an allurement, often a fatal allurement, to the sedentary worker. It shortens the time needed to reach the office, but it also reduces the amount of outdoor exercise taken, and, as Dr. Hill points out, lessens mental vigor.

"The habit, indeed, of plunging, as it were, straight from the breakfast table into the subway and straight out of the subway into the office is a pernicious one, and it would be of benefit physically and mentally to many who live near a station if they eliminated that station from the day's program.

"In order to obtain the six-mile ration of outdoor exercise a beginning might be made by starting earlier in the morning and walking to the next station; then, perhaps, starting yet earlier and walking to another station further on, and soon, if the office is not too far away, walking the entire distance.

"There is no doubt that sedentary workers do not have enough exercise. The remark possibly is more applicable to the sedentary workers of America than to those of any other nation, assuredly than to those of Great Britain. The business Canadian is likely to think that walking is a waste of valuable time, and he does not pause to consider that by such means he keeps the human machine in good working order, a far more important matter than that of making money in a hurry.

"A daily walk is infinitely superior in its health-giving effects to the daily aperient, and is also more beneficial than working for some time at high tension, or than even taking a long rest. Working in spurts and playing or resting in spurts, is not good practice. Business men and women should ration their outdoor exercises, and the exercise could take the form of walking.

RHINO CHARGED A TRAIN.

Exciting Incident Which Occurred on East African Railway.

This incident is related by two British soldiers who had been on continuous service in East Africa between three and four years. Their demobilization orders were handed to them, and they were leaving Tabora for the coast en route to "Blighty." "This meant a 500 miles train journey, occupying two days. All went as gaily as a wedding bell for the first twelve hours; we had reached Saranda about eight o'clock in the morning, and half an hour afterwards were steaming across the Great Rift Valley, which stretches from Palestine, through Abyssinia and East Africa, down to Nyassa. Our train was passing along a steep embankment, overlooking miles and miles of forest and bush.

"All of a sudden, a slight shudder shook our carriage, as though caused by some strong impact outside. The train drew up, and the driver had jumped down from the engine, and was pointing excitedly to a large black object lying at the rear of the train beside the railway. The cry went up, 'A rhino! A rhino! A rhino! Kifaru! Kifaru!' Everybody—Europeans, Indians, natives crowded out of the carriages, and took along to it. There lay the beast, a big, ungainly monster, with its two ferocious-looking horns, and black, tough hide. It was apparently dead.

"It charged the engine full at the side," said the Indian driver, "and it's bent back the stepping-plate." Yet, despite the terrific impact which must have occurred — for we had been travelling at a fair pace—it bore no sign of injury. Its hide must have been like iron.

"But it was not dead. Suddenly, it attempted to rise, and fell back again. It lay motionless, but at any second might attempt an attack. On one side of the railway track, the ground sloped steeply down to a mass of dense bush; on the other, rose equally steeply. Should the brute charge, there was no means of escape. And the rhinoceros is a foolish creature, and dangerous because of its foolishness. His sight is short—he can only see a couple of hundred yards or so in front of him—but he makes up for the loss by an exceptionally keen sense of smell. Having scented an enemy in the vicinity, he will rush blindly in that direction. Books on hunting recommend you to remain calm and still while he is coming for you, and then, when he is about four or five yards away, to step quietly aside. A good hint, that! But one doesn't want to be carried away by the excitement of the moment—or the rhino!

"Then an officer ran up—one of the passengers. He had fetched a rifle. He aimed. We stood back. Bang! Bang! Bang! Three bullets entered the great body. It trembled a little. Blood gushed from the nostrils. The rhino was dead.

"And having resumed our seats, the train moved on again."

New Use for Eucalyptus.

A method of using the bark of a large variety of eucalyptus trees for commercial purposes has been discovered in Australia, according to the weekly bulletin of the Canadian Department of Trade and Commerce. It is reported that from the bark there can be made a fibre suitable for the manufacture of twine, rope and bagging of a quality equal to the best flax and Indian jute goods at half the cost of the latter.

The inventor of the process is said to have been experimenting fifteen years, and now has available for inspection in a factory near Melbourne samples of binder twine, light and heavy rope, and bags for agricultural products. It is said that every particle of the fibre can be used either in the manufacture of the articles named or as waste for furniture stuffing, fibrous plaster work, packing refrigerator chambers, and like purposes.

So far as can be ascertained, the bark first is passed through a "softening" machine, which loosens out the fibres, and then through carding and spinning machines specially adapted to the purpose. The supply of raw material is practically inexhaustible, and can be had for the cost of collecting and transportation to the factory.

PROTECTION OF BIRDS.

Bird Sanctuaries to Be Created for Their Preservation.

In the year before the war, that is to say, in 1913, a committee was appointed by the Rt. Hon. Reginald McKenna, then British Home Secretary, to inquire into the working of the World Birds Protection Act, and to consider whether any amendment of the law or improvement in its administration was required. The committee set to work at once, and had almost completed its investigations when the outbreak of the war prevented further progress, with the result that the report has only recently been published. Its appearance is another welcome indication of a return to more normal conditions, and the committee's statement should give great impetus to a movement which has been gaining in public favor for many years.

The report is, for the most part, a particularly encouraging one. As the result of fifty years of wild bird protection, the bird life of the country has, it appears, considerably increased, whilst the committee has to report a growing recognition throughout the country that the indiscriminate capture and destruction of birds and the taking of their eggs is no longer permissible. This in itself is, of course, an important point gained, and that it should be followed, as it evidently is being followed, by an increasing interest in wild birds was inevitable. Private individuals and societies are, the report states, doing very excellent work by creating bird sanctuaries for the preservation of disappearing species or the re-establishment of those that have already disappeared; and it is particularly gratifying to find the committee recommending that the state should help in this work. The question of a small subsidy from the state to assist in the provision of watchers in public sanctuaries should, the committee thinks, be sympathetically considered.

Then, as anyone who had any knowledge of the situation would have expected, the committee lays particular stress upon the importance of enforcing the existing laws. It wisely rejects the temptation to complicate the law by the "creation of a large number of petty offences," but insists it should be clearly laid down that it is the duty of the authorities to enforce the law, and that additional powers, where necessary, should be given them to this end. No amount of legislation is, of course, of much use unless its enforcement is secured, and the more conscientiously it is enforced in this instance, the more rapid will be the growth of that public opinion against bird destruction, of all kinds, which must ultimately render special legislation on the subject unnecessary.

This is, perhaps, particularly true in the case of the periodically resuscitated fashion of using feathers for personal adornment. On this point the committee is quite emphatic, and maintains that it is eminently desirable that all practical measures should be taken for the suppression of the traffic in the feathers of those wild birds which are now destroyed merely for their plumage, and insists that the only satisfactory method of attaining this end is to secure an international agreement by which the importation of such feathers "will be prohibited by all civilized countries." Such an agreement is indeed eminently desirable, and there can be little doubt that public opinion is already sufficiently strong in its favor to secure its consummation.

No comment on the committee's report, however short, would be complete without a very special welcome being accorded to the recommendation "that immediate steps should be taken to provide suitable perches on all lighthouses on and around the coast of the United Kingdom."

Value of the Rainbow.

While it is true that the beautiful colors displayed by the rainbow are due to the passage of light through raindrops, the popular conception that the drops are directly in line between the sun and the bow is incorrect. The light enters the raindrop and is refracted back to form the bow. In this passage through the drop the different colors are produced which, blended, make our ordinary white light.

Two persons standing side by side see two different bows, though they present the same appearance.

Untold centuries after men had viewed this wonderful display of color in the sky, it was discovered that light thus separated into its component parts had a story of great interest to tell. By passing light through carefully prepared prisms and charting the lines, and by heating to incandescence various substances and passing the light through the same prisms to the chart, it became possible to trace and identify the substance incandescent at the source of light. Thus by spectrum analysis not only the sun's light but also that of the stars as well is made to tell the story of the material of which they are composed.

Speaking broadly, it has been found that these bodies separated by tremendous distances from us are made of substances known as component parts of our own globe. The rainbow, long the mystery of the sky, has proved the bow of promise in leading to a very definite analysis of all light.

An Eye For a Tooth.

In a certain part of British Africa is a doctor who acts as understudy to the magistrate. Recently each was conscious of having transgressed by riding a bicycle without a light. They decided that the majesty of the law would best be vindicated by each appearing before the other. The magistrate, taking precedence, first tried the doctor and fined him 5 rupees. Then the doctor tried the magistrate and fined him 100. The reason he gave for his severity was that the offence was becoming far too common.

PETERBOROUGH GREATEST STORE

Alderman W. H. Taylor for Mayor

Pledged to Street Railway Extensions and City Development

W. H. TAYLOR

To the Electors of Peterboro

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In accepting nomination as mayorality candidate in the coming election, allow me to express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to assure all citizens alike that if elected to the dignity of first magistrate of this important city of Peterboro I shall endeavor to exercise such high office for the weal of the whole community, irrespective of class or creed.

In the past two years, as Finance Minister of the City Council, I have acquired close touch with the city's financial affairs generally. This experience, I believe, would stand this municipality in goor stead next year, when such big problems as completing the new bridge under the cost-plus commission plan, and installing a costly sewage disposal plant, will entail the expenditure of considerable sums and shrewd financing.

Street Railway Extensions.

Three years ago, ladies and gentlemen, I pledged myself to support extensions of the street railway system, but the Hydro-electric Commission could not undertake such while the war was on, and nothing was accomplished in that direction until this year when the commission was persuaded to lay tracks from Charlotte street, along the Monaghan Road to Patterson street, and to put in operation two new cars. This improved the service somewhat, but it is not enough. The end I have in view if privileged to serve you as mayor, is further extensions south to Lansdowne street, north to near the Normal School, and over the new bridge to East City, with perhaps a belt line service. But my broad policy in regard to the street railway is its ultimate ownership by the city for the people just as soon as it can be purchased from Hydro-Electric at a price and under conditions which will assure profitable investment, and a minimum fare. Whether such transfer to the city as a public utility can be secured or not at an early date, I purpose, if elected, to leave no stone unturned to connect by steel rails all sections of the city with its business and manufacturing establishments, so that workmen and girls may have easy access to their employment whether they live in the north, south, east or west.

City Development.

In regard to city beautifying and development to afford unstinted opportunities for public recreation and a brighter life for the masses of the people, I believe the City Council should co-operate whole herrtedly in any projects to these ends. If Peterborough is to grow into a greater Peterborough City developing and town planning must be generously resorted to. For, unless conditions be attractive to workingmen and their families, this city will be handicapped in its bid for new industries, and present factories will not be encouraged to expand locally.

City of Resources.

Ladies and gentlemen, we have a city of resources and opportunities. Let us unite in taking advantage of them. British and American industries are seeking location in Canada and this is an opportune time to reach out after more factories. Don't let us be too conservative in our views, but adopt broad and democratic principles in a united effort to stimulate trade and industrial activities, to furnish employment for a greater and growing number, and to enhance the community's prosperity in general.

Serve Every Interest.

I am offering my services to this city by request of a large number of ratepayers and respectfully ask the co-operation of all citizens to secure my election. If elected I will devote to the office of mayor whatever time is needed and above all will serve every interest alike, recognizing no privilege for any particular class, but a four-square consideration for all. In conclusion, I might say that in my opinion this city needs a shaking up in its public spirit, a get-together movement for general progress and increased citizenship, a unison of individual and organized interests in a common bond of community fellowship which will make for municipal uplift, industrially, commercially and expansibly. Such is my objective in aspiring to office as mayor, and leaving myself in your hands, I extend to one and all best wishes for a happy and prosperous new year.

Yours very truly,

W. H. TAYLOR

Origin of Cheque.

The word "cheque" came into its present use from an ancient and foreign source, and a remote significance. Its original is a Persian word, pronounced something like "shak" a term in chess—which game was invented by the Persians to designate a movement of chess men in an attack upon the king-piece. In the later Latin the word "Scaccarium" meant a chess board, and "scaccus" the checkmating movemevnt in the game. Passing into the French this later word became "eschec," and through the Norman into old English in a form from which the word "cheque" or "check" developed. From its usage in chess it was extended to designate an action stopping a movement or progress in any affair. The noun developed in applying the idea of checking to a thing that would accomplish this purpose, as with a ticket or token. In banking the original "cheque" was a stub or counterfoil to prevent forgery. With the development of transactions in banking, drawn notes, drafts and cheques were synonymous terms. It is maintained that it has been only within the last forty years, that a cheque has become established in its statutory definition as "a written order to a banker to pay a named sum on a drawer's account to bearer or named person. — Home Bank Monthly.

VOTE FOR JONES

TO THE ELECTORS OF PETERBORO

Having again been nominated and asked to run for the position of Alderman for 1920, I respectfully solicit the support of the ratepayers in the interest of good, economical municipal government. If elected, I will support only those measures that I conside in the best interests of the city.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have the honor of nomination and have been urgently requested by a very large number of ratepayers to be a candidate for the Utilities Commission.

Having served you six years as alderman and two years as Mayor, I acquired a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the duties of the Utilities Commission.

I was a member of the City Council during the negotiations, construction and prosecution of the work of the city electric power station, the city waterworks dam, and the auxiliary pumping station.

As Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in the City Council, I came directly in contact with the waterworks system, including the mains, hydrants, pressure, etc., for fire protection, domestic and manufacturing purposes.

For two years I was Vice-President of the Ontario Hydro Radial Association, which gave me a thorough knowledge of the advantages of the Hydro Electric system for power, electric lighting, heating and radial railway purposes.

With the above experience and knowledge I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in support of my candidature, assuring you if elected that I will endeavor to assist in every way possible the other members of the Commission to carry out the work in the very best interests of the ratepayers of the City of Peterborough.

I am heartily in favor of such improvements as the proposed new Filtration Plant when the time is opportune, but am of the opinion that all such large expenditures, as far as practicable, in every department of the city, should be deferred until such time as some of the present debentures are fully paid up, except in so far as it is found necessary to go ahead with the work in order to keep our workmen and laborers steadily employed.

Respectfully yours,

Jos. J. Duffus

FOR BOARD OF EDUCATION

Mrs. Kate Morris

TO THE ELECTORS

The Hon. Mr. Drury, Premier of Ontario, has stated that he considers the woman's point of view both desirable and necessary on every Board of Education.

Dr. Cody, while Minister of Education, many times expressed the same opinion.

Your Board of Education acknowledges the need and value of women in the schools when it employs six times as many women as men teachers (65 women and 11 men) and a woman nurse.

Having been a Public School teacher for some years, I am able to see the educational questions of the day from the double viewpoint of the home and the teacher.

It is in the hope of giving intelligent service that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

KATE MORRIS,
(Mrs. W. R. Morris.)

Passed the Test.

A young man from our town had gone into a training school as an automobile mechanic. In one of their tests an automobile was taken apart and it was his duty to assemble each part to its respective place. He had done this with the exception of one piece, which was missing and which he could not find. The C. O. told this young fellow that it was up to him to get this piece, so, taking his superior officer at his word, he proceeded to take the missing part from the commanding officer's own car and he was one of four out of a class of 190 who passed the test.—Chicago Tribune.

TO THE ELECTORS

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:—

I take this opportunity of solic ing your support for Councillor the important Township of Nor Monaghan, and if elected I will my utmost to prove worthy of yo confidence. Wishing you all a Hap New Year.

For Board of Education

After strong pressure from influential quarters, I have again consented to accept a position on the Board of Education, if it be the will of the electors to place me there. If my best business ability is considered necessary to help complete the work which is already in hand it is at the service of the Citizens for another term. A good substantial vote behind me would look as though what I have tried to do has been appreciated.

Your vote is respectfully solicited.

Let PHELAN Finish His Work!

Ladies and Gentlemen,
To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

I am again a candidate for the position of alderman. I have endeavored to serve you faithfully in the past, and if you will favor me with re-election I will continue to give you my best services.

During the year that is closing I have been chairman of the Board of Works and in that position have given practically all of my time to the construction of the new Hunter street bridge and to the preparations for the installation of Sewage Disposal Works.

If you believe my knowledge of these matters will be useful in the coming year, I ask you for an opportunity to see these works finished. To these important works as well as to the general business of this city I will devote my close attention if you should favor me with re-election.

Permit me also to take this opportunity of thanking my friends for the confidence reposed in me in the past, and to express the wish that all may enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Yours respectfully, HARRY PHELAN.

Fourth of Weekly Terpsichorean Events Well Patronized.

The fourth of the weekly Thursday night dances of the Great War Veterans' Association was held last night under the auspices of the Social Committee of the G. W. V. A.

The floor was in excellent condition. Over eighty couples participated. Mr. H. E. Follis supplied the music. Refreshments were served about 11:00 o'clock and the dancing lasted until 1 a.m.

It is gratifying to the committee and to the Asociation to see the success which has attended these weekly dances. It was thought at first that it might take some time to get these dances popularized, but the favorable manner in which the first four have been received bids fair to make them a weekly afair of importance to the dancing public.

COPPING FOR ALDERMAN

TO THE ELECTORS OF CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Having been nominated for the Council, I have given the matter most earnest consideration and have finally decided to offer my services to the city. It happens that I have both the time and the means and, in view of the need, I feel it my duty to place them at the disposal of the people of Peterborough. If elected, I will devote the full time which may be necessary to efficiently discharge all the duties which the office of Alderman entails.

The coming year will carry with it tremendous responsibility in finishing the Hunter street bridge and building the Sewage Disposal Plant. It will be my earnest endeavor to see to it that this work is carried out in the most effective manner, and that the people's money is spent well and economically.

For several years I have been interested in City Planning, and have given a good deal of consideration to plans to make our City bigger and at the same time more beautiful. If elected, I will do everything possible to solve the present housing problem and bring our street car system within the reach of all populous portions of the City. I would also recommend a permanent scheme for the future development of the City which will provide for growth and at the same time ensure the health and well being of all our citizens, particularly those who are forced to spend the most of their time within the City limits.

I am also in favor of gradually extending bathing facilites each year, so that in a short time we shall be taking full advantage of our natural resources in this respect and making use of the river which flows through our city, so that every citizen may enjoy it.

I have no ambition except to serve the city, and, if elected, will do my utmost to represent all classes and bring about a better understanding between the laboring and the business interests.

Yours respectfully,

R. V. COPPING

NORMA TALMADGE IN "THE TRAIL-BLAZER"

SEE HER AT EMPIRE THEATRE IN "THE WAY OF A WOMAN."

Norma Talmadge, in spite of the fact that she is the youngest of the big stars at the head of her own corporation, has been responsible for many innovations in the film world. Her initiative, open-minded attitude and youthful, adventuresome spirit which prompts her to try everything, have resulted in many new ideas being introduced at the Norma Talmadge studios which will probably soon be adopted by various other motion picture companies.

One of her latest innovations which is helping to establish Miss Talmadge a sthe world's most popular screen artist is her own personal photographer, who has his studio on her premises and is ready at any time to make photographs of this beautiful Select star for various magazines and newspaper publicity It is also his duty to make the stills of the various productions. Miss Talmadge's extensive wardrobe at the picture studio admits of many more changes than she could pack into a suitcase and take with her to any Fifth Avenue photograph gallery. Her make-up table for different characterizations is always at hand, the powerful and varied lights of the studio can at any time be pressed into service, and the time saved by this highly successful arrangement would in itself have made teh experiment worth while.

Another department Miss Talmadge has established at the studio which has proven a big aid in making her pictures the wonderful success they are, is a permanent Research Department whose business it is to look after the accuracy of detail and artistic nicety of each picture.

Norma Talmadge, the trail-blazer will be seen in her latest Select Picture, "The way of a Woman," which comes on Dec. 29—31 to the Empire theatre. Supported by a brilliant cast and with the aid of the various new departmnts which Miss Talmadge has recently established, "The Way of a Woman" is a picture well worth seeing and one that you will not be likely to soon forget.

LOST SLEEP.

Daylight Saving Helped to Make an Army of Time-evaders.

"Now that we have returned to the 'old' time, I want to tell you that we will have a people with better nerves," said a well-known doctor. "People got in the way of stealing that hour. They evaded nature's rule persistently in the belief that they were fooling old Father Time, when at the same time the only ones who were being hoodwinked were themselves. Many persons who were in the habit of going to bed at 11 o'clock at night would yawn when the clock's hands pointed to 11, remark that it really was only 10 o'clock 'by rights,' decide to use fully the hour that they believed was being stolen from them and wait up until it generally was after 12 when they got tucked between the sheets.

"In the morning, though, they had to settle up, as nature cannot be cheated so easily as humans. Feeling the lack of the hour's sleep to which they had been accustomed, the time evaders would be compelled to desert their comfortable beds.

"Some persons gain the erroneous impression that sleep can be carried over like figures in addition and subtraction, such as by sleeping late on Sunday once in a while they can make up for what they have lost. It takes something like a serious ailment to disabuse their minds of the idea. Losing sleep is like drawing on principal instead of interest in a bank. Its effects are felt in later life if not before.

"I know of some persons who are sleeping under the daisies now that would be alive and well if they had not tried to put it over on nature on the sleeping game. Most of them were victims of influenza and pneumonia."

In conclusion the doctor said, with a twinkle in his eye:

"Those who will gain doubly are the wives of many of the victims of lost sleep. The latter have been having a battle every morning to get their husbands out of bed so that the men would not lose their jobs, and after they had performed the unpleasant duty they have had to stand such growls and accumulated peevishness that it was a relief to them when their better halves rushed to work after gulping what they could with the limited time they had left for eating after being late in rising."

Has Stuff of Modern Hero Stuck to Ideals Through Years of Dull, Hard Work

ONTARIO'S new Minister of Labor and Health, though no marvel in the ranks of the toilers, may be measured and not found wanting in many of the attributes of the manly man. Throughout his life, and it has been an active one, filled to the brim with work, work, work, he has never lost faith in his destiny. That destiny may not have been as exalted in his view as the stars in their courses have borne him, yet it stood high, and the goal comes as no great surprise to his admirers. To him it is as he expresses it, one of his good fortunes, which, he has found, have come to him through unexpected channels. That may be, but the navigator ever had his eye for certain channels. Walter Rollo never lost sight of the gleam, and see where he now stands!

He was always constant to his ideals. He worked at broom-making, which brought poorer wages than most trades, but that did not discourage him. Full of grit, he held on and on, striving for better things for the workers. He tells you he is no bookworm; newspapers and labor literature have the greatest thrill for him; yet he never made such a god of them that he could not worship at other shrines, but that worship which brought with it recreation helped to broaden and fit him for leadership and the days when he was to be found in the seats of the mighty. When younger, in Hamilton, he took to baseball, and, as everybody knows, a few seasons on the ball field go quite a way toward acquiring soundness of wind and limb and clearness of mind. As time passed, the new Minister, Scottish clear through, joined the Kiltie regiment being formed in Hamilton, and worked his way to color-sergeant. It stands to reason, further, that a man cannot go that far in the militia without having engrafted in him promptness in times of action and obedience to orders. Add to these qualities an optimistic outlook of life and its problems from the labor viewpoint, and it need not surprise the electors at large that the Hon. Walter Rollo's friends and supporters are vain enough to believe that he surely will fill the bill as Minister of Labor and Health to the province's satisfaction.

As for his beliefs, they are well known to the Independent Labor party, of which he is president, and those who have followed his career. It can be said that Mr. Rollo has both the faith and the works on his person for their accomplishment; insofar as one man, although bigger in mental stature than most, can aid to that end. In this regard his friends say he has almost the prophetic vision, for some years ago he saw and foretold not a few labor reforms which are now being gradually worked out to the workers' benefit.

Mr. Rollo's association with the Board of Education has helped to fill him out in the public sense. His appointment as a trustee was, he says, something he had longed for, but had little hope of securing, but good fortune was again his friend and down the unexpected channel he sailed. Had he not been named Labor Minister, he could have made a respectable "stab" at the post of Minister of Education. He was years on the Hamilton Board; he was no rampageous iconoclast; he sought but the children's good, and was instrumental in introducing a number of useful changes in school management.—Toronto Star Weekly.

His Expedient.

The army examiner was getting somewhat out of patience with the dull candidate before him. But he controlled his temper, and gave him a last chance to distinguish himself.

"Let it be supposed, sir," he said, ironically, "that you were a captain in command of infantry: that in your rear was an impassable abyss; that on both sides of you there rose perpendicular rocks of tremendous height; that in front of you lay the enemy, outnumbering you ten to one. What, sir, in such an emergency would you do?"

"What would I do?" responded the applicant, "I should resign!"

Studying Deep-Sea Life.

A peculiar advantage for the study of marine life is credited the biological station established at Messina about two years ago. The sudden rise of the ocean bed at the strait of Messina causes very unusual upward currents from great depths, and these are so strong as to bring many of the deep-sea animals forcibly to the surface, where they are caught from small boats. The animals are taken under conditions less abnormal than usual. Many of them are able to produce light and some even vary the color of the light at will.

Show Me, Angela!

By BARBARA KERR

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

She was such an alluring bit of femininity. Her dark brown hair was beautifully marcelled—not that she had spent twenty-five perfectly good dollars and had the job done, that is permanently waved at one sitting, but she was a twice-a-week customer at Mme. Periwig's, and as this was one of the bi-weekly days and she knew that it was thoroughly and efficiently done.

She knew that the two curly little horns, one over each ear, were just so, and were skewered into place with innumerable invisible hairpins; that her hair was roached back with a most bewitching "cowlick" at the most becoming angle of her forehead, and that her "widow's peak" was pointed precisely over the left eyebrow. Therefore by and because of all these signs her coif was the last word.

Her complexion was arrived at by the benzoic method. It was now seven months and twenty-one days since water had touched her face. Her make-up box took up the whole end of a clothes closet, and her bills for cosmetics, creams and other beautifiers were greater than those of her father for clothes.

But her devoted parents had no fault to find with Angela's tout ensemble, nor the cost thereof, for she was vastly easy for all to look upon, and a finished feast for the tired eyes of indulgent parents.

And to all this Angela Burton was wise. She had capitalized her appearance and knew it. More than once it had brought her what she desired. But now, and it was a fearful, almost terrifying moment, Tommy Hampton, her old sweetheart, who had always stood so in awe of her, was returned from France, and in their first minutes he was saying to her:

"No use, Angie! You've got to show me something besides good looks—You're a peacherino, all right, all right, but I've been around some—I've seen all kinds of girls—and the girl that interests me now is the girl with the goods—and not dry goods, either—"

"Oh, I suppose that Lieutenant Hampton is going to marry money!" retorted Angela scornfully.

"No!" thundered Tommy, "but if you don't, you'll soon be short of grease to run that complexion of yours."

She sprang to her feet in a rage.

"Now that was pretty coarse work, Angie, but it's the honest-to-God truth. I didn't start out to be a beast. I was only going to tell you that my ideas oh what was inside our heads and not what we were painted up to look like. I've seen girls ragged, uncombed—yes, as savage as we were—who'd go with us to the gates of hell and kiss us, and cry over us when we came back. And they looked a good deal more like angels to me than you do. Angie, you and I are a century apart. I'm looking for a mate, not a piece of bric-a-brac for a corner whatnot. You won't do, Angie. You're just scenery—"

Clapping her hands over her ears Angela sped up the stairs and Tommy took his hat and left.

She was too angry for words. No one in the world had ever before told her she was utterly useless. In order to revive her self-respect and dry her tears with bits of absorbent cotton, she sat down before her mirror. Then her vitalizing sense of humor came to her rescue.

"So you're scenery, Angie?" she mimicked to her reflection. "Well, he didn't say you weren't interesting scenery—oh, no, but he said a lot!" Gazing at herself intently and after a moment's thought, "No, we'll not deface the scenery—it's all I'm traveling on, just now, but we'll show Mr. Hampton—"

Angela was nobody's fool. There were as many convolutions in the brain inside of her marcelled head as there were waves in her hair. Thoughtfully, preoccupiedly, she went through her closet, took down an old blue linen, put it on; then laid out on the bed a clean white collar and cuff set; put on a big apron and hurried to the phone.

"Yes, dad, I've some extra time on my hands, and if you want to bring out an old friend to dinner we'll set him up a nifty little handout. Any one you bring is all right," she assured her father. Then she repaired to the kitchen and told her mother what she had done, adding: "But it wouldn't be any more trouble to fix for two than one. Let's have Uncle Joab, too." And they called him. He was delighted.

Angela was more to him than merely an only sister's child. She was the charming replica of his mother, long since dead, whom he had idolized. So when Angie got him off by himself and haltingly proposed to rent his farm he chuckled and with a wise little wink he asked:

"Are you the farmer, Angie, or is there a partner in the background?"

"Now, uncle, haven't I been out there enough with you to know a lot about farming? Anyway, no one ever said I couldn't learn." Then, demurely "Of course, I might take on a partner, later. Who knows?"

And the doting uncle agreed that she couldn't do worse than some of the tenants he'd had, and she might try, as the present renter was leaving.

"And," continued Angie, patting his cheek and straightening his tie, "I'll have some first-class advice on tap all the time, for I shall keep one room just for you, and whenever the sidewalks begin to hurt your feet you'll have a place in the country where you can come and hibernate. Oh, we'll have loads of fun, Nunkie, see if we don't."

"But it's a hard life—country life is—for a woman," discouraged her uncle wistfully. "You'll have to part with some of your style and good looks."

"Well, even at that I'll not part with more than some of the girls who are living in flats, half starved, without chick or child—no room for even a pet cat. And those boarding-house women—why I can spot them as far as I can see them. I've thought it all out carefully, Uncle Joab, and I want to try—and you know grandmother lived there and she was the prettiest woman in this country when she died. I knew you'd let me."

When everything was planned and almost ready Angela sent her mother to dress. "Now doll up a bit, mother, for my dad, your old steady, likes it." And she took off the big apron and put on the white collar and cuffs over her blue linen as became the daughter who was to serve.

Dad was more than pleased when Angela led him and his two old guests to talk of the olden times, how they started in life, what the girls did and the hardships of the mothers. The old men were charmed. They resented it when the bell rang and a messenger delivered a note to Angela, who slipped away to her own room to read it.

"Monday evening and lonesome.

"I needn't have been such a beast, Ann. I could have left if I did not like the artificial makeup. But somehow I can't be sorry, for it had to come out some time, sooner or later—guess I've become uncivilized. I'm headed for the up-country and when I get a beginning I'm going to ask some real, grownup, human girl to marry me. She'll not get an angel, as you know. S'pect you'll feel sorry for her. Will leave tomorrow at two." He started to write "love," but crossed it out and signed. "Resp'y, Tom."

After Angela had her cry out she went and washed her face with water, then indited her reply:

"Tuesday,
Busy Day.

"Dear Mr. Hampton—Fine for you! I'm started on just such a career myself. Uncle Joab is going to let me manage his farm next year. I'll have to economize, for it will take lots of grease for complexion and other farm machinery. But I'm figuring to marry later on some competent young man to help run the farm. It will be much cheaper than hiring, but you needn't feel sorry for him, for I'll treat him white when he proves to me that he is a full-size man. And I shall not expect him to tell me how to comb my hair. Resp'y, A. BURTON."

The note was handed to Tom an hour before train time. He read it, grinned appreciatively, then on second reading laughed broadly. He felt that it should be answered at once.

"Dear Ann—Have you any one in view for that place? I might be persuaded to take it. Answer. TOM."

And she did, sending it to the station, where a rather disconsolate and crest-fallen Tommy was wondering whether Ann might relent.

He fairly snatched the note from the hand of the messenger, turned aside from the crowd and read:

"Dear Mr. Hampton:

"No. But I never persuade and pay too. You might bring around your recommendations from your last place, and we'll talk it over. Uncle Joab and I are going out to look over the farm at three. I might add, that I am disposed to give an old soldier preference over other applicants, all other things being equal. Resp'y,

"A. BURTON."

Tom dismissed the messenger, deciding to answer the note in person. He called at a jeweler's on the way and still arrived at Burton's in time to prove that he was qualified to fill the place, and to go with Angela and Uncle Joab out to look over the farm at three.

New York's First Bank.

The first bank in New York city, in point of age, is the Bank of New York in Wall street, which was organized 135 years ago. A number of prominent merchants and citizens met at the Merchants' coffee house and elected officers of the financial institution. Alexander Hamilton was the real founder of the Bank of New York, but Gen. Alexander McDougall was chosen as its first president. Hamilton drew up the constitution of the bank, which had its first headquarters in the Walton mansion. Both Hamilton and Aaron Burr were stockholders, and the former was a director for years. For many years after its organization the Bank of New York, with the Bank of North America in Philadelphia and the Bank of Massachusetts in Boston, held the entire banking capital of the United States. The Bank of New York has occupied its present site since 1798.

Ancient Bell.

At Holywell, North Wales, an ancient bell is preserved, formerly used to call people to church. A walking ringer was employed, who wore a leather strap round his neck, with a large, heavy bell attached to it, which rested on a cushion buckled over his knee. Thus equipped, he paraded the town, jingling his bell to summon the congregation.

Animals Die on Substitutes.

Animals in the zoo in Berlin have died in large numbers recently, principally because the substitutes which they have been given instead of their accustomed food could not be digested sufficiently to sustain life. Among the species in which the mortality has been greatest are the giraffes, mandrills and chimpanzees. The health of the surviving animals is not good.

According to Hamlyn's Menagerie magazine, published in London, the Berlin Zoological society declared that while dates and bananas and other tropical fruits were unprocurable, the apes were fed on a kind of biscuit made of musty flour.

The carnivora manage to live on scraps from the slaughter houses, but the animals requiring grain and seeds are not thriving well on the wild roots given them as substitutes.

Identification Tag.

There has been a good deal of unfavorable comment in the navy on the prescribed method of wearing the identification tag on account of the behavior of the woven wire necklace, which rides up on the neck and inconveniences the wearer in various ways. These features have been overcome at the naval training station San Francisco, by lengthening the wire so as to permit of its being worn bandolier fashion from above the left shoulder to below the right arm, the tag hanging a few inches below the apex of the right axilla. In this way the wire does not ride up nor interfere with the movements of the body.—Army and Navy Register.

Too Dark for a Picture.

A young French lieutenant, on special instruction duty in this country, went to visit one of the universities and was taking some pictures when a colored soldier from the camp nearby, passed directly in front of him. He looked up and to his companion smilingly remarked: "I will wait till the clouds roll by."

JACK DEMPSEY IS ONE OF THE LUCKIEST BOXERS THAT EVER DONNED THE GLOVES

Only Champion to Deman Record Purse While Still at the Heighth of His Career—Bids for Dempsey-Carpentier Fight Still Going up.

The frensied bidding for the Dempsey-Carpentier match indicates that Jack Dempsey, who a year or two ago was travelling arunod the country via the box car and break beam route, soon will be the world's richest pugilist if his luck holds good and he does not meet with untimely defeat.

The price of heavyweight championship fights has increased so fast of late that there is no telling what they will cost the promoters before Dempsey finally is beaten. The latest offer of $250,000 for the Dempsey-Carpentier affair is almost double the record which was set last July 4, when Tex Rickard put up a purse of $127,500 for the Willard-Dempsey match. Before Dempsey and Carpentier are actually signed for battle the purse may have increased to $300,000.

Dempsey certainly is the most fortunate fighter the ring has seen. Previous to the Jeffries Johnson battle in 1910 purses of $20,000 and $30,000, were considered to have reached the limit. In fact they were regarded too high for the good of the sport. Then along came Tex Rickard with his $101,000 bid for the Jeffries-Johnson match. The purse for that battle really was $121,000, for Rickard gave each fighter a bonus of $10,000 for signing articles. This was kept a secret by the promoter, each fighter thinking he was putting some thing over on his opponent.

The next big purse was the $75,000 put up by Rickard for the Willard-Moran bout in the Garden. So far Rickard is the only promoter daring enough to put up as much as $100,000 for a match. This time he has not entered into the bidding as yet, and it is not known whether he will be a factor in the situation. Rickard's three big ventures in the ring sport were all successful financially, but the profits from the Willard-Dempsey bout were hardly large enough to pay him for his time and trouble at stake.

Most Successful Promoter.

If Rickard makes up his mind that he wants the match he probably will land it, for he never has failed to get what he went after. He always has been able to outbid his rivals, finding it easy to frighten away the opposition from rival promoters. If the match is held in America Rickard undoubtedly will be the promoter.

It will not be surprising if the Dempsey Carpentier bout draws $1,000,000. While the Dempsey-Willard bout was something of a disappointment to the promoter, the receipts reached over $500,000, although the fight was held in Toledo. If the orriginal plan to hold the bout in New York had been successful there is not a doubt that it would have drawn $1,000,000. The present match is far more attractive because of its international character and the fact that both men are great favorites with their countrymen.

Dempsey is particularly fortunate in being in line for rich purses right at the outset of his career. Jeffries was all in before he got the chance to fight for 50 per cent of the $121,- purse. Before that Jeff thought he was doing wonderfully well when he drew down as much as $20,000 as his share of a championship battle.

Johnson's One Chance.

Johnson was at the top of his form when he got the chance to cut in on the then record purse, but he never had another chance to draw down big money. After beating Jeffries he set his figures for a bout at $30,000 but he only received that amount on one occasion and that was when he lost his title to Willard at Havana putting an end to his earning capacity.

Willard had few chances to fight for big purses while he held the title. For one thing there were few opponents for him to meet and he lost popularity fast. Willard's affair with Moran drew well because boxing followers were curions to see in action the man who had flattened Jack Johnson. After the bout it was the general opinion that what they saw was not worth the price charged and there was no further demand for Willard to defend his title until it finaly became aparent that he had gone back and was likely to be beaten.

But here is Dempsey, a mere youngster, in the full power of his health and strength and apparently good for at least five years provided he takes proper care of himself. There is no means of estimating how much Dempsey will be able to earn in the next few years if he retains his good form.

If Dempsey beats Carpentier the champion probably will be able to earn at least $50,000 a bout by meeting some of the leading American contenders, such as Fred Fulton and Bill Brennan. With purses up so high Dempsey will be able to make more money by fighting than out of the show business, and if he is wise he will stick to the ring and not allow himself to grow rusty for lack of action. Dempsey is a man who needs plenty of fighting to keep him fit, and if he deserts the ring for the stage or circus he will make a fatal mistake.

"Smile when you can" says a poet. That's all right; but why didn't he confer an everlasting favor on humanity by telling us how to smile when we can't.

FANS DEMAND INVESTIGATION

AUGUST HERRMAN DOES NOT BELIEVE IT IS NECESSARY.

August Herrmann, chairman of the National Baseball Commission and president of the Cincinnati Reds, who are world's champions, is inclined to ignore the widely circulated charges that there was collusion between professional gamblers and certain members of the Chicago White Sox during the late series with Pat Moran's team. Herrmann declares that so far proof of these charges is lacking, but he adds that if real evidence of an incrimminating nature should materialize he as chairman of the commission, will act quickly.

Herrmann also was quoted as saying that if he remained at the head of baseball's supreme court he would undertake to stamp out the gambling evil, which first took the form of small fry betting in major league parks. Herrmann stated that he would make it his business to drive the betting element out of every ball park in the big circuits, beginning with his own. He was further quoted in this mbanner:

"As to the stories that the results of certain games in the last world's series were framed up by gamblers and dishonest players, I cannot believe that they are based upon truth. Some of the statements made by a well known baseball writer already have been shown up as mistakes and exaggerations.

"The charges which appeared in print immediately after the series ended have been thoroughly investigated, but no evidence that could convict anybody has been produced. In my opinion, these ugly stories have been concocted for the purpose of detracting from the splendid victory of the Cincinnati Reds."

Regardless of Herrmann's personal opinion and that of other baseball leaders, the fans still demand a public hearing of the charges. The Chicago players involved are entitled to a fair opportunity to clear themselves. Owner Comiskey of the White Sox, like Herrmann, has been unable to discover proof of colusion, so he says but he is willing to have the entire mess probed to the bottom. It would be a difficult task to force gamblers and their confederates to admit anything, but a public investigation might throw some new light on the situation and also might satisfy the baseball public.

Value of Criticism.

Criticism, as everyone should know, is not an exact science. The proof is to be found in a comparison of newspaper criticisms on any one musical performance. It is merely a matter of personal opinion. Its value to the reader depends upon one's faith in the integrity of the critic and the medium which presents the criticism.

If the critic writes favorably about the things we personally like we are inclined to view him as a constructive agent whose perspicacity, musical knowledge and rigid sense of justice are a credit to his publication. Destructive criticism, by the same token, is that which does not concur with our own opinions. It accordingly discloses bias, lack of musical knowledge, narrowness of vision and viciousness of purpose.

Sheep and Wool for Japan.

It is interesting to note that after a thorough investigation in this country regarding the plan of campaign for more sheep and more wool by I. a Tanimura, commissioner of live stock for Japan, that it is the purpose of the leading Japanese live stock men to create a bureau, consisting of seven expert wool men, together with a score of assistants and secretaries. The plan of action outlined will require ten years to work out, but it is the intention to make Japan self-supporting as far as the country's wool requirements are concerned.

SCRAPPING OLD SHIPS

VESSELS OF THE GREAT WAR ALREADY OBSOLETE.

Lord Fisher, the Veteran British Naval Stratgeist, Indicates the Line of Action of Those Who Are Responsible for the Naval Policy of the Country.

ADMIRAL OF THE FLEET LORD FISHER, the veteran British naval strategist, in the couplet:

"Build few and build fast.
Each one better than the last."

indicates what he believes should be the line of action of those who are responsible for the naval policy of the country. The removal of the great German menace no longer obliges us to maintain big naval establishments. This is admitted by every one, but Lord Fisher would expediate the change from war to peace by a ruthless scrapping of material and reduction of personnel. Hand in hand with this program of economy, this wholesale abandonment of surplus units and vigorous prevention of waste, Lord Fisher would get busy fashioning the material of the fleet of the future.

Before naval administrators in every country there is an era of investigation and examination. The signs are clearly that the development and progress of scientific appliances of one sort and another have more or less rendered the material used in the sea fighting of the late war obsolete and inefficient.

It is no time, then, to continue building vessels of existing types, stereotyping error and obsolete design. The need is for careful and constant test and trial, so that the fullest advantage may be taken of the great advances in appliances and methods made during the war, and of the new engines and other products of science and chemistry which only await application to naval needs. This is the advice which the great British sailor gives to his countrymen and in his picturesque and terse manner sums up in the epigram "Sack the lot!"

Much of what Lord Fisher writes must be read in the light of parables, but he is far from being alone in his views. There are signs, indeed, that his advice is already being taken. In England, not only have all contracts for new ships which were not far advanced been cancelled but on all new construction for the navy work is at a standstill.

Certain vessels, like the huge aircraft carrier Hermes, launched at the Armstrong yard, Elswick, have been proceeded with up to this stage, but only to make room on the slips for new merchant tonnage.

As regards the fleet in commission the reduction of the home fleet under Vice-Admiral Oliver to a reserve basis on October 1 means that the number of battleships in full commission in what was formerly the grand fleet is ten, the battle cruisers, three (including the Renown), the light cruisers twelve, the destroyers 72, and the submarines 21.

It is interesting to recall that the peace strength of the fleet, in fully-manned vessels only, in 1914 was twenty-eight battleships, five battle-cruisers, eight armored cruisers, twelve light cruisers, seventy-five destroyers, and fifty submarines. This was apart from the numbers maintained in commission with nucleus crews.

As regards the Allied and Associated Powers in the late war, the indications are that they also, in addition to reducing their existing naval establishments, are making a pause in new construction. The building of the American battle-cruisers has been held up ever since Mr. Daniels paid his visit to Europe in the spring. In France, it is noticed that the five battleships authorised in 1913-14, and work on which was stopped in 1915, are to be abandoned.

These vessels — the Fandre, Gascogne, Languedoc, Normandie and Bearn—were to be 25,000-ton ships, of twenty-one knots, carrying twelve 13.4-inch guns in three quadruple turrets, and of course coal driven. Although splendid fighting units, they would have been outclassed by the twenty-five knot, 15-inch gun ships, burning oil fuel only, which were commissioned during the war, and it would have been doubly wasteful to spend any more money on them.

Similarly, in Japan, the feeling of the moment is distinctly towards retrenchment. As Admiral Kato, the Minister of Marine, stated during his recent visit to England, the great problem for all of the nations now is to economize, and in Japan the people would like to see a general agreement for disarmament.

While there are no plans yet for a reduction of the Japanese navy or army, her leaders are waiting to see what is done in this respect by the other great powers, but Admiral Kato suggests that the desire for reductions is unanimous.

In the present position of watchful waiting no leading authority except Lord Fisher has been bold enough to forecast, even approximately, the lines of future development. He believes that aircraft are now making such prodigious developments that the only escape for vessels on the surface of the ocean from their attack will be to go under water.

This is ony possible if the internal combustion engine is sufficiently developed to be used for battleship propulsion. He therefore advocates that the hearts of our naval administrators should be "filled with the internal combustion engine and war hippopotami."

How long it will be before this engine has ousted the steam turbine, and oil has entirely displaced coal, Lord Fisher does not attempt to suggest, but that he clearly foresees these changes is manifest.

Shylock, Alias Bumble.

Confessing to 82 summers, a poor old chap at Islington, England, complains bitterly of the harsh operation of the law. Last winter while, as he tells us, he was "prostrate with bronchitis," a relative died, leaving him a legacy of £40. Coming when it did, the money was a godsend, and, as the old man was unable to get about, it was paid into the Post Office Savings Bank in the name of his wife. However, the poor old lady's turn was soon to come, and early this year she died in the infirmary. On making application for the withdrawal of the balance of the deposit, a matter of £27, the husband was informed that—although, as could be proved, the little legacy had been his—it had, technically, become the property of his wife and could not legally be paid out until it was known what claim, if any, the Islington Guardians might prefer in respect of the dead woman's maintenance. In due course the Guardians presented their bill, £23 8s. 1d., for treatment, and as the board, in spite of the old man's pathetic protest, refused to moderate their demands, the Post Office, exercising their legal authority, settled the account, leaving only £4 of the precious windfall to comfort the poor old fellow's desolate need. It was just one of those cases in which a little sympathy might have mitigated the harsh operation of the law, while yet satisfying the essential claims of justice, but Postal and Poor Law officials are too often strangers to such considerations. Shylock, alias "Bumble," must have his pound of flesh, and if the knife needs sharpening trust the G.P.O.!

When the King Is Ill.

The British law retains some peculiar provisions with reference to the "illness of the King." These provisions are mere survivals in the present settled order of government, but there was a time when the King's incapacity afforded opportunity to assassins without risk of detection. Accordingly, certain wise precautions were matters of law.

In his "Institutes" the great legal commentator, Coke says:—"If the King be taken sick there ought to be a warrant issue from the Privy Council, addressed to certain physicians and surgeons, authorizing them to administer to the royal patient potiones, cyrupes, laxatavas, medicinas, etc., still, none of these should be given except by consent and advice of the council, and they ought to set down in writing everything done and administered, and they should compound all drugs themselves and not intrust their preparation to any apothecary.

A Jacob Rather Than an Esau.

Apropos of Fiume, Carnet de la Semaine recalls a little incident of d'Annunzio's youth. It was in 1880, in which year he published his first verses in the Cronache Bizantine, in Rome. He had long hair in those days, wore wide cravats, and exhibited other characteristics which time has apparently emphasized rather than softened. One day in the Cafe Aragno, presiding at a gathering of his friends, d'Annunzio expressed a regret that he had not entered the church. "I have made a hash of my life," he said, although he was then only twenty; "I ought to have become a priest; I should have become pope, and then I should have revolutionized the world." There was silence in the face of such self-assurance. And the Carnet adds, "D'Annunzio may have parted with his hair, but he still has cheek."—Christian Science Monitor.

Hobson's Choice.

One afternoon a noncommissioned officer found and awoke two stragglers behind the American lines in France. They had visibly a bottle of champagne.

"Where did you get that champagne?" asked the officer (with motives beyond question).

"Well," explained the smaller of the pair, "we hadn't had anything to eat but iron rations for five days, and not much of that, then we lost our outfit, and when we landed here we started out to buy something. The only thing for sale in the whole town was a bottle of champagne, so we bought that."

CURING LYMPHANGITIS

The "Monday Morning Disease" Affecting Horses.

Symptoms Described, and a Course of Treatment Suggested for Alleviating and Curing the Trouble—Working Over Asparagus and Rhubarb Beds.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

LYMPHANGITIS, commonly called weed, a shot of grease or Monday morning disease, is a common ailment in horses. Some horses are predisposed to the trouble and suffer after being exposed to slight exciting causes.

It occurs in horses that are accustomed to regular work and high feeding, when such are given a rest for a day or longer and in the meantime receive their regular ration of grain, hence the name "Monday morning disease," it frequently being noticed on Monday morning in work horses that have stood idle and been well fed since the Saturday even preceeding.

It consists in inflammation of the lymphat glands, usually those of the hind limb or limbs, but it is not uncommon for the fore limbs to be the seat.

Symptoms.—The first symptoms usually are rigors (shivering) followed by well marked increase of temperature; but as those symptoms usually occur at night they are not often noticed. The first symptoms usually noticed are well marked soreness and lameness, usually of a hind limb. From reasons not understood the right hand limb is more frequently involved than the near one. Pressure upon the inner surface of the limb from the sheath or mammal downwards reveals well marked soreness, and at first a beaded condition to the touch. If a fore leg is the seat this condition will exist on the inner surface of the fore arm. There is usually well marked increase in temperature, a full, rapid pulse and often more or less well marked labored breathing. Appetite more or less impaired, and in some cases colicky pains are noticed. The swelling of the parts usually increase rapidly and the beaded condition disappears, and there is usually a decrease in soreness and lameness. Exercise reduces the swelling and lameness, but they reappear during the night; and as each time this occurs there is a tendency to organization of some of the exudate which may result in a chronic big leg, hence it is not wise to exercise or work until the acute lameness has disappeared.

Treatment.—If colicky pains be well marked, give a colic drench, as one oz. each of laudanum, sweet spirits of nitre and tincture of belladonna in a pint of water. Follow up with a brisk purgative of 7 to 10 drams aloes (according to size of patient) and two drams ginger. Give the purgative at first if colicky pains are not well marked. Follow up with four drams nitrate of potassum twice daily for two days. Keep the patient in comfortable stall excluded from drafts and bathe the affected leg frequently with hot water and after bathing rub well with a stimulant linament, as one made of 2 oz. oil of turpentine, 1 oz. tincture of iodine ½ oz. gum camphor, 6 oz. alcohol, and water to make a pint. Feed bran only until purgation commences, then feed reasonable quantities of hay, but no grain. Continue treatment until the acute soreness and lameness have passed, then give regular work or exercise. The swelling will reappear at night for a few days. Prevention consists in either materially reducing the grain ration on days that the horse is not working, or seeing that he gets exercise in some way.

Repeated attacks usually result in a chronic big leg, called elephantites which is incurable.—J. H. R., Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Columbus' Name Perpetuated.

Cristobal-Colon, the joint city of Colon in the republic of Panama, and Cristobal in the canal zone, is the Spanish name for Christopher Columbus, the first man who sought an all water route across the isthmus, in his quest for a new path to Asia. But history shows that Columbus never bore that name while living. He was born of a family known as "Colombo" and when he entered the Spanish service he changed his name to "Cristobal Colon," yet we insist on calling him "Columbus." The Panaman and American cities of Colon and Cristobal, situated at the Atlantic entrance to the Panama canal, are so named in recognition of the great explorer, and a massive bronze statue representing Columbus presenting before the court of Spain one of the native Indians of the new land he had discovered was erected many years ago on the sea front of Cristobal-Colon, and still stands as a monument to the memory of one of the world's most intrepid explorers.

Working Over Asparagus and Rhubarb Beds.

The handling of asparagus and rhubarb beds in the spring of the year is largely dependent on the situation of them and the time that the owner has at his disposal both in the fall and spring.

Where properly handled the asparagus beds in the fall of the year should have had all tops removed and burned and the soil ploughed over the top of the row so that a furrow would be left to remove the water.

In the spring of the year the asparagus bed, if ploughed in the fall, should be ploughed back and then given a thorough disking so that the soil would warm up quickly, especially around the crown of the plant. After this cultivation should be practiced until the 1st of July when cutting should cease and the bed receive a heavy coating of good manure and a considerable quantity of commercial fertilizer.

Rhubarb beds in the fall of the year should be manured heavily with well-rotted manure after the tops have been removed.

Rhubarb beds in the spring of the year are generally given a cultivation and much of the rougher manure carried from the roots of the plants and the crown. This permits the warming up of the soil and consequent early growth.—A. H. McLennan, Vegetable Specialist.

Clover Seed and Hay Crop.

A crop of seed and of hay can be made from the second crop of clover just as well as only one crop, according to the experience of a Pennsylvania farmer. In his practice the crop is cut when most of the heads are filled and brown. It is then cured in the usual way for hay and when good and dry the hullers will get out all the seed as well as if the stalks were dead and weatherbeaten. The resulting hay, while not of the best quality, is very good and the cattle will eat it even to the last bit.

Vicar in Bankruptcy Court.

Rev. Joseph B. Meredith, of Rubberholme, England, has been forced into bankruptcy. He said he had been in Burma nearly nine years as a chaplain at $65 per month. On returning to England fourteen years ago his assets were $250. He held various curacies at stipends of $600 to $800 per year, eventually becoming vicar of Rubberholme at $1,000.

After getting furniture on the instalment plan he resorted to money lenders and also lost money on a house purchased by instalments. In five years he had made himself liable for $2,600 in interest. He had four children living away from home. His wife had been out sick nursing, and was now a waitress in London. To keep the pot boiling he had sold his furniture, and the vicarage was practically bare of furniture. The estimated deficiency was $4,300.

The official receiver at the conclusion of his examination said, "If the Established Church and other denominations do not see that their clergy are better paid, if Christianity does not compel them to do it, then humanity ought. We should not have people of education faced with such a horrible alternative."

Generous Citizen Also Entertained Shelter's Inmates in His Own Home at Dinner

A Christmas Tree entertainment was given to the little ones of the Children's Aid Shelter by the Children's Aid Society, last night.

There was a good program rendered by the children, assisted by Miss Ingall, Miss M. Harvey and the Superintendent. Mrs. Read. Mr. Walter Batley made an admirable Santa Claus.

The Society wish to take this opportunity of thanking Miss Ingall, Miss Harvey, Mrs. Read and Mr. Batley for the interest taken in making the evening a success. Also the Society wish to thank the public for the generous and wholehearted way in which they responded to the call to help these little ones.

OBITUARY

DENIS COUGHLIN

Death came with startling suddenness to Denis Coughlin of this city, yesterday afternoon. It appears Mr. Coughlin rose on Christmas morning in his usual good health, attending High Mass at St. Peter's Cathedral, and in the afternoon went out for a walk returning to his boarding house shortly after five. While talking to one of his fellow boaders, Mr. Coughlin suddenly fell forward and expired. Drs. McNulty, Hayes and Marshall were hurriedly called but were unable to do anything. Heart failure was given as the cause.

Deceased was born in Belleville 68 years ago, and for the past twenty years had been employed by the Coughlin Monumental Works. He leaves three brothers, John of Peterborough, Michael and Timothy of Toronto.

The funeral will take place at nine o'clock, on Saturday morning, from the residence of his brother, John Coughlin, 466 Rubidge street, to St. Peter's Cathedral and from there to St. Peter's Cemetery for interment.

H. Oliver was elected president of the St. Thomas Musicians' Association.

Community Christmas tree celebrations were held in Kitchener and in Belleville.

To The Ratepayers of the City of Peterborough

I am offering myself as a candidate for Alderman, as I believe that this City will be benefitted with my many years of experience as a member of the City Council and as City Solicitor. I had intended to develop my time to my business affairs, but as there are few men of many years experience in municipal affairs in the City Council, I felt that I could be a help in the City's Government on account of the large undertakings and important projects which must be dealt with by the Council within the next two years.

To develop this City we must have new industries, and I have given much of my time in the past years while in the City Council, to this particular part of municipal affairs.

If elected, I will make every effort to improve this City as a great industrial centre.

The support of those who believe that I shall be able to give faithful service, is respectfully requested.

Yours faithfully,

G. N. GORDON

BOLSHEVIKI FORCES THREATEN TO CUT OFF RETREAT OF ALL-RUSSIAN ARMIES

Admiral Kolchak Faces Critical Situation—Irkutsk, Seat of Kalchak's Siberian Government is Centre of Another Rebellion—Insurrection also In the Amur River Valley—Blago-Vestchensk Isolated From Outside World.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Rec. 27.—Revolutionary Socialists have formed a Committee Government in Irkutsk, Sibreria, where the all-Russian Government of Admiral Kolchak established its headquarters after being driven from Omsk, according to news received in French oficial circles today.

The Revolutionists took possession of Irkutsk station, on the Trans-Siberian Railway, the reports state.

Form New Ministry.

Paris, Dec. 27.—Premier Popeliaeff, of the Kolchak Government is absent from Irkutsk, being on his way to meet Admiral Kolchak for the formation of a new ministry. Foreign Minister Tretickoff also left recently to meet general Semenoff, thte Cossack leader.

Another Insurrection.

Taking advantage of the absence of the principal members of the Government, Socialists, according to advices, organised an insurrection and it is considered doubtful here whether Admiral Kolchak will find anything left of his Government when he finally gets to Irkutsk. His present whereabouts is not definitely known.

Bolshevik Victorious.

London, Dec. 27.—Admiral Kolchak, head of the All-Russian Government in Siberia, apparently faces a critical situation, according to Moscow advices. Bolshevik forces, advancing eastward along the trans-Siberian Railroad from Omsk, the former capital of the All-Russian Regime, are said to have captured Tomsk and Triga, and to have occupied a number of smaller towns in that region.

Admiral Kolchak and his cabinet left Tomsk recently, retiring to the east, but reports received here indicate the retreat of the All-Russian armies may be cut-off as a result of Social Revolutionary elements, which have set up new Government at Chermekov, about eighty miles northwest of Irkutsk. Further east another centre of rebellion has developed in the Amur River Valley, Blaegovestchensk being isolated from the outside world, according to despatches.

CONTRADICTIONS CONTINUE TO COMPLICATE CONSPIRACY CASE

Bowler Suffers From a Third Attack of Epilepsy and is Unable to Return to Stand—Children of Defendant Declare Father Was at Home During Signing of Bill of Sale.

After the noon adjournment yesterday in the case of Bowler v. Redman and Vass, the plaintiff, Timothy Bowler, strengthened by stimulants, entered the witness box to be further examined by Mr. R. R. Hall.

He told of the incident when he, accompanied by Mrs. Redman and Vass, had gone to Mr. O'Brien's office and drawn up the bill of sale. He was not perfectly clear in his statements, but swore that Vass had urged him to sell the car and transfer the bank account.

Witness swore that, although he he had not claimed the car on his return, Vass had promised to have the delapidated car repaired. He understood at that time that the car would be returned to him.

Witness by this time had been in the witness box for over half an hour, and at the commencement of Mr. Hatton's examination he fainted away for the third time during the trial and the second time during the day. He was taken to the Judge's rom and placed under the care of Dr. Young.

Defence Begins.

Then Albert Vass, the male defendant, entered the witness box and swore that he never told Bowler he would have the car fixed up. Bowler had never mentioned the car to him, and he had never mentioned it to Bowler since the latter's return from overseas.

"What did you ever say to plaintiff that would lead him to entrust his money and car to Mrs. Redman?"

"I never said anything to him about it. I did not know he had any money until after Mrs. Redman had it."

"Did you ever say anything to Mrs. Redman about getting Bowler's money before he went overseas, as Elder Dummitt said this morning?"

"I never had any such conversation".

Then Mr. Gordon opened fire for his cross-examination by asking the witness if he knew that property could be sold to another person without a bill of sale.

"I don't know," replied the witness.

"Did you ever sell horses, wagons, and other property?"

"Yes."

"Did you ever have a bill of sale in connection with any of these?"

"No; I got receipts."

"Well, then, was a bill of sale necessary for the transfer of property?"

"I don't know."

"Didn't you try to arrange a plan by which you could have Bowler caught tight?"

"No, it was nothing of that kind."

"Is it true that you and Mrs. Redman were in the habit of going out driving alone together, as Mrs. Blodgett has stated?"

"I sold the horse Mrs. Blodgett referred to, three years ago, and at that time I had a car, and Mr. Gillespie had the horse on a milk rig."

"Do you mean to say that the citizens of this city have not seen you and Mrs. Redman drivng alone together?"

"They may have."

Subject to Epilepsy.

Dr. Young, who had been attending tne plaintiff, gave evidence to the effect hat Bowler was suffering from an attack of epilepsy. He had apparently, according to his own statements, been suffering from attacks of that kind from childhood

"What would you say as to such a person's intelligence?"

"It is an understood fact that an epileptic patient is not as intellignet as an ordinary individual."

"Would his war service make his trouble any more pronounced?"

"It undoubtedly would."

Then Mrs. Edith Redman gave evidence, declaring that at the time she was working for Dummitt she did not know of Bowler, therefore the alleged conversation between her and Vass concerning him could never have taken place.

"What influence did you use over Bowler to induce him to give you his car and his money?"

"I had no influence over Bowler," declared Mrs. Redman.

"In what year was your child born?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"I don't remember, but it was 12 or 13 years ago."

Then Mr. Hatton and Mr. Hall were on their feet objecting to this as not being in any way relevant to the case.

Mr. Gordon explained that Mr. Hall's conjecture that he was "throwing dirt on the case" was rather undignified for such a courteous gentleman, was not correct. He was just trying to determine the extent of the truth of the witness, who had sworn that her child was 12 or 13 years of age, when he had the birth certificate showing the child was registered as Madeline Heard in 1903.

"Insinuations of a damaging character are being made without charges being made and a chance for defence given," declared Mr. Hall.

"We are quite prepared to lay the

LUCKY ESCAPE FROM GOING OVER FALLS

AIRMAN WITH DEAD MOTOR LANDED IN NIAGARA RIVER.

New York, Dec. 27.—The thrilling experience of Talbot J. Wilcox, former captain Royal Air Force, who barely escaped being swept over Niagara Falls in a hydroplane with a dead motor and was saved his machine by chance stranded on the Goat Island, was revealed yesterday by Major Sidney F. Parker at the American Flying Club. He received a letter from Wilcox giving details of the near-tragedy. The two aviators recently completed a flying trip of 13,000 miles together.

Wilcox was giving a flying exhibition when a new engine failed to function properly and he landed in the river. Unable to start the motor, he floated rapidly down stream toward the edge of the falls. As the long plunge seemed inevitable the flying boat lodged in a safe cove off Goat Island.

FAST IN ICE ON ST. LAWRENCE RIVER

STEAMER SPINNER WITH BROKEN RUDDER IS IN DESPERATE CONDITION.

Quebec, Dec. 27.—With the icepack on the St. Lawrence the worst it is said, in the history of the river the efforts to rescue the stranded Canadian Merchant Marine steamer Spinner are none too bright. The Spinner is almost helpless, surrounded as she is by ice, with her coal supply short and her rudder post broken. She has been battling with the ice for a week, and so far all efforts to reach her have failed.

Both Wednesday and Thursday, the Canadian Government ice cutter Lady Grey put out from Quebec harbor in an attempt to reach the Spinner and break a lane for her out of the ice. Efforts were unsuccessful however, and the Lady Grey is back in Quebec harbor and will make more attempts to reach the drifting steamer.

It is understood that the management of the Canadian National Railways, under whose control the vessels of the Canadian Merchant Marine have been put, is now negotiating for the sending of a vessel from Newfoundland up the Gulf and the Lower River to help the Spinner.

A regular sealer would be about the best ship available under the present conditions of the ice, and it is intended that this sealer leaving Newfoundland without delay, should proceed up the Gulf and try to reach the Canadian Spinner somewhere off Fame Point.

The Lady Grey will attempt to reach the stranded Canadian Recruit and bring back the crew, which has been unable to leave Tadousac since the vessel drifted ashore. Instructions have been wired the captains of three other vessels of the Canadian Merchant Marine at Quebec to cancel their proposed sailings and winter at their present port, as the ice conditions are too dangerous.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

41 DEATHS DUE TO WOOD ALCOHOL

MANY OTHER VICTIMS HAVE BEEN STRICKEN WITH BLINDNESS.

PUBLIC WARNED OF DANGER

MANUFACTURE OF SO-CALLED WHISKEY TRACED TO NEW YORK CITY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 27.—Federal Agents, health authorities and the police, in many cities in the East were stirred into action to-day against traffic in whiskey made from wood alcohol, following the wave of deaths and blindness from this cause in Massachusetts, and Connecticut. The death list of victims of Christmas cheer in these states totalled more than forty-one early to-day. Officials declared it possible that unreported cases by the score extended from coast to coast.

Warning is General.

A general warning has been issued here by agencies co-operating in the fight, telling the public of the danger lurking in anything that passes for whiskey in saloons.

Arrests were expected in New York today in connection with deaths in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

Charged With Murder.

Four men are under arrest in Hartford, charged with murder. The police allege that they bought a dozen barrels in Bronx for twelve thousand dollars, which they took to Hartford by motor, where water was added. Then it was sold according to the police in other cities. Department of Justice agents announce that they have traced the whiskey to New York, where they say it was made.

CHRISTMAS WEEK MARKETS ACTIVE

FINISHED PRODUCTS NOTABLY STEEL AND IRON IN MUCH DEMAND.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 27.— Christmas week in the securities market derived much of its ocasional activity and strength from the proclamation of President Wilson, directing the return of railroads on March next. The railroad situation remains under a cloud, however, because of divergence of views shown in the transportation bills adopted by the two branches of Congress.

Trading otherwise was influenced to a considerable degree by wide fluctuations in all money, due primarily to the deficit in local bank reserves, and that lack of public interest, which generally marks the year end period. In its broader or international phases, the market was restrained by further delay in formulating of the project to establish foreign credits.

Exchange on London lost some of its recent improvement and Paris and Italian rates reacted in sympathy. Advices from many centres industry pointed more strongly to an extraordinary revival of activity in many lines of finished products, notably steel and iron, while copper and other base metals were in greater demand.

WORK ON BRIDGE NOT BE RESUMED

MR. BARBER WILL NOT SANCTION WALL ON SOUTH SIDE BEING POURED

The 1919 Board of Works are anxious to have the six days' work on the east side of the river on the Hunter Street bridge finished immediately.

At their meeting last night Mr. Barber was phoned and told the Board that he would not sanction this work to be done at the present. At the time of the January thaw the arches may be set, he explains, and the wooden wedges removed. Then the piece of wall above the arch can be poured with no danger to the arch.

It was pointed out to him that the same wall on the north side was poured in the same way as they wish this one to be done. Mr. Barber takes the responsibility for this but states some cutting and scraping will be necessary on that side. He would not sanction the work on the south side of the bridge to be resumed. He said by utilizing the January thaw no time would be lost and no extra expense.

HUGE AMOUNT OF WHEAT EXPORTED

UP TO NOV. 30 FORTY MILLION BUSHELS SENT ABROAD.

VALUED AT $110,000,000

SALE OF GRAIN ENTIRELY IN HANDS OF WHEAT BOARD.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 27. — About two-thirds of the exportable surplus of the Canadian wheat crop has already been sold and exported through the medium of the Canadian Wheat Board, the sole purchasing agency of the Government. The total is variously calculated from seventy-five to a hundred million bushels, the quantity in the hands of the farmers not being known exactly. A fair proportion of the supply has been moving to the United States since the embargo was lifted.

Primary consideration, however, is the need of Canadian millers for wheat for milling, not only of flour but also on by-products needed in stock raising.

Must Be Sold By Board

Whether wheat has already been contracted for or is still in hands of farmers, that part intended for export must be sold by the Wheat Board. Up to November 30, over forty million bushels, valued at more than a hundred and ten million dollars, has been sent abroad.

QUEBEC FARMERS WILL ORGANIZE

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—The first serious attempt to organize the farmers on this side of Quebec Province has been set for Monday, when a meeting of the United Farmers of Quebec is called at Kazabazue, when officers are to be elected, a constitution adopted and a platform laid down for the guidance of the United Farmers. The announcements state that the organizers of the Quebec movement are encouraged by the success of the Ontario Farmers' Party, and they think the time has come when the farmers of Quebec should organize a Farmers' Government. Premier Drury of Ontario may address the meeting. Every farmer in Hull and Wright counties has been urged to attend.

FORMER GERMAN CROWN PRINCE WILL BE CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL OFFENCES

French Demand Frederick William's Surrender for Trial—Crimes Alleged Include Looting and Robbery with Violence—No Decision Regarding Ex-Kaiser—Premier Nitte and Allied Premiers to Meet on Italian Question.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Dec. 27,—Frederick William, former German Crown Prince, will be included in the list of persons whose surrender for trial is demanded by the French, according to unofficial reports of a recent meeting between British law officers and Edouard Ignace, French Under Secretary for Military Justice.

Classed as Criminal.

The Ex-Crown Prince, it is said will be charged with criminal offences, including looting and robbery with violence, committed in France.

There appears to have been no further decision reached at the conference with regard to the case of former Emperor William. It was stated that a full list of men whose surrender will be demanded has been completed.

AID FOR ITALY.

Rome, Dec. 27,—Premier Nitti will go to London from Rome, and from there will return to Paris to attend a meeting of Allied premiers and Foreign ministers, which is expected to begin next week, according to the Corriere D'Italia.

Backed By England.

It is stated that the premier believes he will come to an understanding with the British premier on problems closely affecting Italy. The newspaper says that Signor Nitti hopes to obtain from England financial treatment similar to that granted France.

Sovereignty Over Fiume.

Premier Nitti will do his best to have the Supreme Council agree that Allied and associated Governments will recognize Italy's sovereignty over Italian towns. First of all, Fiume, and that they will accept the result of negotiations between Italy and Jugo-Slavia.

LABOR MEN WILL FIGHT WITH FORCE AND VIGOR TO FREE LEADER RUSSELL

Facing a Long Term in Penitentiary, Convicted Strike Agitator in Cheerful Mood

Winipeg, Dec. 26.— R. B. Russell, the convicted strike leader, who will be sentenced on Saturday, did not leave his home Christmas Day. Facing a penitentiary term Saturday morning, he desired to be with his wife and two little ones as long as he is at liberty. But he has not been alone; dozens of labor union men called at the house on Thursday and chatted with him a few minutes. He was told by them that the fight to free him would be continued with force and vigor, backed up by plenty of money, until victory was gained. Murray, one of his counsel, also called on him and expressed similar feelings.

Called up over the telephone yesterday. Russell appeard to be in cheerful spirits, but he would not express any opinion on the trial or future action. "I am feeling fit and able to endure all punishment; I have been greatly strengthened in my decision by the counsel of my friends."

Music and peals of laughter from children were heard over the telephone from within the Russell home. It is stated, however, that Mrs. Russell is in poor health. Russell appears indifferent to his fate, labor men stated today.

FOCH DECLINES OFFER.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Dec. 27,—Marshal Foch has informed the Republican Committee of Finistere that he will decline the offer of candidacy to the senate which was recently offered to him according to the Matin.

BOARD OF HEALTH REFUSE TO SANCTION THE IMHOFF TANK FOR SEWAGE DISPOSAL

Provincial Sanitary Engineer Insisted on Activated Sludge Being Used—Still in Experimental Stage Says City Engineer Parsons.

The City Council are finding that they can not run their own affairs in connection with the Sewage Disposal Plant. First, the townships, by an injunction, are forcing them to build the plant and are continually pressing for the work to commence and now the Provincial Board of Health will not sanction the Imloff tanks, the kind the city desire to install on account of both economy and efficiency.

City Solicitor Widdifield, City Engineer Parsons and Ald Phelan chairman of the Board of Works were in Toronto on December 19 and kept their appointment with the Provincial Board of Health. They presented their plans which were declared proper for that kind of plant but the Provincial Sanitary Engineer refuses to sanction any kind but the activated sludge.

City Engineer Parsons does not favor the activated sludge because he states, it is yet in an experimental stage. The liquid part of the sewage is cared for, he says, but as yet there is no method for disposing of the other 2 per cent.

The Imloff tanks on the other hand are being used successfully in several places in Canada. The refuse from this tank can be sold as a fertilizer and some revenue derived from this. And the activated sludge is much more delicate and needs trained mechanics to attend to it all the time.

The chief argument in favor of the activated sludge is that it removes the bacteria to the extent required by the International Waterway Commission, whose principles the Provincial Board of Health are endeavoring to carry out.

The matter stands that a deputation must go before the Muncipal and Railway Board on Monday and present their plans, approved by the Board of Health. Mr. Parsons and Mr. Widdifield both argue that Sanitary Engineer Dallin will not approve of the Imloff tanks and the Board of Health will take Dallin's decision as final and the Railway and Municipal Board will not discuss the kind of plant leaving that to the Provincial Board of Health.

"It looks like an activated sludge," remarked one alderman and the other agreed that the Provincial Sanitary Engineer was master of the situation and they must accept his views, even though they do not wish to.

The deputation on Monday will endeavor to make arrangements for the Imloff tanks, but should this be impossible, plans will be drawn up for the activated sludge.

SATURDAY, DECEMBER 27, 1919.

MRS. MORRIS FOR THE SCHOOL BOARD.

SOME OF THE RESIDENTS of Peterborough appear to be under the impression that this city is introducing an innovation by putting up a woman as a candidate for membership on the School Board. Nothing of the kind. Such cases date back so many years that the only wonder is that a progressive, modern city should not have had such representation on the educational parliament long before this, instead of being engaged in the second attempt to bring about such a reform.

The women of Ontario now hold the Provincial franchise on the same terms as men. They are eligible not only for members of Boards of Education, with certain property qualifications, and for seats in the Legislature as well. For years they were qualified to sit on School Boards, and in other places advantage was taken of this privilege. The experiment has been made in the larger cities and has been satisfactory. Peterborough need not hesitate to adopt this policy of progress.

Some of the most useful members of the Toronto School Board are women. They have been elected and re-elected, having shown themselves possessed of the necessary business qualifications as well as academic interest in their duties. London, Ontario, one year ago, elected four women to its School Board. In the Western Provinces women are being sent to the Legislature. Many States in the American Union, too, are taking the same stand, and one woman a few years ago was elected to the United States Congress. She was defeated at the last election, but that was on account of her political affiliation rather than because of her sex.

Lady Astor has been sent to the British House of Commons, the most august legislative body in the world, equal in dignity and importance to our own School Board or even the Peterborough City Council. None of the veteran statesmen at Westminster, so far as heard from, has threatened to retire to private life rather than assume administrative associations with a woman.

The majority of the teachers in the city are women, and theirs is the most important work in the schools, dealing as they do with the susceptible younger children when they come from the homes. These teachers really carry on the task of the mothers and they should have a mother's aid and sympathy in their public duties. The women teachers justly complain that their services are not adequately recompensed. They need hope for no change in this regard until they have one of their own number with a voice in setting the teachers' compensation.

If Mrs. Morris, who is an ex-teacher herself, is elected next week, her membership on the Board will give her the right to visit the schools and officially inspect their workings. In that capacity she can address the girl pupils dealing with topics that no male members of the Board could take up before such an audience. This fact is one of the best possible arguments that can be advanced in favor of her election.

THE "MOVIES"—PRO AND CON.

IT IS DOUBTFUL if any innovation of modern days has gained such tremendous headway in such a brief span of time as has the moving picture. When we consider the enormous amount of capital invested, the fortunes already made, the number of persons to whom they have given amusement that is on the whole wholesome, if sometimes lurid, we must admit that the "movies" have become an institution of supreme importance, with other worlds to conquer, says the New York Herald.

It is too early now to sum up the evidence for and against this form of entertainment or to guess with anything like certainty what the future holds for us. Its possibilities are enormous, and events have already proved that many of the gloomy prognostications which attended its birth have not been realized. It was said that because of its cheapness it would rob us of the spoken and acted drama, but so far from this being the case it is believed by the most astute theatrical oracles that it has created a taste for the stage that has contributed largely to the present unprecedented prosperity of the theatre. Nor can it be said that moving pictures have demoralized public taste. Their educational value has caused their enlistment in the service of schools and colleges, and the strict censorship maintained prevents the display of improper or debasing films. Moreover, the establishment of the "movie" houses in suburban and other small towns has proved a godsend to those unable to reach the "legitimate" theatres and has contributed materially to the solution of the difficult servant problem.

Perhaps the worst thing that could be said of this institution is that it has had a baleful effect on our writers of fiction, although it has added largely to their emoluments. The author who was once content to shape his course with a view to selling his serial rights now plans his story with an eye to the film. It is impossible to read current novels without realizing that something is wrong with the majority of them. The truth is that in their pages literature is sacrificed to the "movies."

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE.

PETERBOROUGH business men are frequently heard to complain that for a municipality of its importance this city gets little publicity in the metropolitan newspapers. Still, it is not altogether suffering from a lack of advertising in the business centres of the American continent. Some of the leading industries, some of the assets of the city, help to make it famous. The Trent Canal and the Lift Locks keep it before the public. When the Hunter street bridge, the greatest structure of its kind in Canada, is completed, it will prove another valuable asset as an advertisement. The manufactured products of the Quaker Oats, the De Laval, the Canadian General, the Peterborough Canoe Company, the two Hamilton factories and other local industries, go to all parts of the civilized and semi-civilized world, carrying the name of the city with them. The reputation of the city that produces such articles must rank high in the manufacturing world.

Peterborough has another excellent opportunity to add to its advertising assets, and that is by supporting at the election next week the bylaw which is designed to bring the Aladdin Company to this city. This firm believes in advertising. At present it is running a two-page display advertisement in the Saturday Evening Post, one of the greatest and most expensive advertising mediums in America. The very fact that the Aladdin Company is financially able to use such a medium and that its advertisements are accepted is the best possible recommendation that could be given it. The firm is no adventurer. It is a concern that would increase the industrial standing of any city in which it locates.

The advertisement referred to gives a detailed description of the work in which the company is engaged. It sets forth that the head offices are located in Bay City, Michigan, and that branches have been established in Hattiesburg, Mississippi; Portland, Oregon; Wilmington, North Carolina, and Toronto, Canada. Let the bylaw carry, and the name of Peterborough will be added to the list and will be carried every week to millions of readers in the United States and Canada.

The Aladdin Company is in the business of building homes. They manufacture the different parts that are required in the erection of a house and ship these to any place where they may be ordered. They have reduced efficiency to a science and have eliminated anything like waste of materiel. They have come the nearest yet to reducing the high cost of building.

There is no doubt as to the success of the bylaw. But the vote in favor of it should be unanimous. Even a small minority against it would show that there are ratepayers in Peterborough who cannot recognize an opportunity when it presents itself.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

ALL IS OVER NOW but the campaign speeches, the voting and the shouting.

• • • • •

TO MAKE A really interesting election now, all that is required is a good vote.

• • • • •

MAYORS MAY COME and Mayors may go, but Mayor Church of Toronto seems billed to go on forever.

• • • • •

IT NEVER FAILS. The political party that talks of abolishing patronage invariably courts trouble for itself.

• • • • •

CHRISTMAS is about the only thing that comes high, and yet the majority would not for the world do without it.

• • • • •

ANOTHER SIGN of the spread of democracy. The corncob pipe is coming back, even in the higher social circles.

AGAIN, in the matter of Labor legislation, it seems that Parliament is to have new opportunities for passing the buck.

GREATER LOVE has no man than this, that he consent to wear the thunder and lightning necktie his wife gave him for Christmas.

• • • • •

THE THRIFT STAMP campaign is to be abandoned as too expensive. The usual fate of these hot-house efforts to produce wealth.

• • • • •

THE BOLSHEVIKI have attempted in vain to make perverts of the southern negro, that citizen being either too patriotic or too well disciplined.

PETERBOROUGH cannot afford to be regarded by the rest of the world as old fashioned in the election of School Board or other civic officials.

THE PEOPLE who object to the appointment of a woman to office in Middlesex county are tarred with the same brush as the reactionaries in this city.

AND NOW it seems that since it was impossible to vote Lady Astor out of Parliament, an attempt is to be made to disqualify her on a technicality, the point being raised that she is a peeress by marriage.

TWO CASES of sleeping sickness have been discovered in Ottawa, but no epidemic is likely until the natives of that burg return in force from their Christmas vacation. Or again, until Parliament meets.

HOW BIRDS KEEP WARM.

(Burroughes Nature Note.)

One wonders how in winter the birds withstand the giant cold, but they do. Birds live on highly concentrated food, the fine seeds of weeds and grasses and the eggs and larvae of insects. Such food must be very stimulating and heating. It is doubtful if birds ever freeze when fuel enough can be had to keep their little furnaces going. As they get their food in the north in winter entirely fro mthe limbs and trunks of trees, like the woodpeckers, their supply is seldom interfered with by the snow. The worst annoyance must be the enameling of ice our winter woods sometimes get.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS.

(Ottawa Journal.)

A London cable announces that arrangements have been made whereby the Dominion Government is bringing one thousand teachers to Canada. Such a scheme, if it exists, is a good one as far as it goes, but at best it is but a palliative. There is only one sure way by which Canada will ever gain and keep a supply of good school teachers, and that is by making the compensation sufficient to attract and reward brains and service. Salaries of teachers generally in Canada at the present time are little short of a national disgrace. Measured by the actual purchasing power of the dollar, they are not even as substantial as they were twenty years ago.

A decade or two ago, while the teaching profession was not a well-paid one, it was regarded by young men as a good starting point for something better, and as a comfortable place for young women to await matrimony, but today, with the dollar diminished and daily diminishing in value, and salaries barely creeping in advance, teaching is shunned by all. The result is that education in Canada is in a bad way, and unless something is done to remedy the question of salaries, it is bound to become rapidly worse.

HUNTING FOR FOOD IN RUSSIA

After spending three years in Russia, where he observed three regimes those of the Czar, Kerenski and Lenin, Alfred W. Kliefoth, late Assistant Attache to Russia, has returned to the United States bringing with him many documents as well as stories of personal experiences that tell graphically of the Russia of to-day says the New York Times.

"The Bolsheviki," he said recently, "hold that the family is the unit of conservatism. One of their tenets calls for the destruction of all records concerning births, marriages, and deaths. So that when 500 children are taken from Moscow out into the country the records of the children are destroyed. Nobody can tell where the children have been taken. The mothers are told that no records exist of the destination of the children, who are in this way nationalized. This fact has become known to the people, and the day after such an excursion you can see many mothers sneaking out og Moscow on trains bound for the country in a hopeless attempt to find their children.

"You are told by people sympathizing with the Bolsheviki that the schools are more crowded than they were under the Czar. That is quqite true, but the reason is because the schools are almost the only places where the children may keep warm and obtain food. The theatres, too, are crowded with thousands of workmen because the buildings are heated. There is no greater interest in the theatre among the masses than before in spite of the liberal use of tickets made by the Bolsheviki. They fling the tickets about recklessly among the workmen, who sell them to the bourgeoise. Anti-Bolsheviki buy tickets and go to the theatre to enjoy the play, but principally to meet their friends. In fact the theatre is the only place where the bourgeoise may meet safely and discuss mutual affairs. They are liable to entry and search if they meet in their homes. When I wanted to go to a theatre it was always easy to buy a ticket of a workman.

Food Restrictions.

"The men running affairs in Russia are clever propagandists. Many of them have been political exiles for so many years that all they know is propaganda. They exercise arbitrary power and have unlimited funds behind them. Take the Committee for the Suppression of Counter-revolution and Speculation: A simple accusation as a counter-revolutionist is sufficient to bring you before this body. There is no hope for a man accused. The real object of the committee appears to be to prevent the bourgeoise from living.

"To buy additional bread because you need it in order to sustain life is called speculation in Russia, and if you are found guilty you are thrown into prison. Since the so-called bourgeoise have no opportunity of receiving any more than the amount of food called for on their bread cards and since as bourgeoise they are placed in the lowest food category, they have no alternative but to buy bread illegally.

"Smuggling has become one of the foremost occupations in Russia today. Wherever you go you see hundreds of persons daily travelling back and forth between the country districts and the large towns carrying on their backs flour, butter, and food of various kinds, which are sold secretly. Under the Czar conditions were bad, but under the Bolsheviki they are incredible.

"Graft is rampant in Russia. It is greater even than in the Czar's day. Bribery is everywhere, from the highest to the lowest. A commissar boarding a train finds a man carrying two shirts. Under threat of being denounced as a counter-revolutionary the man is deprived of one shirt. Men smuggling food are held up by the commissars and they must give up part of their store to them.

"The only thing that pays in Russia to-day is being a commissar, especialy one dealing with finances. A commissar having anything to do with finance automatically becomes rich."

Mainly About People

The Federal Unemployment Fund is created for the benefit of returned soldiers, who threw up lucrative employment in order to serve their country, but have not been able to secure employment since returning from military service. A few days ago Brig.-Gen. A. E. Ross was appointed Administrator of the fund— an appointment that has been approved by returned soldiers and the public generally.

Gen. Ross is a country boy, for he was born in Cobden, Ont. He has had the benefit of a liberal education, having taken the arts and the medical course at Queen's University, Kingston, and in Kingston he successfully practiced his profession until the war called him to the front. It was his second war, because he fought through the South African conflict, fighting in the ranks, and proving himself a good soldier.

On the day after war with Germany was declared he left home for military service, and when he returned home last summer he came as a Brigadier-General.

In public life he has had considerable experience—as alderman and as Mayor of Kingston, and as member for Kingston in the Provincial Legislature. Last summer the Hearst Government created a Department of Civil Re-establishment. Gen. Ross was called to take charge, but, of course, he went out of office with the defeat of the Government. He, however, retained his seat in the Legislature, Kingston returning him by acclamation.

~~The portrait of the Prince of Wales that goes with the Family Herald and Weekly Star of Montreal is in great demand. It is certainly the best portrait of the Prince we have seen. The Family Herald is simply deluged with orders from new and old subscribers. The yearly subscription price, including the Prince's portrait, is only $1.25 if remitted for in December, and is the best value offered anywhere. It is said the Family Herald's subscription receipts are more than double former years. It is certainly worth the price and should be in every home in this country.~~

SOME FACTS ABOUT THE DOMINION OF CANADA

Last year the Department of Naval Service had ten vessels in the Fisheries Protective Service, five on the Atlantic coast, one on the Great Lakes, and four on the Pacific Coast.

Halifax is used as the base for vessels of the British North Atlantic fleet, which was considerably strengthened during the war. The dockyard is used for carrying out repairs to these vessels.

The Life-Saving ranch of the Department of Naval Service maintains 24 stations in the Maritime Provinces, 10 on the Great Lakes and 3 on the Pacific Coast.

Motor-boats are now replacing sail boats in many of the fishing districts and the danger of the fishermen's vessels becoming disabled is gradually diminishing.

For reparis made to ships of the British Navy at the Halifax dockyards and for stores supplied, the British Government paid last year the sum of $200,500; and for reparis and stores at the Esquimault dockyard, $112,234. The Japanese Government paid out at Esquimault $2,154.

The Federal fishing licenses, etc., last year produced a net revenue of $106,288, to which British Columbia made the largest contribution, namely $46,862.

At the close of last year the number of vesels and their tonnage on the registry books of the Dominion were: 4,202 sailing vessels, gross tonnage 486,607; steam vessels, 4,366 gross tonnage, 904,008; total vessels, 8,968, total gross tonnage, 1,390,615.

Prince Edward Island is the most densely populated province. The average is 42,91 per square mile. Nova Scotia is second, average 22.98. The average for all Canada is only 1.93.

According to the census of 1901 the rural population numbered 3,925,679, and the urban 3,280,964. The urban population showed the greatest increase.

According tothe census of 1901, there were 952 females per 1,000 males, but according to the census of 1911, there were only 886 females per 1,000 males. Probably the difference is much less today.

One of the earliest railways in Canada was one built and used at Quebec for carrying stone from the wharf to Cape Diamond for the construction of the Citadel. It was an incline railway, and the cars were hauled up by a stationary engine.

The first road or highway built in Canada, states Johnson in First Things in Canada, was in what is now Annapolis County, Nova Scotia, from Digby Gap to the Fort, a distance of about 12 miles. It was a military road, built under the direction of Champlain in 1605.

SALARY CHANGES IN CIVIL SERVICE

SOME EMPLOYES PAID LESS UNDER THE NEW SCALE—TROUBLE ARISES.

Ottawa, Dec. 27.—The re-classification of the civil service, which was passed at the last session of Parliament, is, it is understood, bringing with it its own difficulties. It is stated that departmental heads are being handicapped in the preparation of estimates, which must be ready for the sesion of Parliament by the fact that the re-classification calls for drastic changes in salaries. Positions which formerly called for a certain salary are found, under the new classification, to be worth much less, to the consequent discomfiture of the clerk or officer holding the position and the perplexity of the high officials in charge of preparing the estimates. The re-classification has, it is understood, given rise to a good deal of discontent, and one official stated that a greater portion of time is taken up in looking up complaints from his employes, who state that they are paid less under the new rule than they were under the old.

A Short-Lived Romance

◆

By DWIGHT TINGLE SCOTT

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Take as dramatis personae: a man who indulges in a cold bath every morning and who has to shave close every day and who falls hard for that well-I-can't-believe-it-you-don't-look-a-day-over-forty-stuff; a wife who is matronly and jolly, plump and growing frankly gray; and a stenographer with a very tall blonde pomp, very high heels and a passion for Robert W. Chambers' novels and ten dollars an ounce perfume.

Put the man and the stenographer into a small office with the scent of the perfume; and have the day's work consist of writing about a half-dozen business letters, answering a few 'phone calls and going down to the bank frequently to deposit a fat commission check upon a cargo of crude rubber; and you have a situation where the devil is to pay—usually.

* * * * *

"—and he had the nicest eyes and hair, and when he smiled it just made you sort of like him, y'know."

"Where did you get to know him, Kitty?"

"Well," said Kitty Tulane, taking off her hat and patting her hair as she left the elevator, "I hardly got to know him at all. Yesterday Mr. Sterling sent me over with some papers to his father-in-law's office in the Imperial building. When I got back down that shower came up, and I had to wait in the lobby. He came along and took me out under his umbrella and helped me on the Brightonville car. We had to run to catch it. I wouldn't even have known his name but it was written in white ink inside his umbrella. It was a pretty name, too, Thomas C. Slater, but pshaw, I suppose he is just a little nobody."

"Kitty Tulane, you make me tired. A little nobody! You think you can get 'em with nice eyes and hair and at the same time have limousines and country homes like your boss? I'll say you can't. I believe you're in love with your boss anyhow, the way you go on about him."

"Why Gertie, aren't you ashamed to say that to me?" And Kitty Tulane's pretty face went red with a mixture of confusion and anger.

In the hall of the great building the two girls parted, and went to their respective offices.

Kitty Tulane put up her hat, raised the windows, opened the typewriter desk and then sat in her chair quite still, her hands resting in her lap.

It would be a half hour before he got in. She yet colored as she thought of Gertie's remark. Never had she consciously thought of Mr. Sterling except as a thoughtful employer and a good friend. Besides, he worshiped his wife—everybody loved Mrs. Sterling—she was that kind. Still, wives did die, sometimes, and men married again, very young women too. Kitty wondered vaguely if such girls were really ever happy. At this point her dreams became strangely confused, for she began to picture a young man with nice hair and eyes and a wonderful smile, riding in Mr. Sterling's limousine and talking over the phone in Mr. Sterling's clear, confident manner. Dreamily, she took up her note book and began to write: "Katherine Tulane Slater," then "Katherine Tulane Sterling."

With her head set prettily to one side, she studied these two lines critically. Finally, she erased the first line.

It was this occupation which Mr. Sterling's arrival interrupted.

His brisk, cheery "Good morning, Miss Katherine," startled her. She stammered and blushed guiltily and hurriedly hid the note book in her drawer.

* * * * *

"That will be all this morning, Miss Tulane. Just read that last letter back to me."

"I have your favor of the sixteenth. The cargo referred to should be at the dock in Baltimore—" She had ever so slight a lisp; he noticed it quite suddenly. She had made that chiffon waist herself. Her teeth were very white. And those high-heeled shoes—they were just a bit shabby, for all their neat bright polish. She was going to get another pair, but she must wait until pay day after next because—this much he had overheard in an exchange of girl confidences in the hall outside his door. Her hands were very shapely—how shiny pink she always kept her nails. Poor little thing, pretty hard lines, having to struggle along on $18 a week. Not much in life for her perhaps. He put his hand over the one that rested on the note book. For just a moment she seemed confused, then she continued reading. He allowed it to rest there for just a moment, and gave a fatherly little pat as he removed it.

In a flash, Kitty knew. She had written those telltale names on the reverse of her note book. And as she read back the last letter he had seen it—"Katherine Tulane Sterling."

During the day he glanced over at her. Once he caught her studying him and she blushed and went to typing furiously.

"A couple of tickets for 'The Girl and the Prince,' Miss Tulane. Take your mother or some girl friend. And we are not using our car Friday night; I'll have it come around for you."

Of course the chauffeur knew. Presently the cook knew. Then the upstairs maid knew and said it was a shame. Mrs. Sterling bit her lips and blinked hard over an anonymous note—no, she would not let herself cry.

* * * * *

"Green corn and new potatoes, my, my!"

"Now, Chester, you know the last time—they always make you bilious." But perhaps there was a little twinkle in Mrs. Sterling's jolly gray eyes as she liberally helped her husband for the third time.

* * * * *

"No, I don't need the doctor. I should have listened to you last night—same old trouble. A day in bed will make me all right."

"Here, dear, put on these lavender silk pajamas. You know this was the day I was to motor down to Mrs. Clem's. Of course now—"

"Go right ahead—it'll be all right."

"Well, Ches, I hate to leave you with just the servants and it wouldn't seem right to get a trained nurse as scarce as they are. So I just phoned Miss Tulane to come out and bring the mail and asked her to stay all day. She'll make you company and it will be a little change for her from that stuffy office."

"Sally, you are so thoughtful."

His wife patted his shoulder. Could it be that Sallie Sterling foresaw this slight illness when she trailed around in the heat the day before, trying to locate the first—the very first green corn in market? Could it be that those twinkling eyes knew how pathetically funny he looked with that little wisp of gray hair standing straight up, or was it possible that she had, with malice aforethought, got out those silk pajamas knowing how old and sallow he looked in lavender?

Or when she called up her father's office and asked him to let young Jimmy Slater come out for the day because she didn't want to leave Ches alone, and later got Jimmy on the phone and told him that a very pretty girl was also out for the day, did she suspect that Jimmy would show up in white flannels and looking as young and handsome as handsome youth can look?

"It was good of you to come, Jimmy. It's Miss Tulane, she'll look after Ches. You can make yourself at home here on the veranda and when she isn't busy you can entertain her. The net is up and the court just marked if you two want tennis."

* * * * *

"Lord, Sally, I thought you never were going to get back," was her husband's greeting as she came into his room late that afternoon. "My, how I missed you, girl." He made a pathetic gesture to inquire if Miss Tulane were within hearing.

"She's out with Jimmy."

"Listen, Sally, do you think you could persuade that girl to leave off that sickening perfume and drop that fool lisp she's been affecting. I know I'll have another sick spell if I have to go back to the office with that."

"Well, honey, I don't think we need worry about it now." And the plump jolly face went down against the tired yellow one and her gray eyes twinkled. For, as she came in hadn't she seen something on the vine-covered porch and hadn't her quick ears caught something that sounded like:

"Thank Heaven, I have got the old crank off my hands, now let's get in that set of tennis."

SAID TO BE OLDEST ORGAN

Musical Instrument Dating From the Eleventh Century Found in Church in the Pyrenees.

In a recent number of The King's Highway Ethel M. Bilbrough describes places of interest in the Pyrenees. She describes, among other things, the little village of St. Savin with its old church and abbey:

"The church is remarkable for its eleventh century work and for the quaint old organ it possesses, which is literally crumbling to pieces with age. Its few remaining pipes fall feebly against each other, and on the front panels are carved three huge fantastic heads, with cavernous holes where mouths and eyes should be. The old peasant who showed us over the church explained that in days gone by, when the organ was being played, these grotesque faces were rendered more lifelike by a long tongue protruding from the mouth, while eyes would suddenly emerge and roll about in the sockets. This was done, our guide informed us, to keep the attention of the congregation. He wound up by the proud declaration that it was 'the oldest organ in the world.'"

Napoleon's Bad Temper.

When Napoleon was a young cadet he went on one occasion to witness the ascent of a balloon in the Champs de Mars. He entered unperceived the inclosure which contained the balloon, which was then very nearly full and about to ascend, and requested the aeronaut to allow him to enter the car. The request, however, was refused, the reason given being that the feelings of the boy might embarrass the aeronaut.

"Though I am young, I fear neither the powers of earth nor of air!" Bonaparte is reported to have exclaimed.

On being requested to retire, the little cadet, enraged at the refusal, drew his sword and, slitting the balloon in several places, destroyed the apparatus which had been constructed with infinite labor and ingenuity.

Such was Napoleon's first and last attempt to ascend in a balloon.

Wild Animals.

The re-stocking of the various "zoos" is a very costly affair these days. Even before the war animals—especially rare ones—fetched high prices and specimens to the value of one million pounds sterling changed hands every year in Hamburg. African lions to-day fetch anything from £75 to £250 each, according to size. The giraffe if a good specimen, is worth from £1,000 to £1,500. The rhinoceros fetches from £800 to £1,000. Zebras sell at from £200 to £400. These animals are valuable on account of the difficulty in catching them. On occasion as many as 5,000 natives are requisitioned for zebra "drives." In conjunction with all this new business, it is interesting to note that a new concern, the World's Zoological Trading Company, has been formed to capture the animal trade from German hands.

TAKE THEIR REST ON FLOOR

Russian Peasants Have Beds That Are Costly, but They Do Not Slumber on Them.

In the home of a Russian peasant Denis Garstin discovered the great bed, according to the Youth's Companion.

The room, says Mr. Garstin, was small, scrupulously tidy and covered with ornaments. The walls were entirely hidden with ikons—some 30 of them—sacred pictures, cheap lithographs of the czar, czarina and their children, calendars decorated with saints and lovers, and crude photographs of their own family taken at a fair. But by far the most imposing article, dominating over all in the room and insisting on all observance, was the bed.

It was a massive creation in itself, made still more imposing by layer on layer of bedding and mattresses and pillows reaching high up the wall and covered with black and red embroidered counterpanes. It was a monument of Russian peasant respectability rather than a suggestion of any repose.

I was marveling at it when the baba returned, laden with thick potato pasties and wine and fruit. We sat down to eat and my companion explained who we were and gave the messages. The old woman nearly embraced us in her effusive welcoming. A boy was sent to call in the husband, who was out on the hillside gathering fagots. A little girl went toddling down the village to round up all the relatives she could find, and soon we were the center of a crowd of rough peasants, who tried to cover their shyness by pressing us continually to eat.

The husband, a shock-headed old peasant, came last. His wife poured out all the news to him, referring every moment to us for confirmation of each detail, and whenever we said "truly" to her remarks he turned his hat round in his hands and said: "Thank God, but eat and drink some more."

"You have a very fine house," I said to him. He stared at me, puzzled by unusual "you."

"Yes," he said finally, struggling into the plural, "we have. Tell Lukyan he must come to visit us with every one. There is much room."

"But only one bed?" I said.

Again I puzzled him. "Yes," he said, "there is a bed, of course."

My companion nudged me. "No one sleeps in a bed," he whispered.

The baba, glad of any reference to that piece of furniture, had stripped off the covering. "See," she said, "one, two, three, four—15 mattresses. That is enough for every one, is it not?"

"They all sleep on the floor," said my companion. "My grandfather used to, too, when he was staying in the country."

Progressive Finance.

We were curious to see just what ideas our twenty-eight-month-old urchin has about money.

We showed him some pennies and asked him what they were.

"That's money for the organ man," he said.

We showed him a nickel.

"That's big money," he said, and then added, "That's Hessia's money," Hessia being the delightful person who honors our kitchen.

Then we showed him a one-dollar bill. There was no doubt at all in his mind as to where that belonged.

"Mother's dollar," he said.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Better Pay Advocated for Rural Teachers In Quebec.

In these days, when the demand for higher wages is being made and conceded on all hands, there is a very serious danger of coming to regard this method of bringing about adjustment as the obviously normal one. The threatening demand and the grudging concession, the former exaggerated in order to preclude any suspicion of weakness, the latter exaggerated in order to preclude any suspicion of generosity, are coming to be regarded as perfectly natural methods of progression. The result is to be seen on all hands. Every type of labor, using the word in its broadest sense, is tempted to adopt the threat method, and every type of employer is tempted to wait until this "recognized" method is adopted before he will even think of moving in the direction of dealing more justly with his employes.

A really scandalous illustration of what is meant came to light recently in the Province of Quebec, at a great gathering of school teachers held in Montreal. At this meeting, figures produced by a special committee appointed to inquire into the matter showed that the average pay for a rural school teacher in the province was just a little over $33 a month, or less than $8 a week, and that some of the teachers were receiving salaries as low as $6 a week. The convention instructed the new executive to appoint a committee to organize a vigorous agitation in order to secure better pay for the rural teachers, and the question of the formation of a teachers' union to force up salaries was discussed. The next step in the prescribed order would be the formation of such a union; the next, probably the threatening demand; and the next, presumably, either a strike or a grudging concession.

Now, there is such a thing as public opinion. Indeed, public opinion may be said to be, at last, really finding itself in Canada, as in many other countries, and in Quebec, as in other provinces of the Dominion. And public opinion in Quebec should make a summary end of a situation which ought never to have been allowed to obtain by any reputable public body. This is not a question of coercing some employer of sweated labor, although the conditions are the same. The employer in this instance is the whole Province of Quebec, and, until the wrong is righted, the stigma lies at the door of the whole province.

It is true that, since the first day the human race evinced the smallest desire to learn anything, it has acted on the basis of paying its teachers the very least that it could. And wherever anyone may go, up and down the world, to-day, he will find the school teacher one of the worst paid members of the community. In spite of the fact that he is invariably expected to keep up "some kind of position," and to act, especially in rural districts, as some kind of "leader," the school teacher is usually paid a salary which keeps him in such a state of chronic poverty that, unless he were actuated, as he usually is by lofty motives and a real love for his calling, he would throw up his work and turn to something affording some semblance of a just return for his labor. Two blacks, however, or indeed any number of them, do not make a white. The fact that all the world underpays its school teachers is no excuse for Quebec. It is certainly no excuse for $6 a week.—Christian Science Monitor.

Debt Still Grows.

A considerable falling away in the amount of increase in the net debt of the Dominion is shown in the October financial statement, as compared with the figures for September. During October the debt grew to the extent of $35,545,015. During September the increase was nearly sixty-five millions. The net debt now stands at $1,749,231,792. At the close of September, 1918, or a period of thirteen months, it stood at $1,224,227,892, or approximately $225,000,000 less than at the end of October, 1919.

War expenditures since April 1, the beginning of the Dominion's fiscal year, have aggregated $206,085,707. From the same period last year they were $169,574,417. These figures indicate that the demobilization of the army has been more costly than its maintenance in the field. That this expenditure is rapidly decreasing, however, is indicated in the war expenditures for October alone, a month which witnessed but a small homeward movement of fighting men. For October the expenditure was $22,345,482, while in October, 1918, the war cost the Dominion Treasury $66,510,092. It has been estimated that subsequent to the close of the current fiscal year the sum of fifty million dollars will complete the work of demobilization.

Canadian Printing Bureau.

Recently Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Solicitor-General, explained the amendments to the Public Printing and Stationery Act, which dealt largely with the reduction of the staff of the Printing Bureau and which bill was introduced at the instance of the Civil Service Commission.

Mr. Guthrie stated that there would be 402 persons whose services would be dispensed with at a saving to the country of about $500,000. This in spite of the fact that the superannuation of certain employes would cost the country about $276,000 spread over eight years. In the past, three officials had been doing the purchasing for the Printing Bureau; by the new bill one man will carry on this work.

Canada's Mineral Production.

In 1917 the minerals produced in Canada had a value of $193,271,816, equal to $23.12 per head of the population. Ontario led with $80,461,323, the greater part of which was produced by the silver and the nickel mines of the north country.

COPPING FOR ALDERMAN

29

TO THE ELECTORS OF CITY OF PETERBOROUGH

Ladies and Gentlemen:—

Having been nominated for the Council, I have given the matter most earnest consideration and have finally decided to offer my services to the city. It happens that I have both the time and the means and in view of the need, I feel it my duty to place them at the disposal of the people of Peterborough. If elected, I will devote the full time which may be necessary to efficiently discharge all the duties which the office of Alderman entails.

The coming year will carry with it tremendous responsibility in finishing the Hunter street bridge and building the Sewage Disposal Plant. It will be my earnest endeavor to see to it that this work is carried out in the most effective manner, and that the people's money is spent well and economically.

For several years I have been interested in City Planning, and have given a good deal of consideration to plans to make our City bigger and at the same time more beautiful. If elected, I will do everything possible to solve the present housing problem and bring our street car system within the reach of all populous portions of the City. I would also recommend a permanent scheme for the future development of the City which will provide for growth and at the same time ensure the health and well being of all our citizens, particularly those who are forced to spend the most of their time within the City limits.

I am also in favor of gradually extending bathing facilites each year, so that in a short time we shall be taking full advantage of our natural resources in this respect and making use of the river which flows through our city, so that every citizen may enjoy it.

I have no ambition except to serve the city and, if elected, will do my utmost to represent all classes and bring about a better understanding between the laboring and the business interests.

Yours respectfully.

R. V. COPPING

To The Ratepayers of the City of Peterborough

29

I am offering myself as a candidate for Alderman, as I believe that this City will be benefitted with my many years of experience as a member of the City Council and as City Solicitor. I had intended to devote my time to my business affairs, but as there are few men of many years experience in municipal affairs in the City Council I felt that I could be a help in the City's Government on account of the large undertakings and important projects which must be dealt with by the Council within the next two years.

To develop this City we must have new industries, and I have given much of my time in the past years while in the City Council, to this particular part of municipal affairs.

If elected, I will make every effort to improve this City as a great industrial centre.

The support of those who believe that I shall be able to give faithful service, is respectfully requested.

Yours faithfully,

G. N. GORDON

BOARD OF EDUCATION

Respectfully requests your Vote for Re-Election on the Board of Education in favor of a Progressive and Economic Policy for 1920.

Alderman W. H. Taylor for Mayor

Pledged to Street Railway Extensions and City Development

To the Electors of Peterboro:

Ladies and Gentlemen,—In accepting nomination as mayorality candidate in the coming election, allow me to express my appreciation of the honor conferred upon me, and to assure all citizens alike that if elected to the dignity of first magistrate of this important city of Peterboro I shall endeavor to exercise such high office for the weal of the whole community, irrespective of class or creed.

In the past two years, as Finance Minister of the City Council, I have acquired close touch with the city's financial affairs generally. This experience, I believe, would stand this municipality in goor stead next year, when such big problems as completing the new bridge under the cost-plus commission plan, and installing a costly sewage disposal plant, will entail the expenditure of considerable sums and shrewd financing.

W. H. TAYLOR

Street Railway Extensions.

Three years ago, ladies and gentlemen, I pledged myself to support extensions of the street railway system, but the Hydro-electric Commission could not undertake such while the war was on, and nothing was accomplished in that direction until this year when the commission was persuaded to lay tracks from Charlotte street, along the Monaghan Road to Patterson street, and to put in operation two new cars. This improved the service somewhat, but it is not enough. The end I have in view if privileged to serve you as mayor, is farther extensions south to Lansdowne street, north to near the Normal School, and over the new bridge to East City, with perhaps a belt line service. But my broad policy in regard to the street railway is its ultimate ownership by the city for the people just as soon as it can be purchased from Hydro-Electric at a price and under conditions which will assure profitable investment, and a minimum fare. Whether such transfer to the city as a public utility can be secured or not at an early date, I purpose, if elected, to leave no stone unturned to connect by steel rails all sections of the city with its business and manufacturing establishments, so that workmen and girls may have easy access to their employment whether they live in the north, south, east or west.

City Development.

In regard to city beautifying and development to afford unstinted opportunities for public recreation and a brighter life for the masses of the people, I believe the City Council should co-operate whole herrtedly in any projects to these ends. If Peterborough is to grow into a greater Peterborough City developing and town planning must be generously resorted to. For, unless conditions be attractive to workingmen and their families, this city will be handicapped in its bid for new industries, and present factories will not be encouraged to expand locally.

City of Resources.

Ladies and gentlemen, we have a city of resources and opportunities. Let us unite in taking advantage of them. British and American industries are seeking location in Canada and this is an opportune time to reach out after more factories. Don't let us be too conservative in our views, but adopt broad and democratic principles in a united effort to stimulate trade and industrial activities, to furnish employment for a greater and growing number, and to enhance the community's prosperity in general.

Serve Every Interest.

I am offering my services to this city by request of a large number of ratepayers and respectfully ask the co-operation of all citizens to secure my election. If elected I will devote to the office of mayor whatever time is needed and above all will serve every interest alike, recognizing no privilege for any particular class, but a four-square consideration for all. In conclusion, I might say that in my opinion this city needs a shaking up in its public spirit, a get-together movement for general progress and increased citizenship, a unison of individual and organized interests in a common bond of community fellowship which will make for municipal uplift, industrially, commercially and expansibly. Such is my objective in aspiring to office as mayor, and leaving myself in your hands, I extend to one and all best wishes for a happy and prosperous new year.

Yours very truly,

W. H. TAYLOR

ROYALTY TO VISIT AMERICA

Paris, Dec. 26.—It is reported that King Alfonso and Queen Victoria will sail for South America next June.

To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

29

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

I have the honor of nomination and have been urgently requested by a very large number of ratepayers to be a candidate for the Utilities Commission.

Having served you six years as alderman and two years as Mayor, I acquired a fairly comprehensive knowledge of the duties of the Utilities Commission.

I was a member of the City Council during the negotiations, construction and prosecution of the work of the city electric power station, the city waterworks dam, and the auxiliary pumping station.

As Chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee in the City Council, I came directly in contact with the waterworks system, including the mains, hydrants, pressure, etc., for fire protection, domestic and manufacturing purposes.

For two years I was Vice-President of the Ontario Hydro Radial Association, which gave me a thorough knowledge of the advantages of the Hydro Electric system for power, electric lighting, heating and radial railway purposes.

With the above experience and knowledge I respectfully solicit your vote and influence in support of my candidature, assuring you if elected that I will endeavor to assist in every way possible the other members of the Commission to carry out the work in the very best interests of the ratepayers of the City of Peterborough.

I am heartily in favor of such improvements as the proposed new Filtration Plant when the time is opportune, but am of the opinion that all such large expenditures, as far as practicable, in every department of the city, should be deferred until such time as some of the present debentures are fully paid up, except in so far as it is found necessary to go ahead with the work in order to keep our workmen and laborers steadily employed.

Respectfully yours,

Jos. J. Duffus

TO THE ELECTORS:

The Hon. Mr. Drury, Premier of Ontario, has stated that he considers the woman's point of view both desirable and necessary on every Board of Education.

Dr. Cody, while Minister of Education, many times expressed the same opinion.

Your Board of Education acknowledges the need and value of women in the schools when it employs six times as many women as men teachers (65 women and 11 men) and a woman nurse.

Having been a Public School teacher for some years, I am able to see the educational questions of the day from the double viewpoint of the home and the teacher.

It is in the hope of giving intelligent service that I am a candidate for the Board of Education.

Let PHELAN Finish His Work!

Ladies and Gentlemen:
To the Electors of the City of Peterborough

I am again a candidate for the position of alderman. I have endeavored to serve yon faithfully in the past, and if you will favor me with re-election I will continue to give you my best services.

During the year that is closing I have been chairman of the Board of Works and in that position have given practically all of my time to the construction of the new Hunter street bridge and to the preparations for the installation of Sewage Disposal Works.

If you believe my knowledge of these matters will be useful in the coming year, I ask you for an opportunity to see these works finished. To these important works as well as to the general business of this city I will devote my close attention if you should favor me with re-election.

Permit me also to take this opportunity of thanking my friends for the confidence reposed in me in the past, and to express the wish that all may enjoy a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Men with long heads take only a short time to decide to have their eyes attended to when they need it. The same far-sightedness brings them to Dr. Fowler for qualified eye service and his celebrated "PEBLO" Glasses. The example of the long headed man is surely a good one to follow.

LIKE THROWING MONEY AWAY

POSTMASTER OF CARDIFF COULD GET NOTHING TO HELP HIS WIFE UNTIL HE GAVE HER TANLAC.

"You can tell them that Tanlac has helped my wife, too, and of all the people who have made statements about being benefited, I believe we have the most cause to be thankful," was the statement made by J. Kuyper, postmaster of Cardiff, Alberta, while at the Owl Drug Store in Edmonton recently.

"For the past five years," he continued, "my wife has been so crippled up with sciatic rheumatism that she could hardly get about, and while I have spent lots of money for treatment and medicines(, it was just like throwing it away, for nothing was the least bit of help to her until she began using Tanlac. Since she has been taking this medicine, however, she has been steadily improving all the time. Aside from the fact that she has almost gotten rid of the rheumatism, her general health has improved wonderfully, and her weight has increased from less than one hundred pounds to one hundred and ten.

"Her condition, before taking Tanlac, seemed almost hopeless, and was very discouraging. She had continual pains across the small of her back and her right hip and limb were so stiff and painful she was barely able to get around. She was so weak and and was so easily exhausted and would have to lie down three or four times a day. Her nerves were badly shattered, and this, together with her awful pain, made sleep almost impossible for her. Her stomach was also out of order in some way, for her food seemed to do her no good, and in place of gaining strength she was losing all the time. Her appetite was poor and altogether her condition was serious, and regardless of the best care and attention she kept getting worse.

"After reading so much about Tanlac and knowing of the good results others in our community had gotten from it, my wife began taking it, and gradually improving from the very start. She was in such a bad shape that we could not expect complete recovery without time and patient use of the medicine. So she has stuck right to the treatment, and it certainly has paid well, for the results have been nothing less than wonderful. She has taken twelve bottles now, eats three hearty meals every day, sleeps eight hours or more every night, and says she hardly feels the rheumatism any more. In fact, her entire system has been toned up and she is now about as strong as she ever was. Tanlac is the only medicine we have ever found that we could depend upon for results, and it is so good that we feel it our duty to tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

PETERBORO LOSES EXHIBITION GAME TO BELLEVILLE BY 10 TO 7

Locals Play Good Hockey but are Hampered by Soft Ice and Lack of Condition—Will Prove a Bad Team to Defeat.

Many were turned away last night after the Belleville rink had been filled to capacity to see their favorites in the opening clash against the local intermediates. It is true the Petes lost by the score of 10 to 7, but then there are a great many ways to account for this slight defeat.

The ice was very soft and sticky which prevented the Peterborough sextette from breaking away with that burst of speed which they have been showing at practice. And also the Belleville players appeared to be in better condition than the locals, and the heavy ice did not cause them as much weariness as it did the lads from here. But with a little more practice and hard ice it is safe to say Belleville will not have a "look in" when they again face the locals.

The first period was the best hockey, the ice being in better condition, and the Petes came out on the short end of a 3 to 1 score. Then came the disastrous second period, with the heavy ice having a decided effect on the Peterborough team. Belleville garnered six while their opponents were getting two in this period, the score at the beginning of the last session being 9 to 3.

Th locals came back strong in the last period and showed their worth by scoring four to Belleville's one, the game ending 10 to 7.

For the locals no player can be picked as the star. They all tried hard and worked well together, and with a little more practice will give a good account of themselves anywhere.

The Lineup.

Peterborough—Goal, Murray; defence, Halpin and P. Thornton; centre L. Rose; wings, Thornton and Jackson.

EDITOR'S MAIL

A CALL FOR CHARITY.

Editor Review: Your George street contemporay, the Examiner, in last evening's edition, announces in large type, "Special Menu at the County Jail—Goose and Plum Pudding for Mr. Guise-Bagley and Company," meaning by "company" the five poor unfortunate Russians sentenced to death.

Surely, the Examiner might show a little charity, especially at this season of the year, if not for Mr. Bagley, then at least for his wife and family.

As far as I am aware, Mr. Bagley is yet to be proven guilty of any crime—unless, indeed, we call the making of whiskey a crime—and, if so, there are many in Peterborough today quite willing to become criminals if they were as clever as Mr. Bagley.

I hold no brief to defend Mr. Bagley. There is, however, enough Irish blood in my veins to strike back at the man who hits the other fellow when he is down and unable to defend himself.

Yours truly,
CHARITY.

ALDERMAN A.A. McINTYRE FOR MAYOR

To The Electors of the City of Peterborough

LADIES AND GENTLEMEN:

The best claim that any cand date for office can urge on his ow behalf is based on his experien and the nature of the public se vice he has rendered. I have ten years in the City Council. I that time I have been elected ni times, both under the ward syste and the general vote. I apprecia these past expressions of dence in me, and I pledge mys that, if elected Mayor, I will sti strive to retain the good will o the voters.

I was chairman of the Sp Council Committee that sele the site for the public bathi beach, and I gave my personal s pervision to the construction the bath house. I was also chai man of the committee that er ed the bandstand in King Edward Park, thus giving the End residents the benefit of open-air band concerts.

Some time ago the health of the citizens was mena by the sale of milk which the sanitary officers showed by a tests was impure. I was the father of the measure which pr vided for a rigid system of inspection for all milk offered f sale. During my various terms of office I have always taken active interest in measures intended to improve the hea of the city.

For two years I have been chairman of the Manufact Committee, which during the year just closing has secured new industries for Peterborough. These are as follows:

The Western Clock Company of La Salle, Ill., makers clocks and watches. This firm have taken the Chicle bu on George street and expect to have two hundred men at wo before the end of next year.

The Albion Knitting Company leased, with an option purchase, the old West Ward School. They are employing a fifteen hands, with good prospects of extending their operatio

The Bon Marche Manufacturing Company, that has le premises on Simcoe street and will engage in the manufact of white wear.

The Nashua Gummed and Coated Paper Company, that h taken over the old Cordage Co. plant and will start operatio with from thirty to forty skilled workers.

The Canadian Aladdin Company will, if the bylaw carrie next week, locate a branch in this city for the manufacture ready-cut houses.

Alexander Stewart has put up two buildings on Gladsto avenue and will start a wool stock factory.

These are a few of the matters in which I have had a ha during my different terms in the Council. I will, if elec Mayor, do as I have done in the past and work for the inter of all classes of citizens.

I repeat what I said in a previous notice to the public. I am in favor of the housing scheme, although I voted against bylaw recently adopted because I was convinced that the a pointment of the commission should have been left to the C cil of 1920.

Again soliciting your support, I am,
Yours for progress,
A. A. McINTYRE

HOW MRS. BOYD AVOIDED AN OPERATION

Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well.

"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my housework without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 14[illegible]5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

Sometimes there are serious conditions where a hospital operation is the only alternative, but on the other hand so many women have been cured by this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after doctors have said that an operation was necessary—every woman who wants to avoid an operation should give it a fair trial before submitting to such a trying ordeal.

If complications exist, write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice. The result of many years experience is at your service.

Some Things About the Moon.

Like the earth, the moon receives its light from the sun, and its day, the interval from sunrise to sunset, is a month. The long sunshine for two weeks and the absence of sun for the following two weeks must cause immense variations of temperature. Astronomers have estimated that the temperature must fall in the long nights to 200 degrees below zero. In spite of this small amount of heat, an instrument called the bolometer, which detects heat from a candle a mile away, succeeded in detecting heat rays coming from the moon. If air is present, its pressure cannot exceed 1-750 that at the earth's surface and is probably much less, as no refraction has ever been observed when the edge of the moon's disk passes over a star. The existence of water in any quantity has not been detected by instruments and no clouds have been seen. It is possible that water—probably in the form of ice—may exist at the bottom of some of the deeper craters, but the low temperature would scarcely permit it to be liquefied even when the sun was shining.

The Thing That Hurts.

"How do you like walking to work?"

"It's not bad but the thing that gets my goat is the published request of the city administration that I keep good-natured and smile while doing it."

Thought Curb a Pantomime.

Two English officers, accompanied by an American lieutenant, were out sight-seeing the other afternoon, and as they wended their way down Broad street were amazed at the crowds standing in front of the subtreasury, where the glee club of the police department was giving a concert as a part of an effort to sell tickets for the police field day, the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch writes. A little farther down was an orator selling War stamps, while over on Broadway the party was entertained by a man climbing up the side of a building. Then they came to the curb market and naturally thought this was further entertainment. "I say," remarked the elder of the Englishmen, "I can understand the chap going up the building and the 'bobbies' singing, but I cawn't get the idea of this pantomime." The American officer hastened to assure his guests that this was not an entertainment, but the serious business of trading in stocks. "Now stop your spoofing," said the Englishman. "Don't I see a chap made up like Henry Irving?" He had seen Percy Guard, dean of the curb brokers, in the crowd.

The Dominion's Revenue.

For the seven months' period since April 1 revenues have totalled $186,408,794. For the same period last year they were $164,414,136. For October alone revenues totalled $27,323,234, as compared with $23,431,234 for October, 1918. Ordinary expenditures, on the other hand, rose from $81,107,824 for the seven months' period in 1918, to $159,049,406 from April 1st to October 31st this year. Expenditures on capital account jumped from approximately nine millions last year to over twenty-four millions this year, due to the renewal of activities in connection with the construction of public works, including railways.

BATTLE OF PELEE ISLAND

AN EPISODE IN THE MAKING OF CANADA.

An Interesting Chapter in the History of Essex County—A "Battle" Fought There in 1838 Between Loyalists and Filibusters From the United States.

ESSEX COUNTY, Ontario, has an interesting geographical situation. On three sides it has a water front looking out upon the highway formed by the Great Lakes. It is the most southern portion of Canada, and lying out in Lake Erie, about fifteen miles from the mainland, is Pelee Island, the most southern part of Essex county. The area of the island is 12,228 acres, and its population about 800. Like the mainland portion of Essex county, Pelee Island is noted for the fertility of its soil, and the abundance of its products, prominent among which are grapes, said to be the most delicious of all grown in Canada.

Its geographical position, which makes it the most southern part of Canada's most southern county, is not the island's only claim to general interest. It has a history, and one interesting chapter of that history is that which tells of a "battle" fought there in 1838—the year following Mackenzie's fiasco at Montgomery's tavern outside Toronto, but a troubled year for the inhabitants of Upper Canada, whose borders were from time to time raided by bands of filibusters from the adjacent states.

It will be remembered that after the band of insurgents led by Mackenzie against Toronto during the first week of December, 1837, had been repulsed and scattered at Montgomery's tavern, many of the rebels, including their leader, made their escape to the United States. There Mackenzie rallied around him a motley crowd, and taking possession of Navy Island, a short distance above Niagara Falls, attempted to hold it as a base for further operations against Upper Canada. The attempt failed, and being driven from the island, the filibusters scattered along the frontier, and during the following six or eight months made raids into Canada at Windsor, at Sandwich, at Amherstburg, at Prescott, and at Pelee Island.

Having abandoned Navy Island in the early part of January, 1838, the "patriots" and filibusters made fresh plans. Many proceeded westward along the southern shore of Lake Erie, intending to join the raids upon the southwestern frontier of Upper Canada. One of their mustering places was Sandusky in the State of Ohio. Here the filibusters collected and were taken command of by a local sympathizer named Bradley, to whom his followers gave the rank of "colonel."

Towards the close of February, "Colonel" Bradley collected his forces, numbering about five hundred, and set out to capture Pelee Island. Large fields of floating ice were encountered and a high wind prevailed, but notwithstanding these adverse conditions, the whole band of filibusters succeeded in reaching Pelee Island. To-day the island has a population of about eight hundred; in 1838 the population was not one-fourth that number; and these people were without means of defence. They were at once made prisoners by the filibusters. The invaders promptly confiscated to their own use the property of their prisoners, and for a short time they lived on the fat of the land, for even at that time the farmhouses in Pelee Island were well stocked with food and the substantial luxuries of the farm.

On the mainland, about forty miles to the northwest, near where the Detroit river flows into Lake Erie, there stood then, as now, the town of Amherstburg, in which were stationed detachments of the 32nd and of the 83rd regiments, commanded by Col. John Maitland. The shore of Lake Erie from Amherstburg eastward for a considerable distance was patrolled by cavalry that belonged to the town of St. Thomas.

Information from different but reliable sources reached Col. Maitland of the invasion of Pelee Island and he resolved to drive the invaders from Canadian soil.

The winter had been unusually severe, and so intense had been the cold that Pigeon Bay had become frozen over, so that there was an ice-bridge from the Canadian mainland to Pelee Island.

The ice was tested by Capt. Glasgow of the artillery, and it was found to be sufficiently strong to permit artillery being hauled to the island. Maitland thereupon made preparations to attack the invaders on the following morning, March 3.

The force at Maitland's disposal was about equal in numbers to the strength of the invaders. It consisted of four companies of the 32nd regiment, one of the 83rd, two six-pounders, twenty-one men of the St. Thomas cavalry and some Essex mounted men.

Within two hours after receiving the report that the ice was safe, Col. Maitland had his force under way down the bank of the Detroit river from Amherstburg to the shore of Lake Erie, which was reached at sundown. It was a clear winter evening and Maitland decided to push on leading his force eastward along the ice which skirted the shores and over which good progress was made. At eleven o'clock the force came midway between Amherstburg and Point Pelee, where men and horses were served food and given time to rest.

After a halt of four hours the force resumed its march. It was now three o'clock in the morning, and as the weather continued to be fine and the night clear although cold, Maitland decided to strike out on the ice and proceed in a straight line from Colchester to Pelee Island—a distance of about twenty miles.

When the sun rose over the broad expanse of Lake Erie, the troops were within half a mile of the island. At the same time the entire force of the enemy could be seen turning out as the bright morning sunshine glittered on their bayonets. Their sentry had given the alarm. The invaders were seen to muster near the shore, and then retreat across a clearing and disappear in the dense woods, which at that time covered a considerable portion of the island. Maitland now sent Capt. Browne with two companies of the 32nd Regiment and the cavalry around to the south of the position taken up by the enemy, while he landed at the north of the island with his guns.

And now let the battle of Pelee Island be described by one who took part in it—Trooper Samuel Williams of the St. Thomas cavalry. Trooper Williams writes:—

After our troops crossed the point of the island we struck the outlet of a marsh and saw the enemy crossing the marsh in retreat. Capt. Ermatinger (who commanded the troopers) sent successive messages to Col. Maitland for reinforcements, but the colonel had sent the troops on to the island and they were out of reach. The captain examined our arms and told that every man who was spared to go home, would not be ashamed of having been at Pelee Island. Our arms were only such as we had taken with us. Some of the enemy's arms were picked up on the island as we went, and I was given one of these. We were dismounted as we waited for reinforcements, and watched the enemy crossing the marsh, a distance of about two and a half miles.

"The captain after scanning our arms ordered us to remount and, having given us hope of reinforcements led us towards Capt. Browne's detachment, whom the enemy were approaching. As we proceeded we saw the sleighs retreat, and the soldiers were strung out in a long line across the ice, like fence posts. The enemy was approaching them at a quick march in a solid column, which finally spread out in a line about the same length as that of the British infantry. There were about 500 of the enemy, Capt. Browne had 90 men, while our troop had but 21.

"Both sides fired at the same time. We got none of this volley. We were now approaching at a gallop, and we heard the enemy call out, 'There comes the cavalry; fire on it.' They did so, and the bullets whistled around us. We were coming on their flank, and we now halted and fired. At that moment, and in the face of the heavy fire from the enemy, the infantry charged with fixed bayonets but when the infantry were within six rods of the enemy the latter retreated in disorder, running like wild turkeys every way, leaving five killed, while we had one soldier and one trooper (Thomas Parish) slain on the spot. The enemy retreated to the island, staining the snow for a quarter of a mile with blood.

"I saw Parish, as I supposed, loading. He was on his knees when he was shot. The captain put him on a horse and held him there. When he brought him up he called for help to take the man off the horse saying 'He is a dead man.'

"An alarm was just then raised that the enemy were crossing further down towards three other islands. Capt. Browne said to Capt. Ermatinger: 'Take your men and chase them.' He did so, flourishing his sword and leading us until his horse's foot broke through the ice, when he called to us to wheel to right and left. We did so, for we knew that we were getting on thin ice.

"The enemy continued crossing on this, and to make their escape, although it is said that many of them went through the ice and perished. We went back and followed their trail on the island and found a great many of their wounded, who were cared for at the house of a man named Fox. We had had no food (neither horse nor men) since about 11 o'clock the night before, and it was about that hour when we reached the mainland and got food again. It was reported that twenty-eight of Browne's infantry were wounded and one died before reaching the main shore. The two infantry men and Trooper Parish were buried with military honors on March 5. The troops returned to St. Thomas in June, though I with some others returned earlier. Two more infantrymen died of their wounds before we left."

The filibusters who fled from Pelee Island, succeeded in making their way across Lake Erie to the State of Ohio, and as a consequence of their defeat there was for a time tranquility along the southwestern border of Upper Canada.

To the memory of the men who lost their lives in repelling the invaders of Pelee Island a monument was erected in Amherstburg, the inscription on which reads:—

"This monument is erected by the inhabitants of Amherstburg in memory of Thomas McCarten, Samuel Holmes, Edwin Miller, and Thomas Symonds, of H. M. 32nd Regt. of Foot, and of Thomas Parish, of the St. Thomas Volunteer Cavalry, who gloriously fell in repelling a band of brigands from Pelee Island on the third of March, 1838."—Montreal Family Herald.

Start Trade Union.

"More than one hundred clergymen, including eight army chaplains and ex-chaplains, have rallied to the call of our union," said Rev. C. W. Lloyd Evans, vicar of Bilborne St. Andrew, Dorset, England, who is the originator and honorary secretary of the scheme for a clerical trade union, the object of which is to obtain better conditions for Church of England clergymen.

"The date of the first meeting has not been decided," said Mr. Evans, "as I am waiting till our centres are organized. I have had only one unfavorable letter. I receive such pitiful letters. One clergyman asked the bishop personally if he could let or sell his house, as it was too big. The bishop refused. He then asked him, could he work as a market-gardener? The bishop said, only if he resigned the living. The clergyman is in debt owing to the starvation wages with which the church rewards its servants. Archdeacons, however, are grumbling at the £200 a year they receive, in addition to the living, which is generally the best in the bishop's gift.

"The bishops are approaching the Parliamentary Commission on income tax to get relief, but let the rank and file starve.

"We are fighting not for ourselves, but for the wives and kiddies."

HOURS FOR SLEEP

Bed Should Surely Claim One-Third of Person's Life.

Not Much Difference as to What Particular Portion of the Night Is Devoted to Slumber, but Grab Off Enough.

For a long time and in the majority of places in this country it has been the habit to stay up late at night, and in some places the early morning hours have not been given much attention. Of course this refers principally to the larger towns and cities, and while there would of necessity be some people getting to work at seven o'clock the average man or woman coming along at eight or even later would find things still in the cleaning-up and opening-up stage. Sunrise, on the mountains or at sea or in the rural districts, is an event worthy of attention and well rewards the early riser with its beauty and significance, but the early riser in the town or city has usually found everything untidy and must step over ash cans and dodge the sweepers and be satisfied with the sleepy grunts of workmen who are getting things into shape for the business of the day. It is anything but picturesque and is most unattractive.

Whoever it was who discovered sleep decided that at least one-third of a person's life was properly spent in bed, and therefore, when the crowd stops up until midnight, it is healthy and wise to remain under cover, or anyway on the pillows, until eight o'clock. The dancer or card-player (certainly we mean bridge and other perfectly proper games), lingering for the last one-step or the final hand, until one o'clock, should not be disturbed until nine. And so on, according to the accepted plan of health and happiness. But taking the other side of the argument—or rather, reversing the program—let the average person retire at ten o'clock and rise at six.

Probably a whole lot of people will grumble at the schedule suggested, and we don't pretend to say that it must be done. We haven't been appointed sleep director yet, nor yet given the right to wake people up at a certain hour. A great deal has been done, however, in the last year that tends to a more reasonable sleeping and waking scheme. Through the winter and early spring two nights each week were allowed limited lighting only. This was calculated to send the people home earlier than usual, and served to keep some folks at home after dinner or supper, according to the designation of the evening meal. A great amount of fuel was saved, according to report, and up to date no damage has been reported to business, society or individuals.

The stores are closing early and the tendency seem to be for an early retirement generally. In Miami they are trying out a curfew—but it isn't a real curfew. It only refers to young folks under a certain age, and it won't amount to a great deal. The English understand that sauce should be provided of suitable strength for both the gander and the goose, and in England the curfew law closes all places of amusement and all business enterprises at a certain reasonable time. Parents are expected to take care of their young daughters and sons and themselves. The theaters and concert halls, restaurants and dance halls and recreation enterprises generally plan their programs to begin early and end in time for their patrons to get home considerably before midnight. There is no penalty for rising early in London or elsewhere, and the population, now very generally retiring about ten o'clock, is likely 90 per cent up at 6 a. m. A very large per cent is certainly up at five o'clock and many at four, and some earlier.

The eight hours mentioned is not a rigid rule of health or really beneficial to everybody. That it is enough for 90 per cent of the population of this country is certain, and thousands and thousands can live happily, beautifully and profitably with a smaller average of sleep. A few really need more than eight hours. Thomas A. Edison has been quoted as saying that four hours' sleep was sufficient—for him. Perhaps he said it, and possibly that is enough for some men at some period of their lives. The great big majority need more than four hours, and also can do very well with eight. It is then evident that by going to bed as early as ten o'clock and rising at six the worker will have a whole lot of morning time—the best always for work or pleasure or both.

THE CZECHS WELCOMED.

Were Greeted as Saviours and Deliverers.

In three hours we reached the range of hills from which Irkutsk broke into view—cathedral domes and minarets all bathed in the clear Siberian sunshine, says William V. Duncan in the Yale Review.

It was six o'clock when we reached the city and a holiday—Peter and Paul day—and the people gave us a welcome such as must have greeted the ears of returning conquerors of old, except that we were greeted as saviours and deliverers. As we passed through the streets in parade formation, though dirty and footsore, all the fatigue was forgotten in the joy of the crowds, the music, and the rhythm of the Czech marching songs and the fall of marching feet. At night the city gave a dinner to the Czech and Russian officers, a very interesting proceeding. Unlike our arrangements, the eating and talking go on at the same time, and how the Russian likes to talk! I should judge he also likes to drink, for every new speech was the occasion for a toast to the Allies or the Czechs or the new Russian Government, while often one drink several times during one speech. O liberty, how much foolishness and toleration is committed in thy name! Some of the orators spoke several times as if they had forgotten something and the world would be poorer for not hearing those precious words. Some times a speaker not on the program would speak from his place, unannounced, especially a Cossack, who loves liquor as he love fighting. It is a marked characteristic of the Russian people that every man can talk on any subject at any hour, but there it stops. There is no action. At the dinner enthusiasm was at boiling point—freedom, patriotism, war against Germany, the overthrow of all traitors. And yet these are the men who let the Bolsheviks run things as they pleased. A few weeks ago, the Magyars got armed and ran wild and these men sat here and could not even help the Czechs prevent the Bolsheviks from blowing up tunnel 39. Just now they seem to be forgetting their party differences, but as a Russian officer who knows Russian life and politics, said, in two weeks they will be quarrelling among themselves, emphasizing their party differences, fighting for the chief places and forgetting all about the kissing and embracing that took place at the banquet.

NINE GAME SERIES BECOMES PERMANENT

IN SPITE OF ADVERSE CRITICISM MAGNATES DECIDE ON THIS.

In spite of severe criticism the major leagues have decided to make the world's series of nine games a permanent feature of the baseball season. When the national commission last summer changed the number of games from seven to nine the magnates were charged with greed and commercialism. After the series between the Cincinnati Reds and Chicago White Sox had been finished the prevailing opinion seemed to favor a return to the original plan. Practically all of the baseball critics agreed that the series, as played under the new conditions, had been entirely too long and that the question of supremacy could have been easily determined if seven games had been scheduled.

The world's series drew $800.000 in gate receipts and the attendance at the last game in Chicago tested the capacity of White Sox park. These important facts have not been lost sight of by the big league club owners, who argue that the fans did not grow tired and that the great revenue derived from the games not only enriched the players, but also provided funds with which to meet heavy financial obligations. The major leagues still owe nearly $400,000 to the former backers of the ill-fated Federal league, which was absorbed by organized baseball in 1915. The Baltimore Feds, as a result of their law suit against the major circuits, obtained a verdict for $250.000 early this year. This verdict has been appealed, but the case probably will drag along for some time before it can be reviewed by the United States supreme court, unless there is a compromise meanwhile.

By adhering to the world's series of nine games, therefore, the big leagues have kept their weather eyes wide open, with the confident belief that the interleague battles next October will clear them of all indebtedness. In that event the magnates figure that they will be on velvet when the campaign of 1921 begins. So there will be no change in the world's series.

EBER AND JOHNSON TO MEET AT LAST

LONG LOOKED FOR BOUT HAS BEEN ARRANGED FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Hamilton, Dec. 27.—Bobby Eber and Patsy Johnson will battle ten rounds in thte Grand Opera house on New Year's eve.

Matchmaker Hughes Hayes of the G.W.V.A. closed with both boys today, and the long-awaited clash has finally been clinched.

The preliminaries have not yet been arranged, but they will be quite in keeping with the star bout. The show will commence at 11 o'clock.

Reserved seats will be placed on sale at thet Grand on Monday morning.

It is two years or more since Patsy Johnson appeared in Hamilton. At that time he was just commencing on his career. Since then he has come along remarkably well and he is now meeting the cream of the bantam division. Only the other night he held Jack Sharkey to a close decision. That bout alone proves that he has developed into a fine boxer. And as Eber has improved equally as much, the fur should fly when they get together.

HAMILTON-TO-DUNDAS RACE

Large List of Entries Anticipated For This Event.

Indications are that the New Year day Hamilton-to-Dundas ten-mile race will attract a large entry list. The Toronto runners are very much interested and at least half a dozen will enter from there. St. Kits will also be well represented. Hamilton wil have close to a dozen starters.

Slippers Made From Hats.

Now it happened, over there, that, though army hats were plentiful enough, hospital bedroom slippers were very, very scarce. It took a long leap of salvage ingenuity to take apparel from the head of a man and put it on his feet. But that is what the army did. With dies it cut the brims of the old army hat, which was then usually on the road to ruin, into shape of the human foot, stitched two layers together, stitched them back and forth, as is done with Japanese slippers, turned the fragments into heels, turned the crown into tips, used bits of uniform for the uppers and sent off to the Red Cross a prodigious supply of bedroom slippers.—Donald Wilhelm in Harper's Magazine.

The Trouble Listener

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

He stood at the park entrance, a dark-haired, fashionably garbed man of slender build, and allowed his cane to swing repeatedly against the wall that embraced the terrace. Beneath a small, dignified mustache his lips twitched nervously, and his black eyes, set in a pale, almost emaciated face, roamed restlessly over the throng that was enjoying a late afternoon siesta.

From his position at the gate he could see two old men smoking corncob pipes contentedly, chatting aimlessly as they rested on a bench, against which a pair of crutches leaned. Nearby was a languid young woman with yellow hair shielded by a red parasol, gazing dreamily into space and now and then calling methodically: "Edward, come here," to a bare-legged youngster romping, heedless of her admonitions, on the lawn in the vicinity of "keep off" sign.

A grimy laborer, clamping his jaws placidly on plug and carrying a dented dinner pail, his shoulders hunched forward and his feet dragging after him, slouched into the park and paused near the entrance, where the wind had separated an abandoned newspaper into its several folios and scattered them over the grass.

The laborer glanced furtively about, stepped gingerly on the lawn, and a moment later moved out of sight along the walk, whistling listlessly no tune in particular, the newspaper folded compactly and protruding from a coat pocket.

Two girls passed near the observer with the cane. One was chewing viciously on gum, punctuating her remarks with frequent smacks of the lips. The other evidently had been weeping, for there were traces of tears in her eyes and she carried a wilted handkerchief.

"I'd tell 'im where tuh get off at," snapped the gum chewer. "Don't let 'im put anything like that over on yuh. The idear dockin' yuh a whole dollar jes 'cause yuh busted one measly li'l fift'-cent vase. Well, goo'by, I gotta hurry home 'n' get fed."

She hurried off through the park, while the other girl walked on down the street, soaking up more salt water with the tiny lace-fringed square of linen. All this ceased abruptly at the next corner, where she was joined by a young man and a ripple of laughter floated back.

The man with the cane smiled somewhat grimly and adjusted the stick on his arm.

"The inhabitants of this old world certainly do have their troubles," he sighed, and as he turned he collided with a tall, thin, blond young woman clad in pink.

"Pardon," he murmured, and then as he recognized her:

"Oh, hello, Evelyn. This is a surprise. What are you doing, that you can't see where you're going? Studying astronomy?"

Evelyn smiled sadly and took him by the arm.

"You're just the man I need," she asserted. "I'm in awful trouble—and it's all on account of my no-good husband. Joe, I wish I'd married you. Come in the park and I'll tell you all about it, and maybe you can advise me."

With an air of resignation he allowed himself to be piloted along the park walk. They were just in time to see and hear the amiable discussion of the two old men with corncob pipes break up in an angry, sputtering argument over the effect of the peace treaty on the map of Europe, or the high cost of living, or the batting percentage of the major league catchers.

As the man and the girl passed the young woman with the yellow hair, the youngster who had been romping on the lawn came running up to her, splitting the air with shrieks.

The young woman manifested great annoyance, stopped gazing at distant nothings, seized the bare-legged child by the arms and dumped him unceremoniously on the bench beside her.

"Now, what's the matter?" she demanded angrily. "Can't I have a minute's peace? What are you roaring about?"

"I bit my finder," he wailed, and let loose another torrent of tears.

"Shut up!" she commanded, and gave him a slap across the face. He became silent immediately, except for some half-suppressed sniffles, evidently through fear. She looked up as Evelyn and her escort were passing and nodded.

"Oh! How do you do, Mrs. Benjamin!" she said. "Did you ever see such a kid? I don't have a second of comfort. I wish he'd never been born. He's driving me crazy."

"She thinks she's having troubles," said Evelyn to her companion, as they went down the walk. "But her troubles are nothing compared to mine. Wait till I tell you. Come over to this bench."

As they were being seated she remarked:

"Where have you been the last three years? I heard you went West. And you look so pale. You must have been sick."

He nodded but did not vouchsafe a reply, simply moistening his dry lips with his tongue.

"I heard you were engaged to marry out there," she rattled on. "Well, I got married soon after you left; and we lived so happily till—"

Tears came to her eyes and a choking sob halted her conversation. She blew her nose and resumed:

"Ain't it queer, to see people like Mrs. Haines back there fretting and worrying about that little boy and thinking she's in misery; while here I am with something real to worry about. Oh, Joe, it's awful, that's what it is! Who would have thought two years ago—Oh, that husband of mine is a brute! Do you know what he's been doing? Well, he—he's been going out with another woman, that's what."

She broke down completely and the man placed a sympathetic hand on her shoulder.

"Don't feel so badly," he advised. "It can't be helped. Men sometimes do those things. Anyhow, it isn't as bad as if—"

She looked up and said almost savagely:

"Oh, it ain't? That's all right for you to say, Joe Carson—you who never had a care in your life, and loaded down with cash, too. I can't tell you how I'm suffering because of Walter's actions.

"You see, Walter never comes home to lunch; but I phoned his office at noon yesterday to see about some things for dinner, and the office girl told me he went out to eat with some woman. It made me furious, but I didn't say a word to Walter. I called again just a little while ago and the girl told me the same thing. So I came out to take a walk and decide whether to get a divorce or just leave him. That woman must be terrible—one of those vampires."

Another flood of tears broke forth and Carson looked about uneasily, hesitating to speak lest he say the wrong thing again.

The languid young woman and the bare-legged boy who was such a trial were passing. The youngster was laughing up at his mother as they tripped along, his hand in hers.

Evelyn looked after them and remarked sneeringly:

"Well, Mrs. Haines has got over her spell and the kid's finger ain't bothering him now. Ain't that the limit?"

She did not observe a middle-aged man and an elderly lady with gray hair who were sauntering through the park until they were close to the bench.

"Evelyn!" exclaimed the man in astonishment as he and his companion halted. "Why, how do you happen to be here?"

Evelyn leaped to her feet in surprise and confusion. However, in an instant she had regained her composure and was all smiles.

"Mrs. Wilcox," said the man, "allow me to introduce my wife. Evelyn, you remember me speaking about the buyer for the Clayborn milliners—our best customers. Well, this is she."

Evelyn beamed on Mrs. Wilcox.

"So pleased to meet you," she said warmly. "My husband has often spoken of you. Can't you come up to the house for dinner tonight? Oh, by the way—Mrs. Wilcox and Walter, dear—meet Mr. Carson, an old friend I happened to meet while getting some fresh air and sunshine."

Carson acknowledged the introduction and presently excused himself. Slowly he walked out of the park, swinging his cane, and entered the hotel across the street. He noticed in passing that the two old men again were smoking in peace.

"Troubles, troubles," he soliloquized. "Everybody has them, and yet eventually they seem to work out all right. But mine—there's no chance."

He nodded to the clerk, who handed him a telegram. With nervous fingers Carson tore open the envelope.

"Come home, Joe," it read. "Parks confessed to embezzlement. You are cleared. I'm ready for the wedding."

Carson looked out the window at the hurrying crowds, which he did not see.

"The world's just about all right," he murmured. "Dear girl, she stuck to me through it all."

LAND FOR NATIONAL FOREST

Presidential Proclamation Adds Many Acres in Wyoming to the Public Domain.

The president, on July 10, 1919, signed a proclamation adding 76,280 acres to the Wyoming national forest. This increase in area was authorized by the act of August 16, 1916, which provided for the addition of 6,700 acres, known as the Fontenelle addition, in the southeastern part of the Wyoming forest, and by the act of February 25, 1919, which provided for the extension of the western boundary of the forest to the Idaho-Wyoming state line by the inclusion of 70,740 acres.

The lands added are rolling, well watered and pretty well covered with a forest growth of aspen, Douglas fir and Engelmann spruce. The Wyoming national forest now has a total acreage of 975,988.94 acres.

Wild Animals That Are Passing.

In former days one of the most numerous of our American game animals was the "prong-horn" antelope. It has been well-nigh exterminated, and though there are some in the Wichita forests and other national game preserves, they are sadly few. It is feared that this beautiful species must inevitably pass away. Wherever there are mountain sheep, on federal reservations utmost efforts are made to protect them. Their shyness is proverbial, and and yet in the Uncompagre National forest (Colorado) they have acquired such confidence that actually they come into the town of Ouray in the winter time to be fed.

Simplicity of character is the natural result of profound thought.

Norma Talmadge Wears Many Beautiful Gowns

Beautiful Norma Talmadge further substantiates the statement that she is the best-dressed woman on the screen in her latest Select Picture "The Way of a Woman," which comes on Monday next to the Empire theatre.

Never has Miss Talmadge been afforded an opportunity to wear so many beautiful gowns, hats and wraps—all creations of art—as she is in this latest picture, an adaptation of the famous Eugene Walter play, "Nancy Lee." Bearing herself with her customary queenly grace, wearing her clothes like few women know how to wear them, Miss Talmadge presents a picture that would enchant the most blase person in the world.

In a navy blue tricotine dress, embroidered in a Japanese design of heavy gold thread, this charming star presents a picture of grace and elegence. Anather one of the many beautiful dresse sthat Miss Talmadge wears in "The Way of a Woman" is a white serge dress, large white pearl buttons and a sailor collar of Kolinsky being its only trimming.

One of the costumes that Miss Talmadge wears to a formal evening affair in this picture of love and sacrifice is one of the most exquisite creations ever designed by human mind. Her gown is of orchid colored embossed taffeta with shoulder straps of ropes of pearls and a cape of many layers of pastel shades of georgette with a collar of long ostrich feathers.

Some of the other gowns that Miss Talmadge wears in this picture are a one-piece blue serge dress, a turquoise blue georgette crepe dress and a white net and lace dress, all of which enhance the beauty of this versatile star.

ERNI MARKS STARTS SERIES OF SIX SHOWS

OPENED LAST NIGOT TO FULL BOUSE WITH "LITTLE PEGGY MOORE."

Ernie Marks, with his popular company of actors, including musicians and comedians, opened their five-day stay at the Grand Opera House last night when they presented to a large house "Little Peggy Moore."

The play was rendered in the usual finished style of Ernie Marks' shows and pleased the audience just as much as when this famous actor presented himself before the public in the years gone by. Ernie Marks was always popular here and gained more popularity with the theatre-going public last night.

The five-day stay, including today's matinee, promises to be a record-breaker in attendance, and the public are assured of a first-class show at each performance at the usual popular prices. Few actors have become so popular as Ernie Marks, and fewer still have for so long maintained a hold upon the theatre-going public.

SISSON ENDORSED

Editor Review.

Dear Sir.—I notice that Mr. C. E. Sisson is a candidate for the Utilities Commission and am delighted to learn that we are to have a chance to vote for a man of Mr. Sisson's experience, mental calibre, and well-known integrity of character.

The Commission is now composed of a lawyer and a merchant, and it is self evident that with the big engineering problems to be faced by the Commission involving the expenditure of large sums of money, a man of Mr. Sisson's business experience along engineering lines is essential at this time. Now is the time for the electors to put the right man in the right place.

Yours truly,
PROGRESSIVE PETERBORO.

CONTRADICTIONS

charges if my learned friend wishes it," replied Mr. Gordon.

This concluded this argument, and the remainder of the witness's evidence was the same as she gave at the previous hearing.

Vass at Home.

Mrs. Vass, wife of defendant, swore that on the morning that the bill of sale had been drawn up her husband had been home between the hours of 9 and 11.

She swore that the only occasion on which her children (the next witnesses) had been told they would have to give evidence was at the supper table on the evening of the last hearing of the case. They had never been told what they were going to be asked.

Then Thelma Vass, the 11-year-old daughter of the defendant, was called to give her testimony.

"Do you know Timothy Bowler?" was asked her.

"I do."

"Did you ever have a ride in his car?"

"Yes, twice."

"Who was with you on the last occasion?"

"Edie, Tim, my brother and I."

"Where did you go?"

"To the corner of Hunter and George."

"What happened there?"

"Edie and Tim went upstairs together?"

"Was your father there?"

"No, he was at home."

"Why were you not at school that day?" asked Mr. Gordon.

"Because it was wet and I had no rubbers," replied witness.

"Who told you you would have to give evidence here?"

"My father."

"Did he tell you what you would be asked about?"

"No, he did not."

"Did you tell anyone at all what you were going to say here today?"

"No."

"Did you and your brother ever talk it over?"

"No. I never talked about it to anybody."

"Did you hear your mother and father talking about this case at home at any time?"

"No."

Story Verified.

The last witness in the case was Arthur Vass, son of defendant, who was asked practically the same questions, and responded with practically the same answers as his sister.

The argument was adjourned until this morning.

SETTLEMENT REACHED OVER KINMOUNT BRIDGE

EACH COUNTY WILL PAY 50 p. c. OF ITS UPKEEP FROM THIS DATE.

The much disputed question of the upkeep of the Kinmount Bridge was finely settled between the counties of Victoria and Peterborough yesterday.

Warden McIntosh, Councillors Nichols, Easson and Squire and Mr. E. A. Peck, and County Clerk Elliott, spent a good many hours debating the question with the committee from Victoria County.

Although the entire bridge is now within the limits of Victoria County they requested the County of Peterborough to pay 75 per cent of the upkeep, while they pay 25 per cent.

Their argument was that on a test day thirty-six people of this county used the bridge to 14 from Victoria County.

But the Peterborough delegation maintained that that idea was contrary to precedent. Take the South Monaghan Bridge. Five hundred people come from South Monaghan across that bridge into Peterborough to one that goes the other way. But that is no reason why Souh Monaghan should be responsible for 500 times the Peterborough share of the upkeep, they maintained.

They do not demand this because it is an asset to the county to have people coming in to do business. In the same way, by their own argument, the Peterborough delegation insisted that Victoria County should at least pay 60 per cent of the upkeep of the Kinmount Bridge.

They won their point and each county will pay equal shares from this date and the bridge, which has been in a disagreeable condition will be put in a state of repair.

GORDON FOR THE MAN WHO WORKS

The Editor of The Review,
City.

Dear Sir:—An explanation is due to the workingmen of the City of Peterborough as to why Mr. E. F. Mason was not nominated as a candidate for the Utilities Commission. He was endorsed by the Trades and Labor Council and something peculiar has taken place which should be explained by the committee who recommended the Trades and Labor candidate.

In addition to that I think Mr. G. N. Gordon should have been endorsed. For a great many years he has been a faithful friend to the workingman. Personally I know of many cases where he has stood up for the man who had no work, and he will always tell what he thinks, and fight for what he believes is right. I think the Trades and Labor Council made a mistake in not endorsing Mr. Gordon too because every man in the shop where I am working intends to support him.

Yours truly,
UNION.

SISSON FOR UTILITIES COMMISSION

29

TO THE ELECTORS OF THE CITY OF PETERBOROUGH:
Ladies and Gentlemen:

It is considered by many that Peterborough has reached that stage of development when a man of business engineering experience is required on the Utilities Commission, and, after a good deal of pressure, I have decided to allow my name to come before the electors. As is well known, we have now a water system, which, upon completion of the proposed Filtration Plant, will be one of the best in the Province, and a light and power system which, with some improvements may be made a credit to the city. In order to effectively continue the development of these systems, it is very essential that one member of the Commission have the business and technical experience which only an engineer has acquired.

Peterborough is my home city, in the development and welfare of which I am keenly interested. For many years I have been connected with its largest manufacturing firm, and, if elected, will be glad to place my experience at the service of the city. I feel certain that I cap give the present Commissioners valuable assistance, and will co-operate with them to the fullest possible extent.

The Water and Power Systems of the city are among its most valuable assets, and the expenditures on them call for the most careful consideration. While the detailed engineering is, of course, attended to by the operating staff of the Commission, my professional work has given me the opportunity of becoming thoroughly conversant with both the problems of engineering and the question of costs which the Commission must carefully solve, and I feel confident that I can assist in carrying out the necessary development to the system so as to give the most efficient service with the lowest expenditure.

The Trades and Labor Council have seen fit to endorse my cnadidature, although not a member of their organization, and were big enough and broad-minded enough to leave me free to exercise my best judgment and independent action should I be elected to the Commission.

My desire is to serve the best interests of the city with the view of helping to make it not only one of the first manufacturing cities of the Dominion, but one of the most desirable cities in which to live.

Respectfully yours,

C. E. SISSON

INQUEST OPENS ON REMAINS OF VICTIMS OF SHOOTING AT DUBLIN

Details of Fray are Not Quite Clear Many Reports Being in Circulation—No Evidence at Inquest That Vice-Regal Lodge was Attached.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Dublin, Dec. 29.—Evidence given at the inquest today on the bodies of Lieut. Boast and a civilian, killed near the Vice Regal Lodge in the shooting affray Sunday, showed that the Lieutenant with two soldiers of the guard went on patrol duty at three a.m. and saw a man in Phoenix park, who refused to stop when challenged. Shots were fired and the officer fell. The soldiers swore they saw six civilians in all who succeeded in escaping. The civilian was identified as Lawrence Kennedy, a baker's laborer, of Lucan.

Details of the Shooting.

An officer of the guard and one member of a band of intruders were killed early this morning in a shooting affray in Phoenix Park, a short distance from the viceregal lodge. In some quarters the belief was expressed that an attack was in preparation against the lodge.

About eight men are believed to have made up the band of intruders. Four arrests were made.

At 1:30 o'clock Sunday morning shots were heard in the neighborhood of the viceregal lodge. They continued intermittently at intervals for nearly an hour in that portion of Phoenix Park between the lodge and the magazine. There apparently was no direct attack on the viceregal lodge itself. The inmates of the lodge at first thought the shooting was connected with some sort of holiday revelry.

As the firing persisted, however, a military guard consisting of an officer and two men, turned out and searched the viceregal grounds. Finding nothing unusual there they went through the park near the main road. While traversing the centre of the park they engaged in a sharp exchange of firing with the intruders, and Lieut. Boast, who was leading his men, fell, shot through the heart.

One of the attacking party also was killed. He was a civilian about forty years of age. According to some reports, he was wearing portions of a soldier's uniform. No weapon was found on or near his body, and up to the present the man's identity has not been ascertained. Pools of blood were found on the scene, which is about half a mile from the lodge. After the shooting the intruders decamped in the darkness. The four men arrested were not taken into custody near the scene of the shooting, but were apprehended as they were leaving the park about two hours later. They denied having had any connection with the affray.

Machine Gun Brought Up.

After the shooting the military brought a machine gun to the scene. This was fired in the direction which it was supposed the men had taken. Nobody was hit by the bullets.

Killed by Own Party.

Dublin, Dec. 29.— Lieut. Boast, the officer of the guard, who met death in Sunday night's shooting affray near the Vice Regal Lodge in Phoenix Park, was accidentally killed by a bullet from his own patrol party," it was found by the jury at the inquest into the Lieutenant's death held today.

Evidence at The Inquest.

Private Riddle testified that Kennedy drew an automatic pistol with which he shot Lieutenant Boast in the breast. The witness added that the corporal of the guard, one soldier and Kennedy, fired at the same time. The Lieutenant shouted "they've got me." Pte. Barnwell swore that Kennedy tried to catch Lieutenant Boast by the throat. One of the soldiers who went to the Lieutenant's relief said he saw a man lying on the ground. When the witness tried to turn him over the man fired two shots at him, whereupon the witness shot him in the neck. Stories of various military witnesses differed materially regarding the details of the affair. The testimony established, however, that no pistol was found on Kennedy's body or near the place where it lay. The Coroner, in summing up, emphasized the fact that the bullet which killed Lieutenant Boast produced in court, was proved to be a military bullet.

PREMIER BORDEN MAY GO TO SOUTH AFRICA

REPORTED SIR WM. HEARST MAY BE APPOINTED TO SENATE.

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—Sir Robert Borden plans to leave Ottawa during the first week in January. His destination is not yet announced, but one suggestion is that he may go to South Africa in company with Viscount Jellicoe on his flagship. It is that Dominion which the Admiral is to visit next on his Empire-circling tour.

The understanding here is that during the absence of the Premier Sir George Foster will act in his stead. As the senior Privy Councillor he is naturally in line for the position, while there are certain reasons why the choice should not fall elsewhere, in view of the political possibilities of the future. Sir George, for example is not credited with any aspirations for the Premiership if a change be necessitated.

If the appointments are not actually announced before Sir Robert leaves, it is believed that arrangements will be made for filling the Senate vacancies, at least those in Ontario and Quebec.

For the Quebec vacancy to succeed Senator Landry, the names most prominently mentioned are Hon. Albert Sevigny, General Sir David Watson and Lorne C. Webster. The Ontario Senatorship is likely to go to the North, and while W. R. Smythe and J. J. Carrick, ex-M. P.'s, are more prominently to the fore, there is an impression that former Premier Hearst, if still inclining to politics, may have it.

WOMEN MAGISTRATES APPOINTED IN ENGLAND

FORM ADVISORY COMMITTEE TO LORD HIGH CHANCELLOR TO NAME SUCCESSORS.

London, Dec. 29.—Seven women have been appointed Magistrates, in pursuance of an Act of Parliament making members of their sex eligible to such an office. They are: Mrs. David Lloyd George, wife of the Prime Minister; the Marchioness of Crewe, younger daughter of a former Prime Minister, the Earl of Rosebery; the Marchioness of Londonderry, who recently opened a political salon; Mrs. Humphrey Ward, a famous author; Mrs. Sidney Webb, who has been active in investigating social and industrial conditions, upon which she has written important works, and who has served on Government mission; Miss Elizabeth Haldane, (sister of Lord Haldane), who has been conspicuous for many years in welfare and educational work, and Miss Gertrude Truckwell.

They are to constitute also a Women's Advisory Committee to advise the Lord High Chancellor as to the fitness of othed women for magisterial office when vacancies occur.

These appointments were made by the Lord High Chancellor (Lord Birkenhead, better known as Sir Frederick E. Smith), the highest judicial officer of the British Crown, who appoints all judges as well as Justices of the Peace. He regards women as especially qualified for work in children's courts.

LABOR MEN PREPARING TO MEET GOVERNMENT

ANNUAL CONFERENCE WITH DOMINION CABINET TO TAKE PLACE JANUARY 8TH.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Dec. 29.—Canadian Organized Labor is preparing for its annual interview with the Dominion Government, which will take place January 8th. Chief among the requests will be one for legislation reducing the hours of labor. Labor men emphasize the fact that in the Versailles treaty Canada has already recognised the principle of the eight-hour day or the forty-eight-hour week, and further, that the Government delegates at the International Conference voted for the international convention providing for an eight-hour day for industrial workers. As to whether the executive of the Labor Congress will press the terms of this convention remains to be determined, but it is highly probable that it will decide in favor of arging the 44-hour week.

FLOODS IN EUROPE THREATEN DISASTER

RIVERS IN FRANCE, BELGIUM AND GERMANY SWOLLEN BY CONTINUOUS RAINS

Paris, Dec. 29.—Rivers throughout France, swollen by continued rains, threaten disaster to many sections. Navigation on the Seine is already very difficult, and if the innundation continues, traffic will be forced to stop. In Eastern France the rivers, especially the Meurthe, continue to rise. In Belgium the situation has been made worse by new floods on the Sambre and the Meuse. German advices state that the Rhine tributaries are still rising.

DUTCH STEAMER LOST; ENTIRE CREW PERISH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Halifax, Dec. 29;—The Dutch steamer Anton Van Driel has been wrecked west of Cape Race with the loss of the entire crew.

The Van Driel struck on the eastern head of Schotts at the mouth of St. Mary's Bay, Nfld., at 1.20 this morning. Some of the boats were launched but they never reached the shore. Those who did not take to the boats are still on the wreck with absolutely no hope of their being rescued. The news of the disaster reached Halifax this afternoon in a wireless message to the Marine and Fisheries Department from Michael Mayrick, lightkeeper at Cape Freels in the immediate vicinity of the scene of the disaster.

WHISKEY AGENT FEARS LYNCHING

THREE MEN IN BROOKLYN ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF SELLING POISON.

UNDERTAKER A MEMBER OF FIRM

"KING PIN" OF TRAFFIC BEGS POLICE PROTECTION FROM DUPED CUSTOMERS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Dec. 29;—Adolph Panarelli, a Manhattan liquor dealer, John Romanelle, a Brooklyn undertaker, and Samuel Salesby, a Brooklyn druggist, have been arrested by the authorities and this morning faced charges before the United States Commissioner in connection with the spreading of wood alcohol as whiskey, through five states in the last ten days, death and blindness following in its wake. It is claimed that Romanelli is the "King Pin" in the wood alcohol traffic.

Panarelli, according to the Federal agents, said when arrested "I am glad you got me. I will tell all I know but for God's sake don't send me to Connecticut. My name has been published in all papers and it would mean certain death."

He believed that twenty barrels of "Whiskey" were shipped to Hartford each containing between forty and fifty gallons. The price was from a thousand to fifteen hundred dollars a barrel.

Women Among Victims.

According to the latest advices nearly one hundred persons died during the past sixty hours and scores are suffering from paralysis and blindness due to drinking wood alcohol "Whiskey." In New England where the toll was the highest sixty five deaths have been reported in districts embracing Chicopee, Holyoke, Springfield, Hadley, Greenfield and Thompsonville. [illegible]-six deaths are reported, including three women. Fourteen arrests of those alleged to have handled liquor have been made and others are expected. Investigations conducted by the police have revealed many violations of the prohibition law. Many illicit stills "kitchen bars" and private stock from which sales had been made were discovered.

The date for exchange of ratification is still uncertain nothing having been heard from the Germans in response to the latest Allied note. The officials expect answer to morrow.

RUSSELL LAUDED BY FRENCH AS MARTYR

DEMONSTRATION MADE BY RECORD CROWD AT PASTOR IVEN'S LABOR CHURCH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Dec. 29.—"I take it that your coming here tonight is a tribute to Bob Russell," said Rev. W. Ivens, one of the eight strike leaders, addressing a record audience in the Central Labor Church last night. Every reference to Russell was applauded. A wild demonstration followed an exclamation by a man in the hall that "Jesus Christ was a martyr and so is Bob Russell." Concluding his address, Ivens said: "In the sight of judge and jury, Russell is condemned a guilty man, but in the sight of God, he is innocent."

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPERS MAROONED ON ISLAND

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Dec. 29.—Stopped by a huge barrier of ice fields, the gallant Canadian Government ice breaker Montcalm had to abandon yesterday her dash to Belle Isle to provide food for the colony of light-house keepers and wireless men who are marooned there with scant provisions. Captain John Hearn on his arrival at North Sydney, reported that it was utterly impossible to break through the ice barrier that is encircling Belle Isle. Another effort will be made to reach the island. It is thought that the colony has some food, and no serious fear for their safety is entertained because of the abundance of wild duck about the island.

There has also been installed a shingle machine for turning out heading and shingles, while another department will produce lath. The output of the mill will be about 18,000 feet of lumber a day. The building is 24 x 84 feet and it is expected operations will start in a few days. Mr. Mann has been in the lumber and planing mill business in Peterborough for many years, and is well known to the trade throughout the Midland district.

NEW CHURCH SINGER COMES TO PETERBORO

The services in All Saints' Church yesterday were largely of a musical character and were greatly enjoyed by the large congregations at both services. In the morning the soloist was Mrs. W. McKee Bingham contralto, who sang Alleluia! Christ is Born, most beautifully, is possessed of a rich full voice which she uses with artistic effect. She will make a welcome addition to the musical ranks of the city. In the evening the choir sang a number of Carols, featuring solo verses by the boys of the choir and an obligato by the boys to the rest of the choir produced a well balanced effect. After the Carols as a final number, the full choir sang the Gloria from Mozart's 12th Mass which gave a chance for them to show their ability in ensemble singing and was a brilliant conclusion to a memorable day. Miss Flowers very ably presided at the organ and the whole service reflected great credit on the choir and its conductor, Mrs. G. E. Chandler.

PUBLIC WILL PAY MORE FOR BREAD AS RESULT OF NEW WHEAT PRICE

But Millers and Bakers Will Not Suffer Toronto Business Man Says—Price of Wheat From $2.30 to $2.80 Bushel Flour to be Imported From United States.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Dec. 29.—The public will pay higher for bread, but neither millers nor bakers will lose money by the advance ordered by the Canadian Wheat Board from $2.30 to $2.80 per bushel in store at terminal elevators. This is the opinion given today by Hedley Shaw, of the Hedley Shaw Milling Company.

Increase of 50 Cents a Bushel.

Effective from midnight, Dec. 27, the Canadian Wheat Board orders that the price of Manitoba wheat to mill, in Canada be raised from $2.30 per bushel to $2.80 per bushel in store at public terminal elevators at Fort William or Port Arthur. Another regulation increases the maximum wholesale price of government standard spring wheat flour from $10.90 per barrel to $13.15 per barrel basis, f.o.b., cars Montreal.

In connection with the above advances in the price of wheat and flour James Stewart, chairman of the Canadian Wheat Board, states that in order that the consuming public may have advantage of the supply of cheaper flour in the United States, permits will be issued for the importation of the American product.

Price of Bread Goes Up.

As a result of an order issued by the Canadian Wheat Board at Winnipeg raising the price of Manitoba wheat from $2.30 to $2.80 a bushel, and of standard spring wheat flour from $10.90 per barrel to $13.15 per barrel, the price of bread in Toronto will be advanced from 11 cents to 12 1-2 cents a loaf.

Mark Bredin, president of the Canada Bread Company, made the announcement, adding that even if the price of flour had not been lifted the company would probably have found it necessary to advance the price of bread to some extent to allow a margin of profit. The wheat board's decision to permit imports into Canada of this cheaper flour available in the United States, will not relieve the situation so far as bread is concerned according to Mr. Bredin, as the flour mentioned is the product of the southern states and is too soft for other uses than the making of confectionery.

Mr. Hedley Shaw, president of the Maple Leaf Milling Company, stated last night that he believed the increase in flour would be greater than the price established by the wheat board ($13.15) and that it might go to $13.40 per bushel. The millers are of the opinion that the increase mentioned by the board would not bring a return commensurate with the extra outlay.

CANADIAN FLEET OF SIX CRUISERS IS FAVORED

LORD JELLICO'S REPORT EXPECTED TO ADVOCATE THIS FOR DOMINION.

Ottawa, Dec. 29;—The report of Lord Jellico on the naval policy best suited to the new conditions in Canada is expected to be in the hands of the Government between now and the end of the year.

During the past month the Admiral has had frequent conferences with a sub-committee of the Cabinet and, as previously indicated, the idea of a local navy is likely to be favored. This was the position taken by Sir Robert Borden at the 1918 conference when he cited Australia as an example of the successful working of such a navy in conjunction with the Imperial navy.

It is reported here unofficially that the Admiral will recommend a Canadian fleet of six cruisers, five destroyers, a dozen submarines, several sea planes and a small fleet of torpedo boats.

FINED FOR CRUELTY TO A DUMB ANIMAL

ENNISMORE FARMER MUST PAY MORE ATTENTION TO COMFORT OF HIS BEASTS.

An Ennismore farmer pleaded guilty to a charge of cruelty to animals, in police court this morning, and a fine of $10 and costs was imposed.

On Saturday, Dec. 20th, Flynn drove a herd of cattle to this city, intending to take them to the C.P.R. freight sheds for shipping. Around the neck of one of the animals, which had evidently been causing trouble, he had fastened a chain to which he had attached a strap wound around the foreleg.

The animal's condition and suffering was noticed by a retired farmer of the city, and the police notified. It was alleged the skin was torn or worn off the greater part of the leg, causing much suffering to the unfortunate beast.

THOMAS TENDLE FINED FOR AUTO SPEEDING

PAYS $10 AND COSTS AS DO TWO OTHERS WHO WERE CHARGED WITH BEING DRUNK.

Thomas George Tendle, in spite of his protest of innocence, was fined $10 and $3.85 costs at police court this morning for driving his car at a greater rate of speed than the law allows.

[illegible]tive Cookman swore that at 8.25 p. m. on Dec. 22 he saw car number 91372 pass the corner of Water and Charlotte Streets at between 30 and 35 miles an hour. He did not see who or how many were in the car as it kept him occupied reading the number.

The accused who was not assisted by a solicitor claimed that he had started from Manning's garage and could not have reached a speed of twenty miles an hour in that distance.

Sgt. Blade swore that he saw the car pass the corner of Simcoe St. going over twenty miles an hour and the word of the officers was accepted by the magistrate and the fine imposed.

Celebrate During Week-End.

Fred Bradley and Sylvan House were fined $14.10 each for being under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

They were revving themselves a nuisance in public places, although they were not together, and fell into the hands of constables who brought them to the police cells where they remained until their fines were imposed this morning.

THE JUNTA CANDIDATE FOR ALDERMAN.

NO ONE DOUBTS that Mr. G. N. Gordon is politically ambitious, and there are few who will question his astuteness in the matter of paving his own way for future preferment. Opportunity never knocks at his door in vain.

Sharing as we always have in these estimates of Mr Gordon, it strikes us now that he is making the tactical blunder of his career in offering himself as the junta candidate for alderman, and by that term we mean as a candidate who has been chosen by some power hidden behind the throne; in a word, a candidate who has been selected by a self-constituted nominating committee and chosen, too, for the avowed purpose of splitting the vote of the Labor men. Mr. Gordon has always posed as the champion of Labor, but by the same token he has associated himself with every progressive move ever made in the city. Excessive modesty has never been one of his handicaps in the effort to get into the front rank.

The support of Labor has been the unknown quantity in Mr. Gordon's public career. Just to what extent he could build on it has always been a problem. Everybody believes that Mr. Gordon would have been the Liberal candidate in the last election for the Legislature if the Labor party had suppressed their own ambition and favored Mr. Gordon with an endorsation. He would have accepted a nomination for the Mayoralty, according to the records, if Ald. Taylor had consented to pull out, relying for success on the hope that the workingmen would rally to his standard. The strategic blunder which people see in Mr. Gordon's present candidature lies in the fact that he is putting himself in the field in opposition to the very element that he has wooed so assiduously ever since the political bee got under his headgear.

But Mr. Gordon has introduced a spectacular element into the civic campaign. As usual, in all such contests, he becomes the central figure. Everyone concedes that he has the equipment for rendering the city excellent aldermanic service, if he is elected, provided always that he finds it possible to spare the necessary time from his private business. But even if he is elected, his success may rise up against him when he tries for a higher prize in the future. The voters to whom he offers his paternalism will not forget the occasion on which he practically threw them into the air. If he fails of election Thursday, that should eb sufficient to satisfy even himself that the man who pins his faith to class support too often builds on shifting sand. Still, in these days of political surprises, anything is likely to happen.

WHY NOT BE FAIR?

THE GLOBE, in sarcastic vein, says that the Union Government, by removing the restrictions on the importation of liquor into Ontario, has rendered it unnecessary for the members of the Liberty League to nominate candidates in the next election.

Why cannot the Globe play the game fair? The Union Government is not responsible for the B. N. A. Act that gives the various provinces jurisdiction over the liquor question. The Union Government is bound by the Constitution. The embargo on importing liquor was given effect as a war measure by order-in-Council, and was to be cancelled at soon as peace was declared.

The Globe has, ever since the signing o' the armistice, been clamoring for the nullification of orders-in-Council and for the redemption of pledges given during the war. In this case two of its demands have been allowed, and still it is not satisfied and cannot restrain itself from attempting to score a politcal point with the temperance element.

If Ontario is anxious to prevent the importation of liquor, the way is open. A plebiscite is all that is required, and the Federal machinery will be at once set in motion to give effect to the mandate of the majority.

THE LABOR CASE AT WINNIPEG.

IF R. B. RUSSELL, the Winnipeg strike leader, who has been sent to prison for two years for the part he took in the general strike in that city last spring, ever advocated that the soviet form of government, which is synonymous with rioting and bloodshed as operated in Russia and other European countries, be substituted for the Canadian system, then no further evidence is required that Russell is insane. The place for such a man is a lunatic asylum rather than a penitentiary.

No form of government ever devised by human mind is without its redeeming features. There is little or nothing in this world that is entirely bad. Even the soviet system, if submitted to microscopic test, may reveal its worthy qualities. But to advocate the rule of the mob for a safe and sane administration that makes life, liberty and happiness secure for the masses is a vastly different proposition from suggesting changes and improvements in existing conditions.

The charge of the judge who presided at the trial in Winnipeg is likely to become a historic document. It is one of the most vital importance to the people of Canada, that is provided it can survive review by higher tribunals, a review which at present seems likely to be made. If the judge's rulings are upheld, then trades unionism has been deprived of its most effective weapon, and the freedom of speech supposedly the birthright of every Britisher appears to have been all these years considerable of a delusion.

Judge Metcalfe practically denies the right of workingmen to strike in a body. One man may quit work, but if he attempts to induce others to join him in this step, then he is guilty of treason. If that is good law, then the number of times that law has been violated is simply appalling. If it is retroactive in its scope, then there is not sufficient jail room in Canada to accommodate the offenders.

According to the ruling of Judge Metcalfe, any man who persistently criticizes the Government of Canada and advocates the substitution of another is guilty of treason. That being the case, some leading Canadians have in the past sailed close to the wind. What about the anti-Imperialists, the advocates of national independence or annexation?

Criticizing governments has been a popular journalistic and individual pastime since governments were first formed and has been carried on with impunity since the world emerged from the age of terrorism. Is that right to be abrogated now?

Accepting the rulings of Judge Metcalfe, the Winnipeg jury had no course left them than the one they adopted. But it is nothing new for judges to err in their interpretations of the statutes or in their common law findings. The issues involved in this case are too serious to be left to the decision of one man. The public will not be willing to accept Judge Metcalfe's rulings as final until they have been upheld by the highest tribunal in Canada. In the present temper of the Winnipeg people, it was too much to hope for judicial proceedings entirely free from the influence of local prejudice. Had a change of venue been granted and the case heard on neutral grounds, there would be less of anything like justification for criticism of the result.

6 AN INAPT COMPARISON.

> Nothing is easier in Toronto than to forget Toronto. This used to be a small place. It has become a metropolitan city. Middle aged men recall that the public characters of the city were as recognizable in the flesh by as large a proportion of the citizens as, say, the aldermen of Peterborough are to their constituents. Relatively, everybody knew every street in the city.—Toronto World.

THE COMPARISON is far from apt. Peterborough is by no means the small town that the provincial-minded and untravelled Toronto paper appears to imagine. There are hundreds of voters in the city who, we are certain, could not identify say half of the members of the present Council. Hundreds, too, could not recognize by sight half a dozen of the new candidates for the Council. This is due not so much to the fact that Peterborough has outgrown village social conditions, but rather to the indifference to public affairs to which the world refers. The sessions of the City Council are held before an empty gallery except for an occasional deputation, the members of which state their business and retire. During the past year, however, the Labor men have had a committee sitting through the proceedings as so many sentinels. But the general public appear to remain as apathetic as ever, no matter how important may be the business matters before the aldermen.

NOTES AND COMMENT.

MANY CANDIDATES have burning lights, but few possess bushel measures.

• • • • •

LLOYD GEORGE proposes peace for Ireland, and, as usual, the ructions start again.

• • • • •

LIGHTNING may hit the highest point, but lightning cannot tell which price in the entire category is at the top.

• • • • •

FAMOUS WORDS of famous men—"at the urgent solicitation of my friends I have consented to run for alderman."

• • • • •

WHEAT AND FLOUR show an advance. Everything these days is going up except the mercury in the thermometer.

• • • • •

IT HAS ALWAYS been a hard matter to raise turkeys, but an easy task when compared to raising the present price asked for them.

• • • • •

NOW IS THE TIME for all good citizens to make up their minds to vote for both bylaws and to give thanks for the opportunities.

• • • • •

APART FROM the fact that it is an excellent chance to test his strength with Labor, Mr. Gordon's candidature has no political significance.

• • • • •

STICK TO the tried old horse while crossing a stream. Don't swap either while making your way from shore to shore on a half-finished bridge.

• • • • •

ROCKEFELLER may scatter his millions, but that is nothing to the charity of the man who denied himself to help make a merry Christmas for the poor.

• • • • •

ANYWAY, there is more snap in the civic mampaign than there has been for several years. There is nothing like a well-defined issue to arouse public interest.

• • • • •

FROM THE REVIEW of 1930—"From the figures just compiled by Assessor Henry, the assessed value of property in Peterborough is $35,475,293, and the population of the city is 50,721."

• • • • •

"PATRONIZE home products," says the Government, and then, by way of example, talks of importing one thousand school teachers from England. A Canadian supply can be obtained by paying the price.

IF YOUR Christmas dinner was not up to the usual standard, do not grieve. Better is a dinner of herbs paid for than a banquet of turkey at fifty cents a pound with a record of the sale on the dealer's books.

THE FACT THAT so many men poisoned themselves at Christmas, drinking substitutes for which they paid fancy prices, proves that even at the rate of one a minute the members of a certain species are born faster than they die off.

OPINIONS OF OTHER EDITORS.

ON WITH THE DANCE.

(Orillia Packet.)

A paragraph in one of the Toronto papers reads: "The Anglican Young People's Association gave a very acceptable presentation of 'Macbeth' at St. Barnabas' parish hall last night. Before the principal event of the evening there was a short musical program, including music and fancy dancing." The day is not far distant, one may imagine when the young lady who wears the shortest skirts and kicks the highest will be esteemed the most pious. What a lark it would be should one of the girls, in an excess of religious fervor, kick off a "Lord Bishop's" ecclesiastical hat.

The Riverside Park By-Law

(By Dr. E. E. Harvey, Chairman City Planning Commission.)

It seems to me when the citizens awake to the advantages of having a beautiful river-bounded park right in the centre of the city, a step from the business section, there should be no trouble in passing the by-law. Since, by statute, street cars are not allowed to run on Sunday in cities of less than 50,000 of a population, a manifest injustice to the poor man, we cannot hope to have even a limited street car service for many years to come, the necessity of central parks where the tired working-man and his family may enjoy out-door rest under the shade, amid enjoyable surroundings, is evident.

I may say, without betraying any confidence, that if the by-law passes, and this beautiful river-front is preserved to the future City and the future Citizens, the dream of the City Plan Commission is to have a most beautiful park, terraced where necessary, level where possible, adequately planted with trees, interspersed with flower beds and ponds, the three sister islands solidified and connected with rustic bridges, the whole variegated with inlets, bays and connecting water stretches, which, tho' miniature, should be surpassing beautiful.

Now, what are the objections to the purchase of the property? Let us meet these fairly, giving each one due weight. Briefly they are:—(1) the price is too high, the amount too much.

(2) there are plenty of parks without it.

(3) we cannot afford it.

With regard to the first I may say that if each generation lives to itself only, receiving nothing from the generation immediately preceding it, and handing down nothing to that following it, this objection would have much weight. But the reverse is the case. We are enjoying right now the heritage our fore-fathers sacrificed to obtain and handed down to us: and also we have to assume the rectification of the mistakes they made. One of the mistakes they made was the neglect to preserve for civic uses its most valuable and beautiful asset, its waterfront. This heritage, if preserved, will become as the years pass, increasingly beautiful, increasingly valuable. Instead of being the fringe of railway tracks, the ends of backyards, the home and seed-bed of every weed in Ontario, revolting, garish, hideous, as it is now, it will become the terrace edges of lovely parks, wharves where all kinds of small water-craft may congregate, the most charming drive-ways in Ontario, such that no city has more beautiful.

And what could be more democratic. Here the rich and the poor are on an absolute level, they may enjoy equally the sun and the shade and the breezes tempered by the water, equally may rest their tired nerves, and delight their tired eyes, equally see their little ones disport themselves in healthy surroundings.

This is sentimental, but it is the sort of sentiment that is a Citizen's and a City's most valuable asset. The sentiment of a City is either its greatest glory or its grandest danger. It is always the most impelling thing, the strongest motive power in any Civic action. And any sentiment that assists in painting the rose of health on the wan cheeks of Want and Disease ought to be applauded to the skies, and will be by all sane men and women.

It is calculated that the City really pays about $16,000 for the rest of the purchase price would be paid anyhow to reinburse present owners for damaged property. Let me say as a matter of cold fact, the few dollars we pay in the very least of the whole matter: the acquiring of the property, the making of it into a thing of beauty, and the handing of this gift to future generations, ought to be the uppermost thought in every Citizen's mind. It is an opportunity that it would be a tragedy to neglect. It is a privilege to be allowed to assist in the materializing of such an ideal dream.

With regard to the second objection, I may say we have some beautiful parks, but they are outlying, not immediately available to the present Citizens, not being sufficiently centrally located; but when our population reaches the 50,000 mark, they will be exceedingly valuable. But the Riverside Park would be the ideal spot for our generation.

As for the third objection, I may say we would scarcely notice it in our taxes, and since we have borne the very much heavier burdens of the war uncomplainingly, we believe the Citizens, on the whole, will bear this small additional burden without a thought.

I would say to the Citizens of Peterboro, again and again, re-iterating it with all the force of which I am capable.

"Preserve your water-front. It is your most valuable asset." On your action with regard to this By-law depends much more than you have thought. If we can preserve the river and lake-fronts for future generations, what a beautiful gift to hand down to them.

CLEMENCEAU NEXT FRENCH PRESIDENT

WILL LIKELY BE NO OPPOSITION TO THE "TIGER" OF FRANCE.

Paris, Dec. 27.— President Poincare's successor will be elected on January 17, according to the inference generally drawn by the Parisian press from Premier Clemenceau's statement in the Chamber that his Cabinet would definitely resign on that date. It is also deduced from the Premier's declaration that he will be a candidate for the presidency, which means that he will be elected virtually without opposition.

Speculation regarding "the Tiger's" successor as head of the Cabinet is consequently eclipsing discussion as to the next President of the Republic. Alexander Millerand, Governor of Alsace Lorraine, seems to have a great lead, so far as predictions are concerned. He is supposed to be M. Clemenceau's choice and should be the logical candidate in the Chamber of Deputies, since he was the leader of the coalition which gained a great victory in the elections. Rene Viviani, former Premier, is still mentionde among the reduced groups of the extreme left, including the Radicals and Socialists, but his weakness lies in the fact that he does not belong to any of the groups that composed he Republican combination in the elections.

M. Clemenceau's acceptance of the Presidency is so far taken for granted that gossip as to the next occupant of the Elysee Palace has been almost completely stifled.

With smiles and honeyed words the two ladies paused for a little chat. But their smiles hid hearts that hated.

After some moments the lady in the real fur coat said regretfully:

"Well, I must be going. I have to drop in and see my mother this morning."

The other seized this chance for a dig. Raising her lorgnette, she remarked with acid sweetness:

"Really! You don't mean to say you have a mother living?"

"Oh, yes," came the crushing retort. "My mother is still alive, and really, dear, she doesn't look a day older than you do."

Then, What Did She Say?

Wife—Tomorrow is the anniversary of our wedding day. What shall we do about it?

The Professor (absently)—I suppose we shall have to make the best of it.

THE KING UNCROWNED

His malady is peculiar to Ontario in a special manner. It is partly due to his religious environment and largely due to our system of education which, acting like a cement press, produces minds possessed of the depressing similarity and mediocrity of paving blocks. He is possessed of a nebulous desire to found a monumental state but is devoid of the fundamental rules of the sicultury, and without broad definite plan. If he does not secure another's blue-print his instruments are dull. The ill-defined desire to do some work of noble note possesses all his being, and in this maddish, sweetish contemplation he finds happiness. His decisions will be dangerously sincere for his vision does not range beyond the pasture lot and his light is lost in a quarter section. He is in danger of "walking out into the night," or of at least becoming hopelessly benighted before he walks far. Like Ulysses of old "it may be that the gulfs will wash him down," but yet he'll dare "to smite the sounding furrows to sail beyond the sunset and the bath of all the western stars."

And we voted for his party! And oh! we do wish that he were a real "Old Salt," could "cuss" a little, chew his "baccer," and take a "nip," but who, notwithstanding, can read the heavens take his soundings and know his definite course; who can fling his boom, jiboom and top-sail to the wind with all the confidence and broad science of the man who knows his calling, definite in all his plans and purposes.

We are sincere when we say we wish him well; but we are cautious too, and have cancelled all our risks on the Ship of State; for we fear she can never weather the surfs which will roll up from the east after Jan. 1st. Oh! pitiless designing federal men! Why did you open up these dikes? Oh! little Peter! we do wish you were at home in your safe warm bed! We hate to contemplate your struggle.

Mainly About People

One of the notable visitors to Paris this season is the ex-Empress Eugenie, widow of the late ex-Emperor Louis Napoleon, whose unstable throne was swept away by the German victories of 1870. He and his wife fled to England. He died at Chislehurst, Kent, in 1873, and his only son was killed in the Zulu war of 1879. The ex-empress, a widow still mourning the loss of her only child, has resided for some time in a chateau near Brussels. She is now 92 years of age, very frail and broken, with failing sight, and her visit to Paris was for the purpose of consulting an occulist.

During her stay in Paris she occupied a suite in a hotel, her windows overlooking the gardens of the Tuileries. From Paris she continued her journey to Cap Martin, where she has a country estate.

The two-year-old child of J. A Harding, who lives on the Gouin road, near Sillery, Que., died after eating a boxful of laxative pills.

Two large grain elevators at Edmonton belonging to the Western Canada Flour Co., were destroyed by fire and the loss is about $150,000.

The Knights of Columbus of Stratford, provided a Christmas Tree heavily provided with good things for the widows and orphans of soldiers.

Returned soldiers settled on the land numbered more than 23,000; nearly 20,000 were granted loans, totalling $52,000,000.

TERRIBLE EXPERIENCE OF SCHOONER'S CREW OFF COAST OF NEWFOUNDLAND

New Vessel Wrecked on Her Maiden Voyage—Dashed to PieCes on Rocks.

Charlottetown, Dec. 27.—Further details of the wrecking of the new schooner Barbara MacDonald, which was dashed to pieces on the rock-bound coast of Newfoundland, are available with the arrival of the shipwrecked crew at Cardigan, P.E.I.

The vessel left Cardigan on Dec. 5 with a cargo of produce for St. John's Nfld. At midnight on the 10th the north-west hurricane caught them when ten miles from Cape Pine. They hove to under foresail.

The wind increasing, they started to take in the one remaining sail when Capt. Thos. Whittle was swept overboard and drowned, and the sail blown to ribbons. This was in the morning. The captain's brother Joshua Whittle, the mate, took charge. For 52 hours the ice-encrusted vessel with decks swept clear of cargo, ran before the gale, often in a blinding snowstorm, under bare poles. They were out of sight of land and had to stall reckoning. The temperature rose, the wind fell, but a thick fog come on, and the vessel rolled in the trough of the mountainous seas. Finally sails were set, and she was headed for where the land was supposed to be, but at seven o'clock on the night of Sunday, the 14th, she crashed on the docks. With their boats demolished, Macdonald and the others hung by the ropes over the leeside of the shattered hulk for five hours, continuously drenched by breakers and expecting death in the surf every minute. At midnight a portion of the vessel's stern twisted off and drifted between them and the bank. Over this miraculous gangplank they dashed to the shore.

Overhead towered a perpendicular cliff, 350 feet high. The climb was a seven-hour nightmare, and it was not till daylight that they reached that summit, with bruised and bleeding limbs and tattered clothing, and saw far below fragments of what was once a thirty-thousand dollar vessel, with her fifteen-thousand dollar cargo. She came to grief on her maiden voyage, six weeks after her launching.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

Even Nighties Are Sold by This Drug Store.

"Oh, dear, I came off without my nightie? What in the world am I going to do?"

Repressing the natural and perfectly obvious reply—"Without"—the companion of the lady who has mislaid her sleeping apparel can now steer her right across the street from the Pennsylvania Station in New York and into the drug store of the Pennsylvania Hotel, where she will find a collection of lingerie warranted to make any woman miss her train.

Yes, they's stocking stockings 'n' everything in pharmacies these days! It's quite the fashion, and according to the reports which emanate from the corner drug store where such things are handled, business is booming.

It all started because of the usual feminine practice in forgetting things which are essential to the completion of one's toilet—gloves, hosiery, hair pins, veils and the more intimate garments which are usually pink and beribboned. If they were coming into New York, women would leave these on the train or, if going out, they would forget them until a few minutes before train time and then it was too late to obtain any in the station, in spite of the fact that the Pennsylvania Drug Co., made a practice of keeping on hand a small stock of hair pins and the like.

So, when the company decided to open a store in the Pennsylvania Hotel, Miss Woodruff who had had charge of several departments, gently intimated that she thought a special women's wear section would be a mighty good thing, provided it were handled in the proper manner.

"What's your estimate of the initial cost?" Miss Woodruff was asked.

"Oh somewhere in the neighborhood of $40,000," she replied casually.

When the smoke had cleared away, Miss Woodruff had permission to take over a space measuring 10 by 12 feet and to stock it according to her requirements. Decorated in French gray and ivory, with draperies of cretonne to add the necessary dash of color, the first pharmacy-undergarment store—truly a "combination" in the strictest sense of the word—was opened a few months ago, at a cost of $35,000. But the business has more than justified the initial outlay.

Not only in underwear, but in beaded bags and stockings and jewelry and other trinkets dear to the feminine heart does this tiny department do a really exceptional business—sales of $200 bags and other things in proportion being matters of almost daily occurence.

Hence the $35,000 which was used in preparing and stocking this little corner of the store is returning dividends of a very pleasing size.

Hardware Store Finds it Easy to Sell Salt.

A striking illustration of the advantages of advertising an article that seldom is advertised for the retail trade was afforded by Manager Elmer Worley, of the Worley Hardware Co., Reading, Pa.

A carload of salt was advertised, the sale to begin at noon. It was sold in three hours, all in small retail lots. Another carload could easily have been sold, if the Worley Co. had had it on hand.

Public Buys all Interest in Store

Not many months ago financing of retail merchandising business through public subscription to stock issues would have been a miserable failure, no matter how good the standing or how strong the security offered. The current year has seen the beginning of financing of big retail merchandising enterprises by the public, however, and the success with which these initial attempts have been received by the public indicate financing of such enterprises in the future on a much larger scale.

The Gladding Dry Goods Co., of Providence, R.I., established 153 years ago, recently tried out thet experiment. Half of its authorized capitalization of $1,000,000 was offered to public subscription, the proceeds going to expansion of the business and the addition of some 9000 square feet of floor space and the making of alterations to its present quarters.

Within twenty-four hours of the advertised opening of subscriptions for stock, all of it had been purchased and a large part of it was taken by its own customers. The company carries 13,212 charge accounts, its total uncollectable bills in the last ten years aggregate less than one-tenth of 1 per cent and it employs 239 persons. This information together with a brief history of the store and its social service work was all that was used in the advertisement offering the stock for sale.

Financing of established retail houses by public offering of stock rather than through the usual banking channels will undoubtedly become more popular when the experiment tried by the Gladding Co. becomes known.

"Rain Checks" for Bad Weather Trade.

Ever hear of a hardware store handing out rain checks? When the Swalm Hardware Co., of Pottsville, Pa., said it would do this people sat up and took notice, for the suggestion was something new, at least in these parts.

The Swalm Co. and the weather man have been at odds all fall, with rain on the job every time the store staged some special sale. The goods were on hand, the money had been spent for advertising and window trims, so the firm decided to go ahead and hold its merchandising events whether it rained or not. To bring out those who won't go anywhere save to the theatre or to a circus when it rains, "rain checks" were issued, and all those who bought on rainy day sales—which were distressingly frequent—were given slips good for ten cents on any dollar or every dollar's worth bought at the store at any time.

Now when it rains here, people wonder if they need anything at Swalm's.

Young's Display Cases Save Time and Steps.

In arranging his drug store, Thomas Young, of Pendleton, Ore., not only thought of the attraction power, but of the economy steps. In the main portion of his store he has no counters to walk behind and all merchandise there is in view of the patrons. His display cases are shoved back partly beneath the shelving and they have mirrors just above and back of them. These set off the merchandise and add a sparkle that pleases. Then one person, according to Mr. Young, can wait on twice as many people with everything opening toward the centre of the room.
